SOME DAY.

Some day my earthly house will fall,
I can not tell how soon 'twill be,
But this I know—my all in All
Has now in heaven a place for me,
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day the silver cord will break,
And I no more as now shall sing.
But, oh, the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the King!
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day, when fades the golden sun
Beneath the hazy-tinted west,
My blessed Lord shall say, "Well done,"
And I shall enter into rest.
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day: till then I'll watch and wait,
My lamp all trimmed and burning bright,
That when my Savior opes the gate
My soul to Him may wing its flight,
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

North Mississippi Conference Anniversary.

It was coincidental that at the close of a quarter-century the session of the North Mississippi Conference should be held at the same time and place of its first organization; therefore, it was deemed proper to celebrate the occasion with appropriate services. Accordingly, the anniversary was held in the Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., at seven P. M., Saturday, Nov. 30, 1895. The exercises were conducted by Rev. Amos Kendall, who preached an able and appropriate sermon from Psalm cxxvi, 3. After the opening prayer, which was offered by Rev. R. G. Porter, the following historical statement was read by the writer:

The North Mississippi Conference was organized at Water Valley, Miss., Nov. 30 1870, with Bishop D. S. Doggett presiding. Rev. John Barcroft was elected secretary, which office he worthily filled until his death in 1890. The assistant secretaries were: Rev. R. J. Jones, now of the Mississippi Conference, and S. A. Brown, since deceased. The Conference embraced territory formerly included in the Memphis, Mobile and Mississippi Conferences, and was composed of 113 clerical and 80 lay members. Of the clerical, this includes those received into full connection by transfer and re-admission. There were received on trial 14 and remaining on trial 7, making a total of 134 preachers connected with the Conference. Of these, 71 have died, 1 has been lost sight of, 62 are known to be living, of whom 29 are members of this Conference, 23 of other Conferences, and 1 is a Bishop, viz.: Chas. B. Galloway. Of the lay members, 21 are dead and 9 are living, two of whom are members of the present session, viz: O. J. Moore and J. B. Streater. Of the preachers above enumerated, there were 97 from the Memphis, 21 from the Mobile, and 16 from the Mississippi Conference. Of the lay members, there were from the Memphis Conference 19, Mobile 7, and Mississippi 4. We have the following aggregated statistics of ministerial relations during the past twenty-five years: Admitted on trial, 224; discontinued, 17; received into full connection, 189; by re-admission, 20; by transfer, 77; located, 48; died, 65; transferred, 127; expelled, 2. There were no re-admissions 13 years, none received by transfer 3 years, none discontinued 10 years, none located 6 years, none transferred 9 years. We have the following comparative statistics: Traveling preachers in 1870, 134; in 1895, 165. Local preachers in 1870, 190; in 1895, 146. Pastoral charges in 1870, 93; in 1895, 134. Church members in 1870 21,757; in 1895 43,545. Infants baptized in 1870, 746; in 1895 618. Adults baptized in 1870, 1,491; in 1895, 1,428. Sunday-schools in 1870, 200; in 1895, 465. Sunday-school teachers and scholars in 1870, 9,148; in 1895, 23,587. Conference collections in 1870, $1,757.25; in 1895, $2,899 69. Missionary collections in 1870, $1,486 05; in 1895, $9,870.01. Total number of baptisms in twenty-five years: Infant, 19,291; adult, 45,992.

The above statistics show gratifying advancement on most lines, but there are a few counts that should provoke serious reflection, especially those of local preachers and baptisms. Why, with a hundredfold increase of church members, should there be a decrease of local preachers and of infant baptisms? "Let the elders which are among us"—pastors, Sunday-school teachers and parents—answer.

We note with pleasure the increase of amounts raised on the collections, and this does not include more than $3,000 raised annually now for purposes not counted in 1870.

We thank God for the prosperity which he hath given unto us, and for the privilege of celebrating this twenty-fifth anniversary of our Conference history and work. We can heartily say, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." May his grace continue to abound unto us and to our children unto all generations!

G. W. BACHMAN.

In the Living Present.

New year! A time for retrospection, prospection, and inspection.

Not only does Paris contain a sect called Luciferians, advocating devil-worship, but now the news reaches us that there is also a numerous association of Essenes—unlike the Essenes of old—who combat the doctrine of the Trinity, and hold that there is only a duality obtained in the Deity. That duality is a masculine and feminine God. Said one of their priestesses recently: "We differ from the Catholics because we love Jesus and hate St. Paul, who was neither spiritual nor feminine. We adore the eternal, absolute and just God as father and mother of humanity. Our two Messiahs reflect the equality of sexes. Jesus came to teach us the divine law. Joan of Arc, our feminine savior, affirmed it."

Our lamented export of gold proves that our import of merchandise exceeds that of our exports. Nearly all the articles of luxury—our costly house furnishing, female attire, and the countless toys of our children—are of European manufacture. The gold is sent out to pay our debts.

The Evangelical Alliance sends out leaflets containing plans for a new movement. Local associations are to be formed for purposes of agitating (1) the awakening of conscience to matters of honesty, (2) closing the chasm between the church and workingmen, (3) prevention of competition, and waste in locating missions and churches.

D. C. Conden, chaplain of Congress, recently opened the session of that body with a prayer manifestly meant "for the galleries"—not for the ear of God, who said, "Vengeance is mine." Said the bellicose divine: "Let peace reign throughout our border; yet, may we be quick to resent anything like an insult to this, our nation." In case of actual carnage, that chaplain will likely be found among the commissary wagons.

The number of watchmen at the White House in Washington has been increased from four to twenty-seven. Is it fear of actual danger, or is it aping the expensive customs of European courts?

If the wealth of the United States could be realized and would be distributed among the inhabitants, each one would receive a thousand dollars. The total of our wealth has multiplied ninefold in forty years; but Great Britain is more opulent than our country. An equal division of its possessions would give to each inhabitant $1 800.

The Fourth Mission.

The receipts since the last publication in the ADVOCATE, Nov. 6, are: W. A. Stanton, Esq., $10; Mrs. D. T. S. West, $5; Rev. G. H. Galloway, $5, Rev. K. S. Enochs, $5; Rev. R. S. Bailey, $10; Rev. J. W. Tinnin, $10; Rev. M. H. Moore (additional), $5; Hon. W. G. Kearney, $5; collection at Annual Conference by Rev. F. M. Keen, $46 60; amount reported previously, $870.25; total amount collected and paid over to the Missionary Board, $976.85.

The Mississippi Annual Conference, at its session in Yazoo City, resolved to make D. J. B. Fearn its special missionary, and to make provision for his support independent of the regular assessment for missions. His expenses will be, according to the estimate of the Missionary Board, $550 per annum. A subscription was taken up during the session of the Conference amounting in cash and promises to $138 60. There are $73 still due on the original subscription. These friends and brethren would be helping on a blessed cause if they will pay up.

I append an extract of a letter recently received from Dr. Lambuth: "Pardon a line in high appreciation of the noble gift you have made in China. Your nephew, D. Fearn, grows upon me more and more. His godly life, earnest work and affectionate disposition have won him admirers and friends among foreigners and natives."

Such commendation is very gratifying to me, and I have no doubt it will be appreciated by those who have contributed of their means for D. Fearn's support. I hope that it will also encourage others in the Mississippi Conference, both ministers and laymen, to contribute liberally and cheerfully to keep him in China without calling upon any other source for his support.

Hindering the Pastor.

Some men who are not atheists, nor infidels, nor open enemies of religion, manage to hinder the pastor in his work. Some church members who never think of setting themselves against the progress of religion are so unfortunate as to stand in the way of the man who has been set over the congregation. There are often persons in the church who did not want this particular pastor appointed over them. They preferred another man.

It will be needful for such persons to watch over their actions and words, and even their thoughts, lest they hinder the pastor. If they could greet him cheerfully on his arrival, speak words of encouragement, and pray fervently in secret for his success, it would be a great blessing to him, and a still greater blessing to those who so deport themselves. No personal preferences or former opinions should be allowed to stand in the way of the pastor when once the appointment has been made. If one has honestly opposed the selection, and conscientiously sought to prevent the appointment from being made, he should yield his preferences when the case has been decided against him and be among the foremost to help make the labors of the pastor useful.

There are many ways in which men and women may hinder the pastor without intending it. By absenting one's self from the services of the sanctuary needlessly, by sitting listlessly and prayerlessly under the sermon, by holding back when some aggressive movement is organized, by withholding sympathy and encouragement from the minister, one may hinder more than he thinks. Unfavorable criticisms of the minister and his work will produce a disastrous effect.

These are times in which criticism is freely indulged. Critical tastes are being cultivated. The minister is heard by many critical auditors. His voice, manner, gestures, pronunciation, dress and appearance are all closely scrutinized. Every error in grammar, rhetoric, logic, history, science, theology or language, will be mercilessly criticised, as well as much that is not erroneous. It is too much to ask that all criticism should be withheld. But those who desire to promote religion will consider the pastor and not find fault foolishly. He may be a man whose educational advantages have been limited, but whose spiritual knowledge is deep and wide, in which case wise men will sit at his feet with interest and profit, notwithstanding certain errors in his speech.

The criticism which should be particularly avoided is that which touches the pastor's character. One who has heard something detrimental to his prudence or honesty may destroy his influence with some by whispering the story. One who thinks he observes some inconsistency, or want of sincerity, or lack of spirituality in the pastor, may hinder him effectually by mentioning it to others. If he wishes to be eminently successful in hindering the pastor, let him speak disparagingly of him in the presence of his own children. Too often parents who have conceived a prejudice against their pastor discuss his conduct, his failings, and his supposed inconsistency in the hearing of their children. There is no more certain way to close the door of their young hearts against the exhortations and appeals of the minister. Those parents are fortunate if the results of their imprudence do not go farther still and awaken a prejudice in the minds of their children against all ministers and the gospel and the church, and make infidels of them. Let them be sure that human nature and the devil will second the motion they are starting in those young hearts.

The amount of evil which will result from hindering the pastor is beyond conception. He comes to call sinners to repentance, to lead souls to Christ, to build up the kingdom of righteousness in the community. Whatever hinders him hinders the conversion of souls, and grieves the Holy Spirit. Let every Christian resolve not to hinder, but, by prayer, sympathy, and earnest co operation, to strengthen the hands of the pastor.—Christian Advocate, New York.

The Whole Truth.

It requires the utmost vigilance and integrity to speak the truth without reservation or equivocation. It takes the very finest character to meet the stern requisitions of the divine law upon this point. Lapses are frequent, and he may count himself happy who has not made some contribution to those facts which justify the generalization of the Psalmist. Love of, and loyalty to, the truth are among the rarest and richest virtues of the race.

Sometimes a preacher sends to the Advocate a report of his meeting: A hundred conversions, the church on fire, the whole community under conviction, the church crowded, and the streets thronged, the day of Pentecost duplicated, and the millennial morning about to dawn! All of which means that the preacher has had a moderately good meeting, and that he avails himself of the opportunity to advertise himself and to boom his charge. The old anecdote is in point here: A little boy told his father that he saw twenty-five dogs in the garden one morning before breakfast. But, when questioned and cross questioned, the little fellow was compelled very reluctantly to admit that he did see "our Dash and another dog." We have frequently known brethren to read and comment upon these rose colored reports, laughingly showing how certain statements ought to be modified, and how certain little imperfections had been delicately veiled. There is a vast difference between telling the truth and telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth. This is a nice discrimination which some ecclesiastical reporters have failed to make. A preacher is under just precisely the same obligations to tell the truth that others recognize. He is bound, like others, by the law of humility to state the facts about himself and his work as modestly as possible. He ought to know that merit and usefulness need no advertising. We are extremely glad to know that the vast majority of our brethren report their work in the most unexceptionable spirit and manner. These reports are edifying and comforting, and constitute bulletins fresh from the field, are hailed with eager interest and delight. But the brother with the brilliant magnifying imagination, and the pen so prolific of high-sounding phrases, needs a remorseless editor who knows how to translate rhetorical rodomontade into plain English, and to teach his contributors the significance and value of the maxim of Paul, who exhorted his disciples "to speak the truth in love."—Texas Christian Advocate.

A Parable.

The Phrenological Journal relates this parable:

Then shall the kingdom of Satan be likened unto a grain of tobacco seed, which, though exceeding small, being cast into the ground, grew, and became a great weed, and spread its leaves, rank and broad, so that huge and vile worms formed habitation thereon. And it came to pass that the sons of men looked upon this weed, and, the eyes of their understanding being darkened, thought it beautiful to look upon, and much to be desired to make youth of tender years look big and manly.

And moreover it came to pass that those who chewed thereof became weak and sick, and could not deliver themselves from the desire of having bits of it continually in their mouths, which aforetime had been clean and ruddy, but now became foul and black; and besides, the chewers were seized with a constant and violent spitting of unclean humors, and they did spit in all places, even in ladies' parlors, and in the courts of the Lord of Hosts. And the good and true, and all that led pure lives, were grievously plagued thereby. And it came to pass that men were dissatisfied with merely chewing the strange weed, but sought out curious and cunning devices for using it. Some, indeed, did make it into a fine powder and filled their nostrils therewith, and they were taken suddenly with fits, and they did snuff with great and mighty sneezes, insomuch that their eyes were filled with tears and their faces with wrinkles.

And yet others cunningly wrought the leaves thereof into rolls, and did set fire to one end thereof, and did suck vehemently at the other, and did look very grave and cast lines; and the smoke of their burning and sucking ascended up forever and forever. And there were men whose wisdom, being that of the fox, beholding the multitude which did chew, and smoke and snuff, said among themselves, "Come, let us plant, and water and increase the production of this weed, whose name is tobacco, for therein is a mighty and increasing business;" and they did so, and the merchandise waxed rich in the commerce thereof.

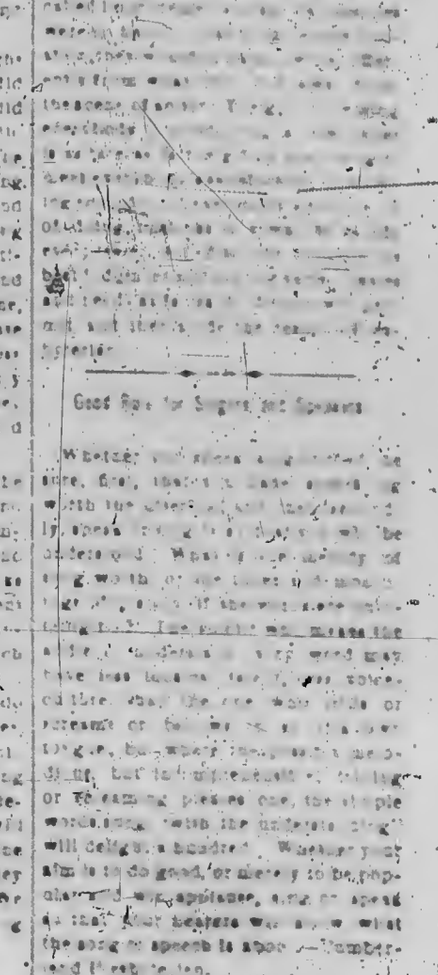
And it came to pass that even the saints of the Most High became the servants to the weed, and defiled themselves therewith; even the poor, who said they could not pay rent and buy food for their wives and little ones, spent their substance therefor. And the anger of the Lord was kindled by such great wickedness, and he said, "Wherefore this waste? And why do these little ones lack bread and shoes and books? Turn now your hands to corn and wheat, and cast the evil thing far from you and be separate, and defile not yourselves any more, and I will bless you, and cause my face to shine upon you." But with one accord they raised their voices and exclaimed, "We can not cease from chewing, snuffing and puffing; we are slaves."

Encourage Your Pastor.

There is no person so young or so busy as not to be able to undertake one very useful branch of Christian effort—that of going regularly to church. There is a higher motive for church going than that of encouraging the pastor. The first object is to worship God and learn of him. But it is quite conceivable that under certain circumstances the worship of God and learning from God might be carried on at home, and yet it might be better service to attend the sanctuary, simply for the comfort and encouragement it would give the pastor. If I say that he does not inspire you to rise toward God—that you are more conscious of the divine presence and blessing in your closet—I am mind; there are those whom he can help if he is not too much discouraged by your absence and that of others who feel as you do. Perhaps the thought of you in writing his sermon and seeing your place empty [illegible] wings of his soul seem to be weighted with lead. He can not [illegible] upward bearing his people with him. Don't let little things keep you away from church. Encourage your pastor and his people too. By being always in your place. That is a true form of Christian [illegible].—Exchange.

Running a Newspaper.

It is wonderful how many persons think they can "run" a newspaper and how free they are in their advice as to how this and that department should be conducted. The ideas of those who have had no experience, either in newspaper management or editorship, are as variant and conflicting as experience can make them. One suggests an alteration in one direction, another has him a hundred antecedents; a second calls for the introduction of a feature which would bring a [illegible] scores of readers by the next mail; a third proposes an addition which would increase expenses without material advantage; a fourth urges a new department that would give him room to air certain opinions without bringing in any remuneration to proportion to the money outlay; a fifth desires an additional page or column devoted to some hobby which, while dear to him, would not interest the average reader, and a sixth wants space to treat at length a particular subject, which the editor, in deference to the wishes and demands of his constituency, generally



WORK FOR THE WILLING HAND.

BY MRS. C. U. BUCHANAN.

Have you no service found?
Oh, why should you idle stand,
With the dying all around?
There is work for the willing hand!

Oh, list to the soft, sweet tones
Of the Master's pleading call
To the willing, not idle ones:
There is service for one and all.

Ere the ripening grain will spoil,
Oh, haste to the harvest field!
And there, amid love's sweet toil,
The golden sickle wield.

Oh, list to the reapers' refrain,
Whereof we all may partake,
As they gather the golden grain
To garner for the Master's sake.

In the field with the Master's smile
To brighten the harvest land,
And music the hours to beguile,
There is work for the willing hand.

Bro J. A Parker, D. D., and His New Code Again.

I see quite a lengthy article from my good Bro. Parker in the ADVOCATE, of Dec. 5, in reply to Bro. Davies, Sister Montgomery and myself, and I must confess greater surprise than at his first article, for he not only fails to comprehend, but also misrepresents me. He says, "Bro. Miller is too fond of analogies; he follows them too far—e. g.: After building up an argument in favor of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits, he turns to demolish it by a succession of analogies."

I want Bro. Parker to read my article again, and if he can not understand it get some one to explain it, so he may understand what I did say. I did not even refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons, and hence did not build up any argument or even refer to unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits. I said the Woman's Missionary Society was a legitimate organization authorized by the church, and that they had a right to hold their services in our churches, and no one would refuse them the right, but would be glad for them to hold their services in any of our churches.

Now, Bro. Parker, I know you have gotten yourself in trouble by taking the wrong side; but don't misrepresent me to try to get out of your trouble. Just own up like a good fellow, and come down from your false position gotten upon through error.

And I must still express surprise that he can not see any difference between the Seashore and Palmer Camp Ground affairs. At one a lady was invited to deliver an address under the direction and control of a presiding elder, and subject to his direction, not to preach, but to address the people probably on the subject of missions. At the other a woman was invited by a young man, not even a member of the Annual Conference, to take control and conduct the preaching services of a camp meeting, not under the direction of the proper authority, but in spite of the legally constituted authority. A young man on trial in the Conference riding rough-shod over the advice of the presiding elder and one of the oldest and ablest Bishops of the church! What does it mean? And yet Bro. Parker rises up to defend him. What effect must this have on other young brethren? Now, I believe the young brother to be a good young man, and that he will be useful if he can be kept in the proper bounds; but he ought to gladly and willingly sit at the feet of such men as Bishop Keener and his presiding elder, and learn of them. Just think of it! A lady without any authority or license announces that she will come into the bounds of one of our districts and conduct and control the services of one of our camp meetings after the presiding elder had said he would be on hand to conduct the services, and the pastor, a young man, not even a member of the Conference, urging her right to do so. And then such men as Bro. Parker rising up to defend them both, and comparing it to other cases. There never has been such a case in the history of the church, Bro. Parker, and I hope never will be again.

My dear brother, you drew your bow at a venture and missed your mark. You said the horse was sixteen hands high, but when you find that you can stand astride him with three feet legs, and both touch the ground, you ought to come down. You ought to take it all back. We'll forgive you.

Brother, our church is like a great piece of machinery, with big wheels and little wheels, and the little wheels can not move a peg while in the machine without the direction of the big wheel, and the big wheel can't move without the man at the throttle. Now, suppose the little wheel should desire to run contrary to the big wheel or the man at the throttle, what would be the result? Why, of course, it would have to break one of the running gear, and then there would be no force behind it to run it. So the Methodist Church is a wheel in a wheel, and there must be harmony, and if there is not, there will be great confusion and danger to the machinery. Suppose a general commanding an army should say to one of his officers: "I want you to take your brigade and hold a certain fort;" but he, the under officer, should say: "No; I am going to take another kind of soldiers. I want a brigade of ladies;" but the general says, "No; we do not use ladies in the army, or in this department;" but he, the under officer persists—what would be the result?—confusion and the under officer would lose his head.

Now, our church is a great army, and has its different departments and fields of work, and the Bishops are the leading generals; then we have next presiding elders, preachers in charge, local preachers, stewards, trustees, class leaders, etc. Now, suppose the trustee should say, "I want a circus show in the church-house;" but the preacher in charge says, "No; we do not allow such things in our churches;" but the trustee says, "The law says nothing about shows;" but the preacher contends, and says, "The church has been set apart from all unholy purposes;" but the trustee says, "Well, I do not see any harm in it, and the law does not say there shall not be a show in the church, and hence I am going to have one"—what would be the result? If the preacher knew his business, that trustee would apologize or lose his head at the next quarterly meeting.

Well, suppose a preacher in charge should decide to have Bro. So-and-so to hold a meeting for him, and the presiding elder should advise him not to do it, as the brother has no license to preach; but the brother persists, and say, the Discipline does not forbid it; and nothing can be implied or inferred (it must be in the Discipline in so many words, or it is not law), so I will get him—what would be the result? Confusion, and the presiding elder would have the right to remove him from his work, and he ought. I am glad the General Conference lodges the authority where it does, and it will be a sad day for Methodism when every young man, no matter how good, shall have full and unrestrained control of the churches and pulpits in his charge; but it will never be.

Now, we are all under law—Bishops, presiding elders, preachers in charge, lower officers, and laymen—all under law, and subject to the powers that be, every man subject to his superiors in office, and there is only one way to get out from under law, and that is to get out of the church; and when I get so I am not willing to be subject to the wisdom and direction of the Bishops and presiding elders, I am going to get out.

A. D. MILLER.

Why I Located.

I am constrained to tell my friends and brethren why I located at our Conference in Yazoo City. It was because God calls me into the evangelistic work. Simply this, and this alone. I love everybody, but especially my brethren of the ministry. I love them fervently out of a pure heart. I have no grievances or complaints. I am glad I was sent to Providence circuit, and would gladly have returned to those dear people. I have ever been a loyal Methodist preacher, gladly obeying those in authority over me. I love our doctrines and Discipline. I have always received my appointments with joy, gone to them without a murmur, and have been thankful for a place among my brethren to preach Christ. I have never asked any favors of the Bishops or presiding elders. It has been my rule to pray the Lord to send me where he would have me go; then I have received my appointment from him alone. I believe God has permitted men to do certain things, but they have always been blessings to me and others (vide Gen. i, 20; Rom. viii, 28).

Since God gave me the experience of entire sanctification I have had no ambition for place, or popularity, or big appointments, but, with a single eye, I have diligently labored and prayed for the salvation of sinners, the sanctification of believers, and, with toil and tears, sought and fed the flock of Christ, that I might both save my own soul and those to whom I preached. I love the pastorate, and have had success in it; have always had good revivals, and, with rare exception, brought up all my collections; and it has been a great trial for me to give up pastoral work, and nothing but the clear and distinct call of God to the evangelistic work could have induced me to locate. This call has been upon me for fourteen years—ever since God gave me the experience of entire sanctification—and the reason why I have not continued in it was because my brethren thought I ought to be in the pastorate, and I wanted to be loyal to them. But now, after waiting for years in earnest prayer, God has convinced me by his Holy Spirit, and in many providential ways, that I should wait no longer, and confer no more with men, but go out at once into the evangelistic field. So I located, as the local ministry is the only way open to me in my church to be an evangelist. I know many would do away with the evangelist, and say no Methodist preacher has any right to become an evangelist, because our General Conference has not legalized it; but I see in the Scriptures that God calls some to be evangelists (see Eph. iv, 11, 12; I. Cor. xii, 28; Acts xxi, 8, 9), and then I do not believe in human infallibility, but that Christ alone has supreme authority over his church. But I believe the day is not far off when our church will recognize the scriptural order of evangelists.

I was born, baptized and bred in the Methodist Church; expect always to live in it, die in it, and be buried by a Methodist preacher. I love our church, and am loyal to it. I have lived and labored for it; I believe and preach its doctrines, and never expect to be anything but a Methodist preacher. I covet the love and prayers of all my brethren. My home will be in Meridian, Miss. W. W. HOPPER.

Mrs Snell's Work.

For some time I've been reading the criticisms, etc., on Mrs. Snell's work by different brethren, and hoping some minister would act the part of the wise town-clerk in Acts xix, 33 41. What a noble man and capable officer he was to quiet the disturbance on that memorable occasion! And, right "in the nick of time," here comes Bro. Drake, and says exactly the right thing. You can always depend on his moral support in every good cause.

Have the brethren forgotten the example of Susannah Wesley, the mother and trainer of our peerless John and Charles Wesley? Or what is the matter with them? A Presbyterian sister says Mrs. Snell did more good in her town than any evangelist who ever visited it. I have attended Mrs. Snell's services at different places, and never without spiritual pleasure and profit. Some of her grandest work is done within prison walls; and when a woman can thus reach the hearts of State convicts with the gospel of truth, it is plain that—in the language of the like-gifted Mrs. Barney, of Rhode Island—she "has her commission from a higher source" than any Conference or body of men.

"Let us have peace," and encourage every Mrs. Snell the good Lord sees fit to send us. And let us pray daily that God will so "move on the hearts" of the "English nobility" that more of their number may emulate that noblest type of sublime and heroic womanhood, Lady Henry Somerset, in her grand work for Christ and humanity. Strange that men can believe our blessed Savior was born of a woman, yet consider it sacrilegious for her, in love and gratitude, to win perishing souls for him. KITTY CANDOR.

On Saturday afternoon, Nov. 30, at 2:30 o'clock, a women's meeting was held in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, of Water Valley, for the furtherance and strengthening of the two departments of woman's work instituted by the M. E. Church, South. Both departments of work were represented by Conference officers. Mrs. J. B. Stone, president of Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and Mrs. M. J. Collier, district secretary of Grenada district, were present; also Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, president of Conference Women's Missionary Society; Mrs. S. M. Thames, vice-president, and Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, secretary of the Grenada district. The meeting was honored by the presence of Rev. W. B. Burke, of Song Kong, China, husband of our own Addie Gordon, who was sent out by the North Mississippi Conference Missionary Society in 1887.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. Hargrove with a Bible lesson from Phil. ii, 1-16. Mrs. Hargrove called attention to the lessons of unity and self-denying service so beautifully taught in the lesson read, and urged their practice in this woman's work for her Lord, insisting that only as these virtues are exemplified in our societies will success attend our efforts, and our offerings and labor be acceptable unto God. Mrs. Stone followed in a very strong paper on the Parsonage and Home Mission work of our Conference, explaining the design of and need for this department of woman's work, giving an account of what it has already accomplished in North Mississippi, and urging its claims upon the women of our church. She emphasized the home mission feature of this work, and earnestly desired to see greater zeal and interest manifested on the part of our women, and new societies organized in many charges. Mrs. Collier, district secretary of Grenada district, getting in late on account of a delayed train, no report was made of P. and H. M. work in Grenada district.

The work of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was then taken up, and Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, district secretary of Grenada district, made an earnest talk, revealing a heart filled with love for the cause of missions, and fired with a strong desire to see the work grow in her district. She called a short conference of the women of the Grenada district, who were present in the audience, at the close of the meeting to discuss some plans for advancing the work in the district.

Mrs. Hargrove then introduced Rev. W. B. Burke, who entertained and instructed his audience for nearly an hour, giving a most encouraging report of the work of the Women's Board of Missions in China, and presenting the condition and needs of the women of China most forcibly. Bro. Burke stressed the importance and success of the day-schools conducted by our missionaries, and showed that in these day-schools largely were the coming Christian congregations of our Chinese churches. He drew most touching pictures of the superstition and degradation of the women of China, but said he knew them to be capable of understanding the religion of Christ and of exemplifying it in their homes and lives. Bro. Burke's talk was most instructive and encouraging, and not a woman in his audience could but be more interested in the cause of missions, and more desirous of doing active service therein. Bro. Burke had with him quite a collection of Chinese curiosities, which he kindly explained to a number who remained for that purpose after the meeting adjourned.

The audience at this women's meeting represented every section of our Conference, and the knowledge received and zeal imparted can but be productive of good to the woman's work in North Mississippi.

Ministerial Sympathy.

Some of the dear sisters who have been blessed with pastors who took a deep interest in every branch of church work are wondering, at this beginning of a new Conference year, whether the new preacher will give equal encouragement and sympathy. Take it for granted he will, and this confidence will be a help to him. Our North Mississippi Conference P. and H. M. S. is very fortunate in this respect, for our preachers, as a rule, have stood squarely by the women in their efforts to accomplish the task the church has put upon them, and our success is due, in some measure, to this support of the brethren.

It may be that there are a few preachers who seem indifferent to the cause; but I think you will find that it is only those who have failed to inform themselves on the subject, and who do not realize what the society is doing and what it has already accomplished. A little good-natured explanation will make it clear to them; and, sisters, do not merely tell them, but prove to them, by faithful work on the part of the visiting committees and in other ways, what an invaluable help to the pastor this society can be made.

As to those brethren who are so disconsolate as to make no reply to letters from district secretaries and other officers, I hardly know what to say; but let us judge them as charitably as we can. Give them the benefit of every doubt, and imagine any reason for their neglect but that they are indifferent to an organization that was established mainly for the benefit of preachers and their families.

When the General Conference organized the P. and H. M. S. for a very needful work that it seemed none but women could do, it seemed to try to make it as easy as possible for us. It shielded us with the fostering wing of the Board of Church Extension, and, in effect, it promised us the support and encouragement of the preachers. We, therefore, have a right to expect this help, and we generally get it. So, let us feel sure that "the new minister" will stand by us, as did his predecessor; but, in our zeal for our society, do not let us forget our duty to him, nor be too exacting in our demands. Let the help be mutual.

BABY ROLL.

The Macon Auxiliary of North Mississippi Conference Society has commenced a Baby Roll with the following names (the list would have been longer but for the lack of time to see the mothers): Charles Leonard Jones, Nellie Minor Smith, Spratley Garland Jones, Charles Hardin Murphey.

I should be the veriest shallow and self-conceited blockhead upon the footstool if, in my discharge of the duties that are put upon me in this place, I should hope to get along without the wisdom that comes from God, and not from men.—Abraham Lincoln.

Have you learned the lesson of yesterday, or the infinite meaning of to-day? It has duties of its own; they can not be left until to-morrow. To-morrow will bring its own work.—F. W. Robertson.

Selections.

The Religion We Want.

We want a religion that bears heavily, not only on the "exceeding sinfulness of sin," but on the exceeding rascality of lying and stealing—a religion that banishes small measures from the counter, smell baskets from the stall, pebbles from the cotton bags, clay from the paper, sand from sugar, chicory from coffee, alum from bread, and water from the milk cans. The religion that is to save the world will not put all the big strawberries at the top and all the little ones at the bottom. It will not make one-half pair of shoes of good leather and the other half of poor leather, so that the first shall redound to the maker's credit and the second to his cash. It will not put Jouvin's stamp on Jenkins' kid gloves, nor make Paris bonnets in the back room of a Boston milliner's shop; nor let a piece of velvet that professes to measure twelve yards come to an untimely end in the tenth, or a spool of sewing-silk that vouches for twenty yards be nipped in bud at fourteen and a-half; nor all-wool delaines, nor all-linen handkerchiefs be amalgamated with clandestine cotton; nor coats made of old rags pressed together be sold to the unsuspecting public for legal broadcloth. It does not put bricks at five dollars per thousand into chimneys it contracts to build of seven-dollar material; nor smuggle white pine into floors that have paid for hard pine; nor leave yawning cracks in closets where boards ought to join; nor daub the ceilings that ought to be smoothly plastered; nor make window blinds with slats that can not stand the wind, and paint that can not stand the sun, and fastenings that may be looked at, but are on no account to be touched. The religion that is going to sanctify the world pays its debts. It looks on a man who has failed in trade, and who continues to live in luxury, as a thief.—The (Boston) Christian.

He who lacks the pleasure-giving spirit becomes selfish, and is liable to become hoarish. We are to please others and to seek to make them happy. But there is danger, in carrying out this laudable ambition, of forgetting the demands of truth and righteousness. The eager desire to be popular and to prophesy smooth things may so grow upon one that he may lower the standard of the Master, and fail in proper rebuke, admonition and instruction. Upon this practical subject the Christian Inquirer makes the following discriminating remarks: "The desire to afford pleasure to men is a laudable one, but needs to be watched lest it should overstep the limits of righteousness and make us untrue to the interests of men and to the cause of Christ. It is better really to serve men than it is to please them. He is really the best friend of men who pleases Christ in his treatment of man, and not he who pleases men. Approaching him once, and hoping to placate his favor, one came to him saying, 'We know that thou art true, and carest for no men, for thou regardest not the person of men.' He did care for men—yes, for men—but not much for the opinions of men; and he cared the more truly for man because he was not seeking to please men, certainly not in that fashion in which many seek to please men, who are all the time seeking to serve themselves of men. 'Thou dost not look into the faces of men, watching to see what they will approve, and saying and doing the things which will win their cheer or their following.' On the other hand, there is no evidence that we are either pleasing God or serving men when we provoke them to anger even with good things. Truthfulness to the gospel may arouse the anger of men, so may also an utterly un-gospel spirit in presenting the gospel stir up the evil of men. A rough, bristling, sharp Christianity may do good—yes, in spite of its roughness and sharpness—but not necessarily on account of its roughness."—Presbyterian.

Men regard outward conditions as of principal importance for the attainment of success in life. But the truth is, that the greatest factor of success is the spirit that animates a man's efforts and guides his mind. If men were half as concerned to attain the right attitude of heart, will and intellect in their undertakings as they are to see that outward circumstances are favorable, they would far oftener be successful than they are. It is the courage, the patience, the faith that men bring to their endeavors in life that tell for success. If the inward man is keyed up to the right pitch, no matter how discouraging outward conditions may be, success is possible. It is the distinguishing feature of the Christian religion that it gives proper consideration to the subjective or spiritual conditions of successful living, as well as to material and outward conditions.—Methodist Recorder.

The Other Side.

We often have complaint about coolness and neglect on the part of church people towards strangers within their gates. We fear there is too much truth in these charges, and that many good brethren are culpably negligent herein, and that their churches lose, in consequence, in popular esteem. But, on the other hand, is not the visiting stranger often at fault? An exchange gives the following:

'A story is told of a gentleman who attended church irregularly, and when he did go he occupied a seat near the door. No sooner was the benediction pronounced than he hurried away, speaking to no one and giving no one a chance to speak to him. Meeting a friend who did not attend church at all, he gave it as his opinion that this was the coldest church he ever saw. He declared that he had attended it for a year, and no one had spoken to him. Soon this fact was noised abroad, and the reputation of the church began to suffer. This unworthy brother saw what he had done and felt ashamed. He decided to change his course and try to mend the mischief he had wrought. Going to the church early, he found a seat well forward, and remained after the benediction. To his exceeding delight many grasped his hand, assured him that they were delighted to see him, and the pastor said he had seen his face often in the congregation and wished to know him, took his name and street, and promised to call. He had now a new song to sing."

What is Life?

The mere lapse of years is not life. To eat, and drink, and sleep, to be exposed to the darkness and to light, to pace round in the mill of habit and turn thought into an implement of trade, this is not life. In all this but a poor fraction of the consciousness of humanity is awakened, and the sensities still slumber which make life worth the while. Knowledge, truth, love, beauty, goodness, alone can give vitality to the mechanism of existence. The laugh of mirth that vibrates through the heart, the tears that freshen the dry wastes within, the music that brings childhood back, the prayer that calls the future near, the doubt that makes us meditate, the hardship that forces us to struggle, the anxiety that ends in trust, are the true nourishment of our natural being.

One Way of Helping Yourself.

One of the best ways of helping yourself is by being helpful to others. If you are especially burdened, help some other troubled and anxious one to carry his heavy load, and your own heart will be lightened. Few of us are so badly off that we can not find others more unfortunate to whom we can render assistance and give comfort. The brightest objects are those that reflect the sunshine; those have most light who give most light and cheer to others. God helps those who help themselves, but he especially delights to help those who are helpful to others. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."—Northern Christian Advocate.

Mr. John Cameron, of Canada, in a recent paper upon "The Pulpit and the Press," made the telling remark: "Pessimism is of the devil. Optimism is of God. Optimism is hope, and hope is healing." Both ministers and religious editors should be optimistic in the best sense of that word. They ought to look at the bright or hopeful side of things. Christianity puts hopefulness into the soul. It is Satan who seeks to discourage the Christian worker. It is God who awakens cheer and expectation. Christianity is a religion of encouragement and joy. Grace lifts out of despondency and despair. A religion of hope and assurance is what the world most needs, and it is found alone in him who died and rose for human elevation and redemption.—Exchange.

The tender words and loving deeds which we scatter for the hearts which are nearest to us are immortal seed, which will spring up in everlasting beauty, not only in our own lives, but also in the lives of those born after us.—Spurgeon.

It may be truly said that no man does any work perfectly who does not enjoy his work. Joy in one's work is the consummate tool without which the work may be done indeed, but without its finest perfection.—Phillips Brooks.

It is a high, solemn, almost awful thought for every individual man that his earthly influence, which has had a commencement, will never, through all ages, were he the very meanest of us, have an end.—Carlyle.

It is by studying little things that we attain the great art of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible.—Johnson.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., Dec. 26, 1895: "I have entered upon my second year's work at this place with good prospects. On last Sunday evening we received three persons into the church. The 'Come-outers' are in our town, holding a meeting in the public school-house. They have but a small following. I shall do my best to put the ADVOCATE in every family of my congregation. May God bless all in our new year's work."

Rev. C. McDonald, Morton, Miss., Dec. 25, 1895: "We moved into the parsonage here on the eighteenth instant. We are comfortably fixed and ready for a good year's work. Last Sabbath, at Forest, Rev. W. W. Simmons preached for us at 11 A. M., and Rev. W. W. Cammack preached at 7 P. M. It was a good day. Rev. Dan Scarborough came here from Meridian on the twenty-fourth instant. He has been down with typhoid fever for six weeks. He has been free from fever a few days and stood the trip here well, and the prospect is that he will be able for work soon. His friends here are glad to minister to his wants."

Rev. J. T. Howell, P. C., West, Miss., Dec. 26, 1895: "I have not missed a number of the ADVOCATE, although you had to change my address. We have been kindly and generously received in our new charge. When we arrived the good women were preparing for our coming, and a good brother met wife and children at depot with conveyance. Shortly after our arrival we were invited into the dining-room, where we found a table heavily laden with good things tempting to our willing appetites, and we haven't had anything to buy for the larder since we came two weeks ago. I don't know how much longer it will last. There was plenty on the table at dinner, and the good wife hasn't said anything about buying anything. (And she generally lets me know in time.) So I suppose there is some left yet. We feel encouraged, and hope for a prosperous year. We want to do the best year's work we have ever done for the Master. Received the Bibles O. K., and are charmed with them."

Rev. J. W. Treadwell, Guntown, Miss., Dec. 28, 1895: "We reached our new appointment, Guntown circuit, on Dec. 11, after a stay of four years with the good people of Sturgis charge. We received a hearty welcome as usual, and have begun our work with new zeal and energy. Bro. Orr, of the H. R. P. Church, has just closed a series of sermons in our town which has been very beneficial to all. We have had 12 conversions during the meeting. Our town and country has been greatly blest. He preaches with power, and seeks the salvation of the lost. He is broad in his views and full of the Holy Ghost. May the blessings of God attend his labors! We have found a good people on Guntown circuit, and they appreciate their pastors. The brethren who have preceded us have been sowing good seed, and we are reaping a bountiful harvest, and pray that we may be able to continue the good work. We found a very comfortable parsonage, and the W. P. and H. M. Society of Guntown has removed the old stove which was badly worn and replaced it with a new No. 8, which is large enough for a Methodist preachers' family. We expect to paint the parsonage soon. Well, as we had to move, we are glad that we have entered a field where our pastors that preceded us were good, faithful, successful workers in the cause of Christ. (This has always been our lot.) We appreciate their labors and all the conveniences they have left for us to enjoy. We do not follow to criticise any of their works, but to continue to build up the cause for which they prayed, preached and labored for in the name of our Master. God bless them in their new fields of labor!"

Rev. C. W. Perkins, Pleasanton, Texas, Dec. 18: "Knowing that my many friends in the North Mississippi Conference would be glad to hear from me, I will take this occasion to write you. I did not expect to transfer until Conference, but, owing to sickness, Bro. H. T. Cunningham wanted to transfer to North Mississippi the first of August; so he wrote to me in regard to the matter, and the exchange was made the first of September. I took charge of Sherman Street Church, San Antonio, and he the Tyro circuit. I held a revival while at Sharman Street, which resulted in 15 conversions and 10 additions. We did not reach the number of unconverted I had hoped for, but it was a great blessing to the church in lifting is to a higher plane of Christian living, and helped me wonderfully it raising the finances of the church. Ninety per cent. of the Conference collections was paid, and, to count the poundings we received, my salary was paid in full for that quarter. I have never met better women anywhere than we have at Sherman Street. The men there are far behind in church work. As they had no parsonage there, and the church heavily in debt, they could not support a man with a family; so we were sent to Pleasanton which is the county site of Atascosa, and is located 35 miles southeast of San Antonio. We have a nice little parsonage here, very well furnished with three regular appointments: Pleasanton, Cambelton, and Fairview. This is the first circuit that I have served that was entirely out of debt. This is the sandy region. There is most too much sand at Pleasanton, and nine miles of the road between here and San Antonio is nothing but sand, but east, west and south it is as pretty a country as I ever saw, and very rich and level. It is principally a stock country, but there is considerable farming done. If they could get rain when they need it, they could not gather the crops. The soil is a sandy loam, very easy to cultivate. Crops do not fail here half as much as some think. I dined with a brother, Sunday, who had farmed in Tennessee and Mississippi, and has been here twenty years, and only made one total failure. To take it on an average, he makes as much here as he did in Tennessee or Mississippi. A man can cultivate so much more land here, and the seasons are such they always save all they make. Everything is run on a large scale out here. People talk about thousands of acres like we do in Mississippi about hundreds. They talk about traveling 50 or 100 miles like we do about 5 or 10. When they plow here they use from two to four horses. They are breaking the land now for a crop, and I have not seen a single plough running—all double and triple. When they have they hitch one team to two and sometimes three wagons, and pull heavy loads. They usually have six horses in one team. I am surprised to find so many good, religious people out here. Why, last Sunday at Fairview, we had a regular old shouting camp-meeting Mississippi time. I actually forgot that I was in Texas, and praised the Lord with all the fervency of a Mississippian. I called for penitents, and eight came and knelt for prayer. In point of health I do not think this country can be excelled. We have only had three small frosts. We have more clear, pretty weather here than any place that I have seen. People out here grumble about the weather whenever the sun does not shine."

The Cultivation of the Civic Virtues.

The Christian owes a double allegiance. He is a citizen of the earthly as well as of the heavenly kingdom. To the lower as well as to the higher allegiance he owes a duty. So long as we are of the earth, earthy, attention must be given to our secular relations and obligations. Attention to the divine side will not discharge the duties on the human side. The true Christian must meet his obligations in the lower as well as the higher sphere. Politics and business may be corrupt; all the more they need the presence and influence of good men. The State is divinely ordained and stands next in obligation to the church. They are both ordained by one Lord. It is a mistaken notion that the State and politics belong to the domain of evil. God should rule in the State as in the church; but he will not, if good men play the coward and run from duty. The State not less than the church was built by a Divine Hand. You were born in the State, and there are to receive an important part of your education and development. To vote, pay taxes, and aid in maintaining good order, is as much the duty of a Christian as to pray and read the Bible. It is a sad thing to hear a Christian say he has no interest in the contests of parties and the success of politics. He ought to be interested. Good men ought to be the salt of political society. When they become too good to act therein, they ought to be taken to heaven. They have not the stuff of which martyrs are made. "It is a great thing to be a citizen of this country, and the privilege has corresponding obligations," are the wise words of ex-President Harrison, to which good men of all parties will surely assent. To the obligation thus imposed no Christian man should prove recreant. He certainly has a duty here.

The neglect of political duties by young men, especially those of the better class, is a bad sign. They should learn to be true in the line of political duty no less than in that of religion. The forces of evil are abroad, and many of the battles of modern society are to be fought in the State; and we can hope for a favorable issue only as good men join hands and fight the enemy on his chosen field. Evil can never overcome so long as the friends of virtue are united and courageous.—Zion's Herald.

The pastor who would succeed should make himself solid with his people by entering into all their joys as well as their sorrows. He should be bright, cheerful, sympathetic and responsive. He should make them feel that he is their friend and helper. His presence should carry sunshine wherever he goes. He should magnify the good side more than the bad side of his congregation, and see more to praise than to blame. He should treat rich and poor, old and young, in such a way that they shall confide in him and cooperate with him. A minister thus in touch with all classes in his charge will not only win favor, but find increasing opportunities for usefulness both in and out of the pulpit.—Presbyterian.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED.

Any lady or gentleman who desires a good business education and a good position should write for free catalogue of Draughon's Practical Business College, Nashville, Tenn. This College guarantees positions under reasonable conditions, and will allow students to deposit money for tuition in a bank until position is secured. It is strongly endorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers, and others.

Has no vacation; students enter any time. Board $10.00. It pays part of railroad fare. Four weeks by Prof. Draughon's method of teaching book-keeping is equal to twelve weeks by the old plan.

HOME STUDY.

He has prepared books on book-keeping shorthand and penmanship, especially adapted to home study. Address, stating your wants, J. F. Draughon, President, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

The children of Israel had need of memorial pillars. Forgetful as they were, they needed something more lasting than their feeble memories to keep before them the goodness and omnipotence of God. And so do we. Without our memorials—our Sabbaths, our churches, our Bibles—how soon would the world forget that the Lord is mighty! How soon would his own people forget that the Lord is good!—Exchange.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

Our Premium Offer.

Rev. W. C. Black, New Orleans—

DEAR BROTHER: The Bible received yesterday. I am delighted with it. Think it is very cheap. Every Sunday-school teacher ought to have one.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN A. GUICE.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 14, 1895.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to January, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Rubbed off in the wash, you see. But the wonder is that any buttons at all are left on, when you grind them up so against a washboard. It isn't necessary, if you wash with Pearline.

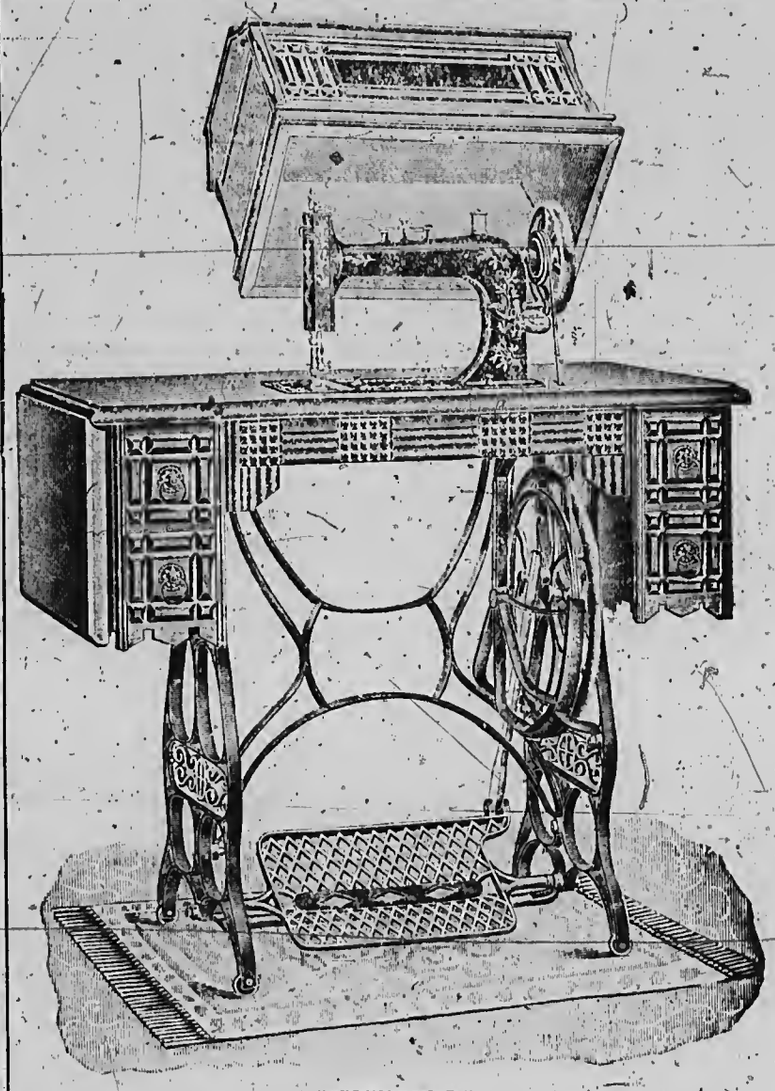
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER, which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short plate and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

"Thy Kingdom Come."

How oft in uttering forms of prayer do we fail to understand the full significance of the words and expressions used. "Thy kingdom come" is a short petition, easily said, but what a world of meaning it contains! The coming of the kingdom of God is synonymous with a reign of righteousness and peace. "The kingdom of God," as the Savior declared, "cometh not with observation," not with the tramp of armies, not with the blare of trumpets, not with pomp and ceremony; but silently the Spirit of God moves upon the human heart, and the heavenly kingdom is established within. When our Lord began his ministry, he preached, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It was not a temporal kingdom invested with splendor that he announced, but simply the life of God in the soul, a restoration to the divine favor lost through the sin of Adam. As Mr. Wesley says: "'The kingdom of heaven' and the 'kingdom of God' are but two phrases for the same thing. They mean, not barely a future happy state in heaven, but a state to be enjoyed on earth; the proper disposition for the glory of heaven, rather than the possession of it." Those in whom this kingdom has been established have peace with God, and are strengthened by the assurance that whatever befalls them is for the best; for God rules over all. Not a sparrow falls to the ground without his knowledge. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

The uttering of this prayer, then, signifies our willingness to be led by the Spirit of God as well as the desire that God's grace may rule in every heart. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Using these words sincerely, we express thereby the earnest longing that evil may be overthrown, and that right may triumph everywhere.

Two classes of persons have the right to offer this prayer to the Father of all. The first class includes all persons who, having become convicted of sin, are desirous of "fleeing from the wrath to come." Every repentant sinner, every man who renounces the works of darkness and determines, by the help of God, to work righteousness, is privileged to use this petition. Not every prayer that men offer to God is heard, for those who worship the Father must worship him in spirit and in truth. Whosoever has faith enough to believe that "God is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him" — poor, wretched, and sinful above measure, though he be—shall find life and light and peace if he will say with all his heart, "Lord, 'thy kingdom come.'" Heaven is pledged to bless those who renounce themselves and seek to do the will of God.

This prayer is also used by those whose hearts have already been purified by faith, and who are truly the children of God. But with them the prayer is for more grace. Their desire is, and should be, that God's kingdom may be so completely established in their hearts and lives that every thought and word and deed may be acceptable in the sight of God. The converted man knows that his sins have been forgiven, and, so long as he abides in Christ, he is not under the dominion of sin.

Notwithstanding the fact while we tabernacle in the flesh we must undergo the buffetings of temptation and many trials of faith, the Savior has promised to be with us through them all. If our consecration be sincere, we can say with the Apostle Paul: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." It is possible for us, weak though we are, to live so close to the Master that storms of trouble and waves of temptation will not be able to destroy our peace of soul. If we present ourselves as living sacrifices unto God, in everything giving thanks, praying without ceasing, we need have little fear about holding out. If each day we say in all earnestness to our heavenly Father, "Thy kingdom come," not only will we seek to please him in all things, but we shall rejoice in the light of life.

"To be filled with all the fullness of God"—this also is what we pray for when we say, "Thy kingdom come." What a matchless ideal we have set before us! Being made in the image of God, "we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

But more still is implied in the use of this simple petition. By its utterance the Christian, of whatever name, pledges himself to do all in his power to establish God's kingdom on earth; for are we not to be witnesses for Christ? The man who prays to God for bread, and then sits him down in idleness, expecting to have his prayer answered in the form of a loaf, acts just as sensibly as the man who prays for the coming of Christ's kingdom, but does nothing to advance the cause of religion. We prove our sincerity and manifest a genuine faith when we seek, as far as in us lies, to answer our own prayers. God will not do for us what we can do for ourselves.

There are three ways in which we may advance God's kingdom. First, by a godly walk and conversation. The world does not ask concerning a Christian, "What does he profess?" but it asks, "How does he live?" If professing Christians would always take care not to visit places their pastor could not afford to visit, and refrain from doing things that they would condemn in their pastor, much occasion of stumbling would be removed. The New Testament Christian must endeavor to avoid every form of evil.

But it is not enough that we should lead pure lives. We must warn men of sin, and do everything in our power to put down evil. All the saloonists, gamblers, and such like, ask of us is to be let alone. Liberty to carry on wickedness is far from being the kind of liberty men are to have where Christianity reigns. Christ said of himself that he came to destroy the works of the devil. Every true follower of the Master has sworn eternal enmity to the powers of darkness. Away, then, with the idea that social, political, and other evils must be left to regulate themselves. Too long already have Christians permitted unprincipled men to have things their own way. Fear of provoking opposition and dread of criticism prevent not a few from antagonizing the evils they find around them. Silence is often criminal.

But, above all, we must show our faith by works of mercy; by doing all possible good unto all men, "especially unto them who are of the household of faith." The poor we have always with us, and so we can never lack for opportunities of doing good to the bodies as well as to the souls of men. That man prays a meaningless prayer who, having abundance, gives little or nothing to send the gospel abroad.

Death of An Able Theologian.

Methodists, North and South, sustain a common loss in the recent death of Rev. John Miley, D. D., who for many years has been one of the leading theologians of the Northern Methodist Church. He was born in Princeton, Ohio, in 1814, and died at Madison, N. J., Dec. 11. At the time of his decease he was professor of systematic theology in Drew Theological Seminary, which place he had filled with conspicuous success since 1873. Previous to this date he had served important charges in Ohio and in New York, and was recognized as a preacher and pastor of rare ability.

His name will go down to posterity as the author of a "Systematic Theology," in two volumes, which competent judges consider the ablest defense of Arminianism that has appeared since the publication of Watson's "Institutes." In preparing these two volumes he spent eight of the best years of his life. His child-like simplicity and radiant piety endeared him to all who knew him. A great and good man has fallen on sleep.

A GUIDE TO SYSTEMATIC READINGS IN THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITTANICA. By James Baldwin, Ph.D. 8 vo, 316 pages. Cloth, $2. The Werner Co., 160 Adams street, Chicago.

The volume in hand contains special courses of reading adapted to the peculiar needs of men and women in every vocation in life, the courses being mapped out by a corps of able educators employed for that purpose. Most owners of the Brittanica are embarrassed at the extent of the "literary riches" placed before them, since that immense work contains 22,000 pages, covering every branch of human knowledge. Hitherto this great Encyclopædia has been used, for the most part, merely for reference. Promiscuous reading of such a work, while beneficial in a general way, does not conduce to self culture half so well as the systematic study of special subjects. The "Guide," just published, supplies a long-felt want, and is quite as necessary and valuable to the user of the Brittanica as a concordance to the Bible student. The first part calls attention to subjects of interest to young people. Part II. is for the benefit of students who desire to supplement the work of school or college. Part III. applies to general readers. All who desire to make the best possible use of the Brittanica should order a copy of the "Guide."

HISTORY OF THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUES, held at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 26, 27, 28, 1895. Edited by Rev. John L. Weber. Paper, 152 pages. Price, 50 cents. Times Printing Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Epworth Leaguers everywhere will warmly welcome the appearance of this volume, which gives a full and accurate account of the proceedings and addresses at the great Conference at Chattanooga. A large number of the most gifted speakers and writers of the three Methodisms in America delivered addresses at that most notable gathering, which are eminently worthy of preservation in book form. The volume will be of much interest to those who attended the Conference as well as to Methodists who did not. It is a valuable contribution to our Epworth League literature, and its wide circulation will do much to arouse interest in this wonderful young people's movement.

Holy Oggedness.

God believes in a little thing and we do not. We seem not to have the insight to discern that a small deed, if it is a good one, needs only to be persisted in and indefinitely multiplied in order to become a great deed. Ordinary men are prevented from doing the little that they can, because a superior man can do so much more than they can; and the consequence of that is that only a very small share of ordinary talent gets drafted into practical service. There is plenty of chance for small talent if it is not in too much of a hurry. We are impatient for quick effects; a given result we want to see reached, and we want it impetuously; but it does not follow at all from that that we want it with that solidity of desire that will keep us plodding in that direction till we get it. There are not half of us that are willing to earn results. No matter how good or how great the end in view may be, we are pretty apt to be wanting in that glutinousness of purpose that will make us and our purpose stick to each other till the end is attained. There is no great difficulty in enkindling enthusiasm, but enthusiasm, in the sense in which we regularly understand the term, makes poor motive power; it can not be bitted and reined down for a long pull. An enthusiast is a kind of freshet that will do a good deal in a given time that is more or less to the purpose, but can not be counted upon for steady effects, and when it is passed leaves things in that miscellaneous condition that postpones for a considerable time the resumption of anything like steady work. The objection is not to the enthusiasm per se, but to its friskiness. It is open to the same criticism that the Northern lights would be considered as a means of street illumination.

It is just at this point that we are going to be able to determine about how much solid advantage a given man or woman is going to be to the world. It is not a matter of talent; that has not very much to do with it; it is not a matter of swelling, cataclysmic enthusiasm, which is in this respect a good deal like a rocket, that at the time when it seems to be just on the point of doing something it—has got done doing. More than any other one thing the measure of a man's power, the criterion of the amount of effect that he will be likely to produce in the world, will be not the brilliancy or the impetuosity with which he takes hold, but the holy doggedness with which he hangs to after he has taken hold. Every once in a while I am told that such and such a brilliant young man or young woman has just come into our congregation, and that he or she will be likely to prove a great acquisition. I confess that it is a bait at which I nibble less than I used to do. If I want a light to read by, I had rather have a good long tallow-dip than a streak of lightning. A very small river will carry a great deal of water to the sea if it keeps running.

Patient continuance in well-doing is the art of great living; it makes the man himself great; it ennobles the world he lives in; it leaves behind a bequest that can never be diverted to unintended purposes, and it puts a man distinctly upon the track of having fulfilled to him the promised award of the Lord: "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of the Lord."—Dr. C. W. Parkhurst, in the Independent.

Unctuous Preaching.

The preacher of "unction" still wins favor and commands a hearing. He may not have the intellectualism of his talented brother, nor the sensationalism of latter-day pulpiteers, nor the oratorical flights of the gifted speaker, nor the learning of the scholarly minister, nor the captivating power of the accomplished orator, but he has the spiritual force which impresses a religious audience. He speaks with a sincerity, tenderness, earnestness and fidelity which go to the conscience, win the heart and influence the life. This unction comes from an indwelling Spirit, and is the effect of an abiding and quickening communion with God. No other gift can make up for its loss. When it is joined with the other high and noble pulpit endowments which the age calls for, one is equipped for the highest possible work for his Master as a winner of souls.—Presbyterian.

The prosecution of Christian work in large cities is a question that might probably receive attention from our Conferences. Over 29 per cent. of the population of this country lives in cities of more than 8,000 population, and when the population of the smaller cities, towns and villages is also taken into consideration, it is probable that nearly, if not fully, one-half of our people live in cities and towns. There also is found the great mass of the foreign element in this country, which needs Christianization far more than does the native. If Methodism is to grow, its increase must be mainly in the centers of population, and intelligent effort must be made to bring these under Christian and Methodist influences.—Exchange.

The Bible is still the most popular book in the world, and there are no signs that it is likely to become less popular. The New York Tribune contained recently a leading editorial of the circulation and influence of the Bible. The sentiment which it expresses is all the more significant as coming from a leading secular journal. After showing by statistics that the good old book is gaining rather than losing ground, it said—"Colonel Ingersoll or John L. Sullivan can easily fill a big hall, largely, we suspect with the same class of people; that is a fact the importance of which we would by no means underestimate. But while two or three thousand people are yelling with delight over the 'Mistakes of Moses,' or the ease with which the big fellow can still go through the dumb show of fighting, multitudes of earnest and intelligent men and women in every walk of life are pondering over the message of the Book of books, and however imperfectly, are trying to order their lives according to its moral precepts. No mistake Moses ever made compares with that of those who think to elevate and ennoble the world by splitting 'the ears of the groundlings' with coarse sneers at religion and the Bible."—Mid-Continent.

The Key-Note.

Shubuta sounds the key-note, and if the music would vibrate throughout the connection, our Missionary Board would not be paying interest on money to run the great machinery of our church in foreign fields. Yesterday I began my fourth year's work with these good people, and at the close of the service I called for one hundred dollars for foreign missions. This morning it is in hand, and will be forwarded to Nashville. Let all the preachers try the experiment in God's name, and the results will be glorious.

A Chance to Do Good.

To-day, while at Ellisville, Miss., on a visit to a sick daughter, I had a friend to convey me to the residence of Rev. David Merchant, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, now aged sixty-two. Since my last visit inflammation has destroyed his right eye, his lungs are sadly diseased, and he is confined to his bed a part of each day. Through the aid of kind friends, and his boys, he now owns a new, unfinished, double-room frame house. His room lacks ceiling and sash for two windows, the other room needs a chimney, ceiling, and sash for two windows. About forty or fifty dollars would fix the two rooms comfortable for Winter.

I thought if the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and the Christian readers of the ADVOCATE, did but know the dreary surroundings of this afflicted superannuate, that they would willingly send a little help each towards making the last days of Bro. Merchant comfortable. Bro. Merchant, as all know, has never been a five-talent man, yet he has done the best he could with what God gave him. His lot has been to serve the poor pinewoods circuits and missions of our Conference. He has been useful, if not brilliant; and, no doubt, God has a good reward for him in the life to come. He is patiently waiting the summons to enter into rest, and is happy in the Lord.

Come, dear friends; lend a helping hand to give our afflicted brother a few rays of sunshine here before he is called to the undimmed glory of heaven.

Rev. Frank Keen, Ellisville, Miss., his pastor, will receive contributions, and attend to seeing it properly appropriated. ROBT. B DOWNER.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

A RESOLUTION AND A PRAYER.

(Eph. iv, 13.)

(References: Phil. iii, 13, 14; II. Peter iii, 18; Phil. iii, 8; John vii, 17.)

The subject very proper on the first Sunday of the new year. But resolutions are often vain. Said Dr. Krummacher: "The way to hell is paved with good resolutions." But resolutions must be made to ensure action. This the poet understood when he wrote:

"I can but perish if I go,
I am resolved to try;
For if I stay away I know
I shall forever die."

1. New Year's resolutions are proper.

(1) Resolve to be more industrious, frugal, liberal during the new year. Said John Wesley: "Make all you can, save all you can, give all you can."

(2) Resolve to become a better church member. Never miss divine service. Always attend prayer meeting. Work faithfully in Sunday-school and League.

(3) Resolve to ensure a closer walk with God. Never pass a day without reading the Bible and engaging in secret prayer.

2. Our text points out excellencies to which we should resolve to attain. Such attainment matter of our solicitude and prayer.

(1) Attain to the unity of faith. A supposed gospel which divides and causes estrangement among brethren is not of God. The indwelling of the Holy Ghost ensures harmony, union.

(2) Attain to the knowledge of the Son of God. In the bosom of the Father—coequal with him. Incarnate. Intercessor at the right hand of God. Judge of mankind.

(3) Attain to perfection—a perfect man. Perfect in love. No relative perfection as in the case of other Christian excellencies. Absolutely perfect in love. In love, which survives faith and hope. In love, which is of God.

(4) Attain to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Christ is our exemplar. Must follow in his footsteps. It was perceived of the disciples that they had been with Jesus. Not man, not even the best of men, our pattern. Happy the Christian who can say with St. Paul: "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

32 DAYS TOUR OF

Mexico

In connection, from St. Louis, with the "Tour of All Mexico" of the American Tourist Association, and including, on the return, the far-famed

MARDI GRAS AT NEW ORLEANS.

The entire tour made in Pullman Private Cars. A journey in which the tourist will be in Mexico and the South twenty-five days, spending but a few hours over six of these days in travel, and those at broken intervals. Hence glorious hours of sight-seeing in "the most novel land on our continent, and one of the most attractive on any continent." The excursion leaves Chicago Jan. 20 and St. Louis Jan. 21. Arrangements will be made to transfer tourists from points south of Cairo or Memphis to a connection with this excursion at San Antonio, thus obviating the necessity of their going to Chicago or St. Louis. But $275 for all expenses of the round trip. Send for illustrated pamphlet giving all particulars. Tickets and full information can be had of agents of the Central Route and connecting lines, or by addressing

HOME CIRCLE.

NEVER GIVE UP.

In the world that lies before you
There is much for you to win;
But beforehand you must conquer
Foes without and foes within.
And if now your tasks can rout you,
Than, when life's real battles call,
Will you, in their heat and struggle,
Victor stand, or vanquished fall?

Can you hope for bright successes
If you're always failing now?
Do you think defeat will help to Weave the laurel round your brow?
Just as little straws can tell us
From which side the breezes blow,
So the way you work at trifles
Will your perseverance show.

Never say that fate's against you
That you can not conquer luck;
There is no such thing as either;
All depends on work and pluck.
Just you be resolved to conquer,
Never mind how tough the fray;
Put your hands and brain in motion,
And, my boys, you'll gain the day.
—Christian at Work.

Learn Self-Control.

Recently a young man gave way to a temptation which he had pledged himself to resist. We called his attention to it, and witnessed his deep humiliation. In speaking of his sin, the only excuse was a confession of weakness. "I have never learned self-control," said he, "and now my greatest enemy is this temptation, with very little power to resist."

There is no more important habit than self-control. It does not come by inheritance, although some natures are more easily brought under subjection than others. It comes from repeated acts of self-denial, and attains its highest degree through continuous victories over impulses. Self control implies that there is a moral balance which regulates character. If the fundamental principle which acts as a regulator is Christian conscience under divine guidance, then will the highest type of moral character be attainable. The man who gives way to every appetite and impulse will go headlong to his own destruction.

There may be times where the mastery of one's desires or impulses may be necessary to save life. Garfield stood in the presence of that New York mob during the excitement attending the assassination of Lincoln, and, by his own calm mastery of self, quieted the tumult. It was his strong personality and calm words in the midst of excitement that made an impression on the multitude. That strength came through years of discipline. The greatest conqueror was first compelled to subdue his own nature.

Courage is not self-control; although self-control may be courage under another form, for the man who is superior to his ambitions is also master of his timidity. We must not mistake passion or strong feeling for courage; they may prove the opposite, for unbridled passion is evidence of want of true courage. If the young man of whom we make mention had been trained to self-denial, the temptation which overcame him would have been met without difficulty.

Rare cases of mastery over self are met with. Men have so subjected themselves to moral discipline that it became a second nature to them, so that very exasperating experiences would be treated as commonplace events. Robert Ainsworth, the lexicographer, had a wife who did not sympathize with the drudgery of his work, and, in a fit of passion, threw his voluminous manuscripts into the fire. Without a single word he went to his desk and began his work anew. Such cases are extreme, but show the victory over impulse and passion which may be attained. It is also reported that a servant of Thomas Carlyle built a fire with a book manuscript which he left on the floor, and, although a passionate man, he curbed his temper, and rewrote the prose epic, "The French Revolution."

The aim of self-control is to temper the mind and heart for great effort; to subdue the friction in one's nature which burns like a fire and wastes vitality. But the highest aim is to strengthen the moral nature, and subdue evil in the heart, so that our human nature may grow into the likeness of our divine Master, who was despitefully used and insulted, and yet resented no insult. "Like the sandalwood that sheds a perfume on the ax that fells," he could love his enemies, and his sweetness of temper never shone more brightly than when under the scourge of tormentors.—Selected.

Forlorn and Debased.

"Nobody with any knowledge of the facts will deny that the American theater, considered merely as a rational means of entertainment, without reference to its relations to literature and art, is in a most forlorn and debased condition. Tragedy, high comedy, the historical and romantic drama, have been virtually banished from the stage or find few worthy interpreters, and have been replaced to a large extent by worthless melodramas, the extravagant buffooneries of so-called farce comedies, or the feverish and unwholesome society play, in which the most vicious topics are discussed openly under the pretense of solving social problems."

Had we said this, some half-educated devotee of the theater or some hackslidden Christian, who has no sympathy for the work of the church, no time to give to the prayer meeting, no interest in saving men, would have said: "Behold the narrowness of a bigot!"—New York Advocate.

An Apt and Artistic Rebuke.

A wealthy merchant of Manchester recently engaged a rising young painter for the purpose of having his own portrait in oil conveyed to posterity. The terms were arranged.

"How long do you think it will take?" asked the model.

"Perhaps fifteen days," was the reply.

Sittings began, and the artist entered so heartily into his work that in eleven days the portrait was done.

"Why," asked this Crœsus of Cottonopolis, when the fact was announced to him, "do you intend suppressing four days' work?"

"It does not matter at all; the portrait is finished," answered the painter.

"Well, sir, this is not business; we said a hundred guineas and fifteen days' work. I am quite ready to stand the price, but you ought not to spend an hour less upon the work than we agreed for."

There was no use arguing with such a man. The painter took his brush again and spent four sittings more in lengthening, little by little in the portrait, the ears of his patron!

Piety in the Home.

If it is true that family worship is falling into decadence, it is one of the most unpromising signs of the times. The home is the real stronghold of faith and piety and patriotism. So long as the homes are full of the spirit of devotion and consecration to God, the country will be pervaded by true and healthful influences. Strong men and true women will be reared to bear testimony for God and righteousness. Trained in these schools of virtue and of prayer, they will grow up to practice what is good and to live for what is unseen and eternal. The home must be the center of piety, if the church is to be full of spiritual power.—Herald and Presbyter.

The Art of Stooping.

Benjamin Franklin, when a young man, visited Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather. At the close of the interview the doctor showed him out of the house by a back way. As they proceeded along a narrow passage he said to the lad, "Stoop! STOOP!" Not immediately comprehending the meaning of the advice, he took another step, and brought his head rather violently against a beam that projected over the passage. "My lad," said Dr. Mather, "you are young, and the world is before you; learn to stoop as you go through it, and you will save yourself many a hard thump." And yet it is no easy lesson to learn—this science of stooping wisely and gracefully at the right time and in the right way. When you have to deal with a man in a passion, who fumes and foams and utters bitter words, how you long to stand up straight, tell him he is wrong and unreasonable, and fight the matter out boldly. But it is of no use—it is the veriest folly to argue with an angry man, and by far the wisest course is to stoop. It is no more a disgrace to do this than it is to bow before a passing tornado, or bend before a sudden gust of wind. Stoop—as gracefully as you can—and when the storm has begun to subside, whisper the kindly word that turns away wrath.—F. A. Atkins.

Gladstone's Advice to Young Men.

Be sure that everyone of you has his place and vocation on this earth, and that it rests with himself to find it. Do not believe those who too lightly say, Nothing succeeds like success. Effort, honest, manful, humble effort succeeds by its reflected action, especially in youth, better than success, which, indeed, too easily and to early gained, not seldom serves, like winning the throw of the dice, to blind and stupefy. Get knowledge, all you can. Be thorough in all you do, and remember that, though ignorance often may be innocent, pretension is always despicable. But you, like men, be strong and exercise your strength. Work onward and upward, and may the blessing of the Most High soothe your cares, clear your vision, and crown your labors with reward.—Columbia Christian Advocate.

The Girl and the Wife.

It is a widespread error that the gay young girl need not be taught anything practical before marriage; that by a kind of magic she will develop into the good manager, the skilled housewife. Here is an ally of the divorce court. The art of true home making is not much thought of when all those pretty and useless presents are spread out for inspection. The theory is that the bride is to live in a bower, and know no more of baking and brewing than the birds of the air. But nature's common sense pierces through all our silly fictions, our shallow pretenses and make-believes. If we could present a little capacity for making home home-like, we might block at least one of the side paths that lead from the church to the divorce court.—Christian Register.

Kind words do not cost much. They never blister the tongue or lips. We have never heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They make other people good-natured. They also produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful image it is.—Pascal.

HYGIENE.

The Perfect Man.

The ideal man is not a myth, or the shadow of a dream; he is a reality in almost every circle. I have seen such a man occupying a humble position on a railroad. He was true to every obligation and duty, and was careful, attentive, faithful, earnest, and honest. One stormy night he went down the road, and discovered the water undermining the pier of a bridge, and the watchman asleep. It was the work of a few moments to flag an express train and avert a frightful accident. He was off duty, but his sense of obligation and responsibility continued. He lived in humble circumstances, and by example and conduct illustrated the best traits of one who strives to make the most of every day's experience. The world was better for his influence and example. I knew a mechanic whose every-day ambition was to make the best use of every opportunity, and to do his duty faithfully. No doubt he was not perfect, and yet his conception of life and appreciation of its relations and requirements were far higher and nearer perfection than the majority of men. There are many men of this class, unnoticed in all circles of life, men who resemble explorers, in constantly adjusting themselves to the new surroundings of each day, fulfilling all its requirements and duties with their best knowledge and intents. The standard of perfection is to make the most of all of our talents and opportunities, every day of life. The switchman and mechanic realized this, and each day's work was an earnest, conscientious effort to do their duty. The faults and imperfections of life come from neglect of this. Culture and physical perfection, moral and ethical development, are powerless to raise one towards the standard of the perfect man, unless associated with a faithful conscientious act and desire to use every opportunity for good, and the performance of every requirement and duty. The banker's estimate, that one man's conduct, acts and words were always at par, and another's subject to a discount, conveys a correct idea. The term, character, only describes an essential element of the perfect man; he must be true to himself; he must act along the lines, and in accord with the correct circumstances and conditions of each day; he must be true to duty, obligation and every requirement and demand of the hour. General Grant once said, in response to an inquiry why a certain officer was detailed to perform a perilous duty, when a more capable, brilliant man desired the place: "General ——— is as true as steel, and will do his duty whatever happens." Such a man can be trusted; even if he makes a mistake he will do the best he can. This was a recognition of this same quality which is a mark of the perfect man. A leading public man made a profound impression in this country as a great ideal character. At his death it was noticed that those who were most intimate with him were guarded and conservative in the eulogies, while those who were extravagant in praise of his life and character, were not his intimate associates. The facts were, this man was insincere and untrue to himself. He failed to do his whole duty. His inner life was unstable and changeable. His external frankness and apparent nobility of act and thought, while fascinating, was insincere. A recent case of a noted teacher who for years was regarded as a model man of a very high type, was suddenly placed in a situation where he displayed contemptible weakness. His appearance of an approximation to a perfect man was superficial. His conception of duty and right under all conditions and circumstances was infantile. Such a man was untrue, unfaithful, and could not be trusted in the storms and perils of life. The perfect man never fails to do his duty, as far as he can realize its demands. He may be trusted in every battle, in every condition of life. He will hold on to the right, and stand by the truth to the last. The skeleton soldier in the sentry box at the gates of Pompey, is a type of the leading characteristic of the ideal man of the race.—T. D. Crothers, M. D., Editor of the Journal of Inebriety.

OBITUARIES.

RIGGS—Whereas, God, in his all-wise providence, has removed from our Sunday-school and church one of our beloved teachers and active members, Mrs. ALTHIA RIGGS; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, although we miss her wise counsel and genial smile, we bow with submission, knowing He doeth all things well; and that we tender our heartfelt sympathies to her husband (our beloved superintendent) and her loved ones, pointing them "up yonder, where she now dwells, with beckoning hands."

Sunday-school Committee: Mrs. Bereand, Mr. W. Torian, Miss Lila Hopkins, Miss Nennie Randle.

Church Committee: Mrs. Girard, Mrs. Torian, Bro. Webb, Mrs. T. B. Hopkins.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, of which she was president, want to tender our heartfelt sympathies to her bereaved husband, relatives, and members of this society, praying God to let her mantle fall on us, and that we may follow her example.

Committee from P. and H. M. S.: Mrs. Demarle, Mrs. Morgen, Miss Samerson.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, deeply deplore the loss to our church and missionary society of our efficient treasurer, Sister Riggs, for her gentle, kindly manners, her discretion, her ready charity, and many other Christian virtues, making up a saintly character which always influenced for good those who came into her presence.

Resolved, That we offer to her loved ones our tenderest sympathies in this sad hour of bereavement, assuring them her character was such her influence will never die, but shine more and more as the days go by; and that we hope to meet her, with them, in the sweet by-and-by.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our town papers and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

W. F. M. S. Committee: Sister Randle, Mrs. Singleton, Mrs. J. J. Davidson, Miss Viola Kelly.

FLY—Died at her residence Saturday morning, Nov. 9, 1895, at four o'clock, IDORA FLY, aged twenty-one years eleven months and fifteen days.

How sad that one just in the bloom of youth, with the prospect of a gilded future before her, should be taken from our midst! After having completed her education, for the past two years she has been teaching near Woodville, Miss., and has endeavored not only to train the minds of those entrusted to her care, but has exerted over them that moral influence which is essential in the preparation for the home above.

Becoming a victim of fever, she each day gradually lost her physical vitality, until some two weeks prior to her death she came home to bid the fond farewell to friends and loved ones on this earth before going to join the angels in the sweet fields of Edon, where awaiting her was a crown of many stars. Her noble character was certainly worthy of admiration—a model of true womenhood, for

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."

She has always endeavored to the best of her ability to serve God rightly, and her adorning was not the "outward adorning of the wearing of gold and putting on of apparel," but in the innermost recesses of her heart was that intense love for the Master which enabled her to do with a devoted spirit everything in his name. She was one rich in all the beauties that adorn sweet woman, and grew every day in beauty and goodness to those who knew her. The influence of her sweet spirit was felt by all whose sainted privilege it was to approach her. She was beloved by all who ever gazed on her pure countenance; adored by those who felt the magic power of her great soul.

She leaves a heart-broken family and a host of loving friends to mourn her loss. But let us not weep for her, for she is now free from the toils and cares of this world, and her soul is now sweetly reposing "safe in the arms of Jesus."

A FRIEND.

CRYMES—On the first Sabbath in October, 1895, the pure spirit of Sister JUDITH CRYMES passed from the body to a home in heaven. She was the widow of the Rev. Thomas Crymes, who had preceded her many years before to glory. The mother and five children were left to follow the leadings of Divine Providence.

She found much comfort in reading her Bible and in the constant study of good books and in everything which would help her in the divine life. She was a very intelligent Christian woman. She lived close to God. She taught her children the way of life and brought them to be acceptable members of the church, one of whom, the Rev. J. D. Crymes, is a member of the Mississippi Conference. She was a true friend to the pastor. She loved and prayed for all her pastors. The man sent by the Bishop was her preacher. She was a woman of much prayer. She was expecting the coming of her Lord when she would go home. She wrote letters to some of her children, in which she said, "In a few days I will go" home.

She left her blessing on her home and community. God called her home because she was ready. She was ready because she lived over the home. Let us so live that we can meet Jesus.

D. L. COODELL.

MILLER—Little ESTHER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. E. Miller, of Hattiesburg, Miss., was born June 13, 1892, and died Nov. 20, 1895, aged three years five months and seven days.

She was a beautiful, bright, devoted child, had a lovable disposition, and one of the most tender-hearted children I ever met. (I visited the family last June, and sweet little Esther manifested the tenderest love for "Grandpa.") If at any time her papa or mama would scold her, she would come to them with tears in her eyes and ask them "if they loved her." The day before she was taken sick her papa was away from home, and several times during the day she told her mama "she wished papa would come home so she could ask him if he loved her." She was taken seriously ill that night, and lived only a few days, when the angels came and wafted her sweet spirit away into rest.

Who will say that it is not all for the best? God alone knows how much of suffering and of sorrow she has escaped by having been summoned from earth so young. Everything was done for her that loving hearts and two of the best physicians in the town could suggest, but the mortal disease was not rebuked, and she passed away. IRVIN MILLER.

Walnut Grove, Miss.

SAUCIER—Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our loved friend and schoolmate, ADELIA SAUCIER, whose presence in our school will be sadly missed; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of sweet Adelia the school has lost a faithful attendant, one of its best and brightest jewels, and the family a devoted daughter and sister.

Resolved, That we, as a school, tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family in their deep affliction, and pray that the grace of God may help them, with Christian resignation, to be submissive to his will.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased; also to the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Poplerville Free Press.

ZEMILY SMITH, for Com.

COBB—Little EUNICE COBB departed this life Dec. 13, 1895, near Gloster, Miss., aged two years eleven months and eighteen days.

She has gone from earth to her everlasting home in the skies; and, although hard to give her up, we humbly submit to Divine Providence and the will of him who doeth all things well.

We extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family in this time of sadness and sorrow, and pray Almighty God to give us all grace to meet her after the pilgrimage of life is over, on the evergreen shores of eternity.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address cannot take it

Cod-liver oil helps and cures. Many believe they could be benefited if they could take it, but, after trying, acknowledge they cannot do it. They might as well say they cannot eat bread, after having taken of a few pieces which were heavy and sour. Physiologists tell us that cod-liver oil is more easily digested than cream, butter or other fats. The difficulty is with the preparation which has been used.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites is borne by the most delicate invalid because it is not disagreeable in taste; contains the purest oil; the oil is emulsified (or digested), avoiding the rising of gas from the stomach; and the oil is combined with the hypophosphites which are known for their power to strengthen digestion and give tone and vigor to the whole system.

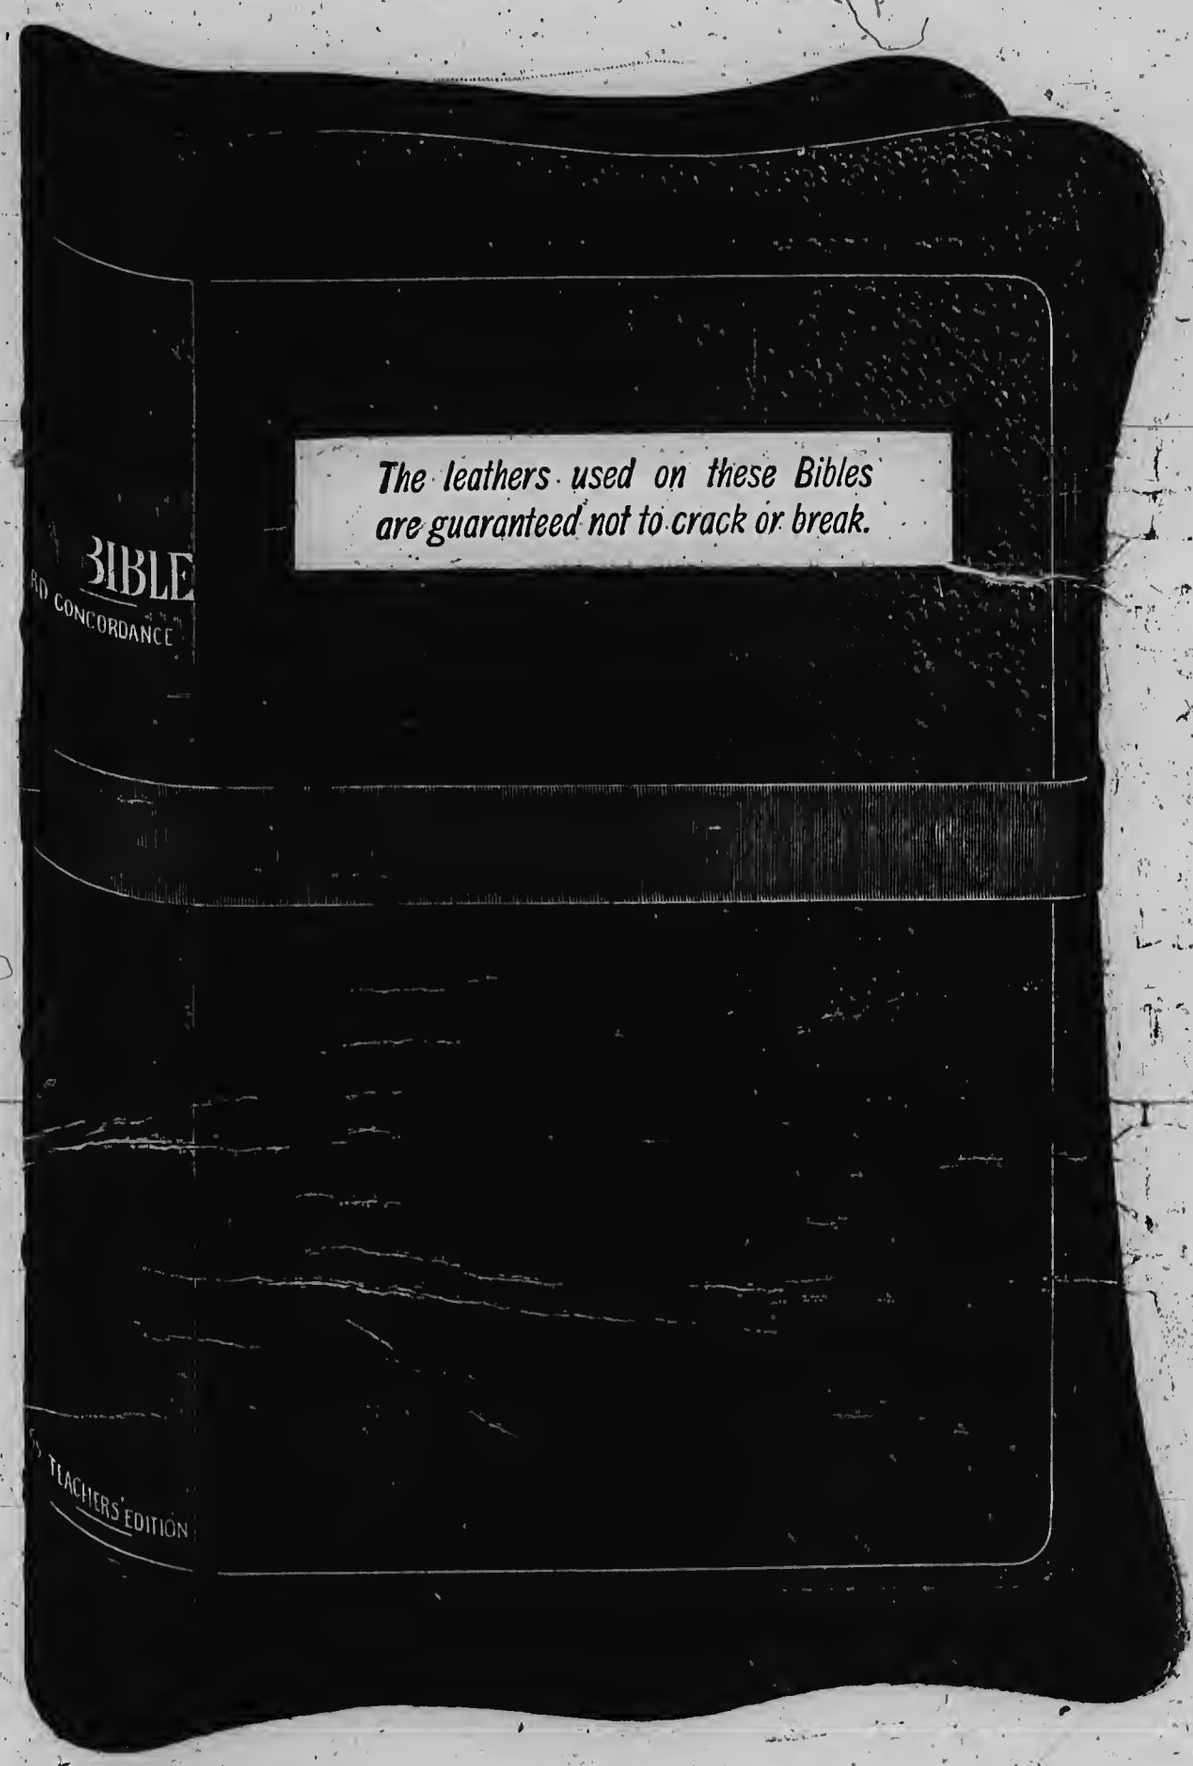
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1 75; Bourgeois Type, $2 45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to January, '97. (A little later it will be February, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

We are prepared to offer the Holman Bible to subscribers who pay their subscription a full year for the small sum of $1.50. This Bible has all the matter of the larger styles and is bound in the same style. The difference is, that it is in smaller type. When ordering be sure to say '$1.50 Bible.'' Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2 45.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The tide of emigration from the Northwestern States to the South is creating no little alarm there, and steps to check it are being considered.

The very handsome and commodious building of the Young Men's Christian Association, on St. Charles street, near the corner of Julia street, was formally dedicated Wednesday, Jan. 1.

Cremation of the dead is growing in favor in Philadelphia. A cremation society was organized in 1888, and the number of bodies cremated each year since then has increased steadily.

A bill was introduced in Congress, and unanimously passed, removing the disability of ex-Confederates from entering the United States Army, in case of war, in any other position than that of privates.

Dr. Parkhurst has a poor opinion of his congregation. He told them recently that not 10 per cent. of them knew what the Monroe doctrine was, and the rest did not know how it should be applied.

In a senseless panic, caused by a defective gas burner and a foolish cry of "Fire" at the old Front Street Theatre, Baltimore, on Dec. 27 twenty-seven people were killed, two fatally injured and more seriously hurt.

The city of Boston is about to receive a legacy of $60,000 for the use of poor children who desire to go into the country for the Summer season. It comes from George S. Rondige, who died childless in that city a few years ago.

Ahlwardt, the Jew-baiter, declares that he will give up the job of trying to relieve the United States of Jews, unless his friends will guarantee the suppression of the egg throwers. He says that this country is not free enough for him.

The Navy Department has finally awarded the contracts for the two new battle-ships authorized by the last Congress. Both the vessels will be awarded to the Newport News Ship-Building Company, of Newport News, Va., that company having bid $2,250,000 for each of the vessels, the lowest bid made.

The Memphis Cotton Exchange has taken the initiative in the matter of advising against a large acreage in cotton for the coming year. At a meeting held on Monday last resolutions were adopted calling upon the farmers to devote all energies towards the production of food crops, and to limit their cotton acreage to about the same figures as that of the last crop.

FOREIGN.

English Protestants raised $6,250,000 last year for foreign missions.

The Anti-Semitic Union of Berlin disowns Ahlwardt, and says that his raid upon the United States was not indorsed by the union.

There are 1,012 American citizens in China, about one-half of whom are women. Five hundred and six of the number are missionaries.

It is said in London that Lord Salisbury will not make a statement on the Venezuelan question right away. He has a lot of thinking to do first.

Mr. Justin McCarthy says that he is tired of leading the Irish party in the House of Commons, and will give up the job with the present session of Parliament.

It is said that the United States government has been sounding Russia regarding the dispute with England, and is said to have received a most favorable reply.

If Turkey should be wiped out, it would mean the loss to Russia of an annual sum of $7,500,000, which Turkey pays her by way of indemnity, and will have to pay till 1977.

The latest advices from Cuba, if confirmed, are of the gravest character. It is reported that the revolutionists under General Gomez have succeeded in outflanking the Spanish troops, and to have penetrated almost to the town of Matanzas. The latest successes place the patriotic forces on the direct road to Havana, and that city can now be considered as menaced.

The following cablegram was received, on Dec. 27, directed to Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the World's W. C. T. U., and signed by the vice-president, Lady Henry Somerset: "Reigate, England, Dec. 27.—We join prayers and influence to yours to avert the greatest calamity possible to the world, a war between nations in whose history is involved the highest hopes of humanity. God grant we may stay united to fight oppression everywhere."

Poison in the Blood.

"I have received great benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had poison in my blood for three years, but since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I am well. I will always praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, and recommend it to my friends."—Joseph Pierce, 286 Hospital St., New Orleans, La.

Found at Last.

For a long time and object of research has been to find a watch reliable for those of a modest and retiring nature. The Ollendorf steel watches made by the Waterbury Watch Co., of Waterbury, Conn., seem to perfectly satisfy this long-felt want. They are of a soft, lustrous black, and when fitted with gold stem and bow, together with "Fin" brooch, make an effect of hard to excel.

THE PRIZE BABY OF KANSAS CITY, MO.

Cured of Disfiguring ECZEMA By the CUTICURA REMEDIES

Our baby, when three weeks old was badly afflicted with Eczema. Her head, arms, neck, limbs, and nearly every joint in her body was raw and bleeding when we concluded to try CUTICURA REMEDIES. We began with CUTICURA (ointment) and CUTICURA SOAP, and after the first application we could see a change. After we had used them one week some of the sores had healed entirely, and ceased to spread. In less than a month, she was free from scales and blemishes, and 10-day has as lovely skin and hair as any child. She was shown at the Grange Fair, and took a premium as the prettiest baby, over sixteen others. MR. & MRS. PARK, 1369 Belleview Ave., Kan. City.

HELPING THE WEAK.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer Thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in Thy employ
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven be acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.

Correspondence.

Letter from "Gilderoy."

MR. EDITOR: It seems your contributors of late years are a belligerent set. They are for war, either on this subject or on that; now on the sanctification question and then on the woman-preacher question. What is the matter? Is history repeating itself? These same questions were up for discussion largely more than one hundred years ago. Mrs. Wesley, in the absence of her husband, read sermons to the people. This created a stir and brought on much talk. Samuel Wesley wrote to his wife, Susannah, and entered his protest. She replied, and if I am not mistaken, she got decidedly the better of her old man. Here we are at it again—the same old question, the same war of words, and thrashing over the same old straw. It might be well for some of us to read again the first hundred pages of "Moore's Life of Wesley." Then we would see how history repeats itself. The offensive term in Mrs. Wesley's time was that her meetings were called a conventicle. That was the particular word that gave the most offense. For my own part, I have been accustomed to hearing women speak in public from my earliest recollection. It does not shock my sensibilities. I have never yet heard or seen a female preacher of the gospel, and yet I have seen and heard a number of women who could read and expound the Word of God as well as the best of us. I have never yet seen or heard one do or say an unwomanly thing. I believe I have never seen but two women go into the pulpit to deliver their addresses, speeches, or gospel talks. I could not see that they were either less or more effective by being in the pulpit. They spoke as well there as they did on the floor. For some reasons, specially so in large churches and before large audiences, the pulpit is a convenient place from which to address an audience. I am too stupid to see or to understand how or why the pulpit is any more sacred than the floor of the house of God. It may be so, but I do not so understand it.

I am free to confess it would be a matter of curiosity to me to see a regularly licensed and ordained woman preacher. I have never seen one. It would be a new thing to me. It would be out of order in my church and among my people. This is not our way of doing things. I am for doing our things in our way. If we discover that we are wrong in anything and in any of our ways, I am in favor of a change. As long as we have a way and an order of doing things, I am set for sticking to it. Nothing is to be gained by departing from it, or running over it. The Bishops and preachers, and laymen too, are right when they stand for Methodist order and usage. This they have solemnly promised to do, and they ought to do it. It has been the custom and usage of our church from the first to use and utilize the gifted women we have among us. They have done much good, and they are doing more now than ever before. I would help, and not hinder, those good women who labor with us in the Lord. God bless them, one and all. I would not turn over my pulpit and the management of my meeting to any woman under the shining sun. I would not turn over either to any living man, evangelist or what not. I have been put in charge, and the responsibility has been put upon me, and I am not going to shirk it, or shun it, nor turn it over to anybody. The greatest of all responsibilities is not to assume responsibility when put upon one. My relation to the work in my charge is an official relation, and I must discharge the functions of my office. I am an officer, and I dare not turn over the duties of my office to anybody. If things go wrong, I am responsible for it. I can not, dare not, say some other man or woman was in charge at the time.

I believe the most of the present controversy turns on this point. Somebody had turned over the control and conduct of a meeting to somebody else. This was a mistake and blunder. It matters not how gifted and competent the person was who was put in charge. A pastor certainly has no right to transfer his duties, powers and prerogatives to some other person. In matters of this kind it is not a question of courtesy, but one of right and duty. No man, great or small, young or old, can put me in charge of his pulpit and meeting. I will not assume the duties and obligations of another. I have enough of my own. It is enough for me to fill my own place without trying to fill the place of some other man.

If I am not mistaken, some brethren in some parts of your territory are sowing a full crop of nettles that will spring up by and by and yield a crop of thorns. It is a pity to sacrifice brotherly love in a contention about words and terms. Nothing substantial is gained, but the spirit of unity and unanimity is lost and real injury done.

Yours, GILDEROY.

The Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

At the late session of the Mississippi Conference an effort was made to so amend the Constitution of the Brotherhood as to require the advance payment and the keeping in the treasury of our mortuary fee, with the proviso that the change should not go into effect before Oct. 1, 1896, and that the treasurer be required to give good and sufficient security for the safe keeping of the funds intrusted to his care. The amendment proposed would make Art. VII. of the Constitution read as follows: "It shall be the duty of the secretary, as soon as he is notified by the treasurer that the money in the treasury has been paid out, to issue an assessment to reimburse the same. And it shall be the duty of each beneficiary member, upon official notice of said assessment, to remit to the treasurer the sum of $5 and of each honorary member the sum of $1. If any member shall fail to pay said assessment within sixty days after the call of the secretary for the same, he shall be deprived, by suspension, of all benefits of the Brotherhood; and if said assessment shall have not been paid within four months after the call of the secretary for the same, such delinquency shall work a forfeiture of membership; provided that the secretary shall notify each delinquent of his threatened suspension, and in the event of suspension shall call his attention to the danger of the forfeiture of his membership."

The effort to so change the Constitution of the Brotherhood failed for lack of attendance at the meeting at which it was considered. It takes a majority of all the members to change the Constitution, and it transpired when the vote on said amendment was taken that, while nearly all present voted for the change, there was not a majority of the members present. Our meetings were held under difficulties. Let all the members of the Brotherhood duly consider this proposed change in the Constitution, and come to our next annual meeting prepared to vote intelligently for or against it, as they may deem best. Such a change ought not, in my judgment, to be made unless it can be adopted by well-nigh an unanimous vote of all the members. But the advantages of an advance payment of the mortuary fee are so manifest that I think when the brethren come to calmly consider the whole matter, there will be no opposition to it. Then, when a member of the Brotherhood passes away, the whole amount going to his family will be sent them immediately, instead of being sent in driblets, from time to time, extending over two or four months, they not knowing in the meanwhile how much is coming, nor when the last installment will be paid. The only argument against this plan that I have heard urged that amounts to anything is the inconvenience that may be involved in making the advance payment. But we could select a time to put the new order into effect when there has not recently been an assessment, and thus neutralize this objection. But let us move together in this change, or not at all.

Bro. Ware's Views.

Strange doctrines are being taught by some Methodist ministers these days. Bro. Miller thinks a preacher or member of the church who differs from a Bishop or a presiding elder on a point of law ought to get out of the church. Fortunately, all of us do not think as he does. If we did, we would soon have too many officers in the church for the number of soldiers, and God's plan of church organization would be a failure. Men in the church and out have always differed on points of law, and have had to harmonize these differences. Bishops, presiding elders, preachers and laymen would do well to remember that the wise and good St. Paul said all things that are lawful are not expedient; and the question of expediency should have been considered by the leaders on both sides of the controversy growing out of the invitation given Mrs. Snell to aid in carrying on revival meetings. It has always seemed to me, and doubtless to most persons interested, that the pastor and his members are better prepared to select laborers to aid in meetings in their own charge than a presiding elder who has seldom, if ever, been in the community. No one can reasonably claim that he should stubbornly ignore or not give due respect to a preacher in charge and to the church he serves. This seems to have been done in some cases under the plea of adherence to an inferential law of the church. To carry out the position of these brothers, a pastor risks his character to invite anyone to assist in a meeting who has not a license to preach, or has not the permission of his presiding elder. From all that has been written in this case, it does seem as if it was not so much the unlicensed woman they object to as to her being an evangelist and a believer in sanctification. These are more serious than the unsettled points of law. They are vital questions, and if not settled speedily, may split the church from center to circumference. Revolutions in church may be brought about very much as our national troubles—through the mistakes of leaders. Sometimes they are great and good men. In the majority of cases these mistakes are not discovered until it is too late. One of the most fatal mistakes of men is this: They think they can see and estimate the final result of an action. Infinite wisdom alone can do this. Every man and woman should say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" and when the answer comes, do it. God will take care of results.

HENRY WARE.

Pass Christian, Miss.

Is the Living Present.

The late Alexander Dumas, fils, though not a priest-hater, like his father, requested on his death-bed that "priests, soldiers and speeches" should not appear at his funeral. The subject of Christianity being broached, he remarked: "Mary worship has embarrassed Christianity. It re-introduced idolatry. Mary shall not be my intermediary between God and myself."

Dissidence in dogma is manifest. The time was when two or three men could not meet without discussing

"Providence, foreknowledge, will and fate
Fixed fate, free-will, foreknowledge absolute."

But when dogma was supreme in our pulpits, empty pews were a rarity. This is the age of sentimentalism, sensationalism, and—neglected church meetings.

In the Woman's Bible, God has been referred to as both male and female, but Satan always as male. Says Goethe, "You discover the design and are disgusted."

Mobocracy rampant. Chief Justice Snodgrass shot and killed Lawyer John R. Beasley. The jailed murderer held that his victim had published false statements about him. Whither are we drifting? We fear it will not be long until Snodgrass will lecture on the supremacy of law.

Edison combats the repeated statement that labor-saving machines are injurious to the working masses. All invention tends to saving labor. But he deems himself a benefactor, and not a curse of society. Laboring men should study the law of adjustment. New openings would present themselves for occupancy.

Carroll D. Wright, labor statistician of our government, startles the public with the statement that two thirds of our people are—homeless; live in rented houses, and pay in the way of rent one-fifth of their income. Many can not do otherwise than St. Paul, and live in rented houses; but with more frugality others could acquire a home of their own.

"Be it ever so humble,
There is no place like home."

Catholic priests divulge not facts learned in the confessional. Says Jesuit Lehm Kuhl in his Theology, used in numerous seminaries: "When summoned to appear in court to witness in a given case, the priest should deem himself a civilian, and, as such, entirely ignorant of the matter in question. What he knows about it he knows as priest. This knowledge is sacred."

The Mission of Methodism.

Methodism is a renewal of Pentecost. The one day is extended over a hundred years. In each there was a sound from heaven, an atmospheric movement, through all the house; in each the recipient people were filled with the Spirit and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. The field of the new movement is broadened to include the English-speaking world. In its essence and main significance Methodism is a spirit, a life, a renewal of the image of God in the souls of men. The spring burst forth where one would have least anticipated—in the sere and dry field of English Christendom. In the whole field of British Protestantism the driest spot was in the Established Church, where there were few signs of spiritual vitality. But in this desert, encrusted by form, ceremony, dogma and worldliness, a spring of fresh life burst forth in streams and pools of water. But, while within the area of the church Methodism was not of it. The one was a form, the other a life which could not be compressed into the effete molds of an earlier time.

Methodism has been a continuous revival, the Pentecost being extended and renewed day by day through the course of a century. As a new life, the law of its being is action, movement, the expulsion of its life to other individuals and communities. A formal or dogmatic church may remain quiescent; the forms and dogmas may be packed away in prayer-books or creeds to keep for a century without essential damage; but for a living and experimental Christianity to cease action, is stagnation and death. The stream is pure and vital only so long as it continues to flow. For a hundred years Methodism has obeyed the primary law of action. It has been an aggressive, a conquering, a molding force operating in the spiritual realm. The Methodist preachers have been a band of revivalists, going forth in every direction to secure captures from the ranks of the enemy. The secret of their success has often been sought; the secret is not difficult to find; the life within has been operative, pressing to ever new conquests. The business of a preacher was at the first to save souls; the business of a preacher now is, not to preach so many sermons, attend so many social services, but to save as many souls as possible.

The time demands renewed and persistent efforts by the ministry and church to extend the kingdom of God. The fathers found a great field in America—a new population, extending into the great West where religion was either wanting or appeared in a decayed form. The fathers had no field so great and white to the harvest as our own. The decayed Christendom of the Old World is brought to our own doors in huge fragments of Christian heathenism, spiritually dead and dangerous to the community. The fathers found a dead Protestantism; we find a dead Romanism, buried by invocations of Saints and the Virgin Mary and with genuflections and ceremonies. The problem how to make these dry bones live, is more difficult of solution than anything given to the past generation. The greater West again opens to us as the narrower one did to the fathers. Its very breadth amazes us. The problem is massive as well as difficult. At the same time steam and electricity have changed nearly all the conditions of the social world. Society is being remolded, and there is danger of its being remolded along secular lines. There was never more imminent need of a present and operative spiritual religion.

The solution of all these problems, now brought to us for consideration and treatment, is found in the creation of a spiritual life among these people. Get them thoroughly saved, and all the ugly questions about labor, capital and society will solve themselves. No church, so well as the Methodist, can handle this question. She has back of her the experience of a hundred years in saving men. The revival work must be continued with renewed vigor. Put the church itself in the best condition and get all the people at work for immediate results. What we want, above all, is a great and glorious revival of the work of God through the whole land. This would renew the face of society and make glad the people of the whole republic. Brother, put yourself in trim, and give the trumpet a fresh and louder blast! We may have to march seven times about the walls of this modern Jericho; but God has given us the task of blowing the trumpet at the final overthrow.—Zion's Herald.

Circulate the Church Paper.

In appealing to all our pastors to use their influence in enlarging our subscription list, we shall not be guilty of the folly of intimating that they have a great abundance of leisure time on their hands. On the contrary, we very well know that those of them who are likely to be of service to us are busy men with more work already mapped out than they can well do. But we wish to call their attention to the fact that by pushing the Advocate they may ease themselves of a good many other burdens. It would, in fact, be a wise economy of labor if they would make a systematic house-to-house canvass. If they are not ready for that, there is at least one thing they can do namely: take a copy of the Advocate to the pulpit with them on some Sunday, call attention to its merits, and urge the people to give it a fair trial in their homes. In addition to this, they can bring up the subject in the official meetings, and thus arouse the interest of the leaders of opinion in the congregations. There are some pastors who are so full of conceit as to their own powers that they imagine themselves competent to sustain the spiritual life of their flocks without any outside assistance. We have heard of such men sneering at the idea of turning themselves into newspaper solicitors. But the really great pastors cherish no foolish notions of this kind. They are well aware that they need whatever re-enforcements they can command from any source, and they do not regard it as beneath their dignity to assume any duty which both the dictates of common sense and the law of the church put in their way.

In a previous article we called attention to the policy of one of our wisest and most enterprising circuit riders. Being sent to a new charge, and finding that even his stewards were largely ignorant of church affairs, he laid himself out to get them to take the Advocate, but with only partial success. The inertia of an evil habit is hard to overcome. After thinking the whole matter over, he concluded to subscribe on his own account for every member of his Official Board. The experiment cost him in the outset a good deal of money; but he assured us a year later that it had paid back more than 300 per cent. on the investment, besides producing the most agreeable results in many other directions.

May we not ask every pastor in the church to give this subject some consideration? We address ourselves to all our brethren in the itinerant army, from the "giraffes" that feed in the stalls of "high steeple" to the humblest young probationers that are riding missions in the Tennessee mountains or the Louisiana cane-brakes, and beg their aid. We are utterly dependent on their co-operation. No matter what sort of paper we may make, its circulation will largely depend on the sympathetic assistance of those who are and ought to be its best friends, as they are also its chief beneficiaries. There is not a pastor in the connection that could not send us next week at least one new name. If all were to do that, it would push our list beyond the 30,000 line.

But we appeal not only to the pastors. Among our readers there are many thousand noble laymen and elect women who could, if they would, help us amazingly. It is not an impertinence on our part to ask their aid. If they love the Advocate, and are benefited by its weekly visits, will they not speak of it to their neighbors and acquaintances? A chance word may prove very effective. One good woman in Baltimore interested herself very greatly in this matter a year or so ago, and with large results.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

How to Be Popular.

The preacher who is very anxious about his popularity, and is constantly planning ways and means for promoting it, will probably not be very popular; that fruit does not grow on that tree. Be sincere. Be earnest. Be industrious. Be soulful. Be inspired by the largest and truest motives. Give yourself wholly to your supreme work. Be self-forgetful. Plunge into your great endeavor with holy abandon. Live wholly for God and the salvation of souls. Popularity will come so soon that it will astonish you. Such a preacher is in demand. Churches want him. Committees contend for him. The Bishops are perplexed by the multiplicity of calls for him. They tell the story of his efficiency far and near. Distant fields demand his services. He becomes known to the whole church, just because he did not seek to become known, but gave himself wholly to the work of God. The man who is not a self-seeker at all, but does the most for Christ and his church, is just the man who does the most for himself. The Lord takes care of his own. The good angels bless him with their smiles. The earth has a good place for him as long as he lives. He has abundance here, and is sure of a crown at last. If adversity come upon him in his journey, he carries sunshine of his own, and clouds can no more make his way dark than the night of Egypt could shut light out of the dwellings of Israel. He is sure of good things in both worlds. The self-seeker suffers the pain of his own anxious ambitions, and the torture of rivalries. He is annoyed by suspicions and envies. He is not quite happy in the successes he achieves because he craves others which he fears he may not secure. He is stung by the jealous thought that others may outrun him and win the prize he covets for himself. The way of peace is the way of entire, unselfish, perpetual consecration to God. And this brings prosperity also, for in matters of the soul the church clings to men who are utterly and manifestly sincere. For such ministers the church always has fields of labor and ample support, and heaven has an open door for them when their work on earth is done. No man is more in demand just now than the minister who is wholly consecrated to his supreme work, and can furnish converted souls as proofs of the fact.—Western Christian Advocate.

Our words have a reflex influence upon our characters. Exaggerated speech makes one careless of the truth. The habit of using words without regard to their rightful meaning often leads one to distort facts, to misreport conversations, and to magnify statements in matters in which the literal truth is important to be told. You can never trust the testimony of the one who, in common conversation, is indifferent to the import and regardless of the power of words. I am acquainted with persons whose representations of the facts always need translation and correction, and who have utterly lost their reputation for veracity solely through this habit of overstrained and extravagant speech. They do not mean to lie, but they have a dialect of their own in which words bear an entirely different sense from that given to them in the daily intercourse of discreet and sober people.—Peabody.

A missionary in Georgetown, Demerara, was visited recently by about twenty aboriginal Indians, led by a converted Portuguese. They had traveled over 1,000 miles, and it had taken them seven weeks to make the journey. They came seeking baptism, and pleading hard for a missionary, guaranteeing a congregation of 1,000 persons every Sunday.—Herald of the Coming One.

THAT'S THE WAY.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Just a little every day,
That's the way!
Seeds in darkness swell and grow;
Tiny blades push through the snow,
Never any flower of May
Leaps to blossom in a burst,
Slowly—slowly—at the first,
That's the way!
Just a little every day.

Just a little every day,
That's the way!
Children learn to read and write,
Bit by bit, and mite by mite.
Never anyone, I say,
Leaps to knowledge and its power,
Slowly—slowly—hour by hour,
That's the way!
Just a little every day.

Mysteries.

It is as natural for a being of intelligence to seek knowledge as for one of appetite to seek food, or a bird with wing to try to fly. One of the first facts impressed on the understanding is that every effect has a cause, and when the cause is not understood, it is a mystery. While man is oppressed with want that grows out of the necessity of existence, he devotes but little time and thought to the investigation of the merely mysterious, and, consequently, makes but little progress in solving the mysteries of his environments while struggling for bare existence. In contemplating himself and his surroundings, he frequently impresses that the mysterious, the wonderful, the glorious, are far off, along the highway of comets, in the depth of space, or wrapped in the folds of infinity, or obscured in the mist of the milky way; or he imagines there were wonderful and mysterious forces in operation that brought the earth from chaos to its present organic state, with its countless creatures of animal and vegetable life, and put the stars in their places. But does not the inquiring mind greatly err in going abroad through barren, silent and lifeless space, or back when darkness was upon the face of the deep, or where angels visited the earth, and were the guests of men, in looking for the mysterious, the great and glorious? There is no doubt but that the earth, in its present form and state, is the theater upon which mysteries, and wonders, and glories of God's greatest work are wrought, and not in the remote past, when "the earth was without form and void," or when huge monsters were the tenants of earth and ocean. That was a sign of desolation and solitude, a background upon which a picture of intelligent life, with all its possibilities, was to be projected. The central thought of God's wondrous works is the creation of man, involving, as a part of the plan, the incarnation of the creative Word; that the Word should become flesh, and dwell among man. What was a brief visit of an angel compared with God incarnate?—eating, walking, and talking with men; healing their sick, raising their dead, yet subject to all the physical and moral laws that govern common humanity, and, while he acknowledged the claims of these laws upon him, he frequently rose above them without apparent effort. Like other men, he ended his earthly career in death; but here the mystery and wonder and glory take on a new, and deeper, and higher interest and splendor. He was not confined in the dominions of death, but came forth, subjecting all forces unto himself, and doing this with the declared intent that man also might be exalted with him. Man has always had a vague consciousness that he ought to be superior to his material environments. This feeling springs from the remains of his original endowment of sovereignty. Jesus did for man what he had entertained in intense desire and faint hope. He did more: he not only endued him with new sovereignty, so that he could make all things work for his good, but brought him into blissful, conscious relationship to the Divine. The poorest and most miserable outcast of humanity feels in his heart that he was born to be blessed, and that something somewhere has gone wrong, or he would; and he who fails to eat of the Bread of Life puts in a hungry existence. God's work of creation is great—"bought out of all they that have pleasure therein." But to my mind the mysteries and glories of human redemption as far transcend those of the material universe as the heavens are higher than the earth. It is said "the angels desire to look into these things." They would be stupid, indeed, if such wonders did not excite their curiosity. I can conceive of no such wonders and mysteries as those that God kept "hid from the foundation of the world" until, "in the fullness of time," he sent his Son to reveal them unto us. The working of "cold material laws" on unconscious matter, however ponderous the body, or powerful the forces in operation, or extended the period of its duration, sink into utter insignificance in comparison with the revelations made and work wrought by Jesus of Nazareth. The mysteries are here now. "Now we know in part."

We were kindly invited, but was denied the pleasure of being with the auxiliary of Capitol Street Church in public meeting closing the Week of Prayer, but enjoyed being at First Church, Jackson, Miss., in regular meeting, and was much pleased to see how earnestly and happily they are working. Noting all that was said about filling a barrel with clothing, etc., for Bro. Methvin's charge, we were gratified to see that barrel No. 2 would, perhaps, be needed. One wise suggestion was to place a barrel in the Sunday-school room of the church to receive deposits. Their valuable and faithful secretary had sent a report of the Thanksgiving service held on Sunday, Nov. 24, at 7:15 P. M., when fine subjects were treated by competent sisters, and a beautiful recitation, "The Rosebud of Richmond," which was composed by the secretary, Mrs. R. R. Parker. She has consented to let us publish it in our column, so that those who wish can use it in public meetings. These were interspersed with an inspiring hymn, and another by the choir. A most interesting feature was their way of collecting offerings on this occasion. Invitations were written and sent out, enclosing envelopes, with the request that offerings be sealed within, a verse of Scripture written on the outside, with donor's name in one corner. The reading of the verses was a part of the program—no names being given. The collection amounted to thirty-three dollars—calling to her mind our dear Lord's age when he was called "up higher." They intend raising $40 for Wightman fund for out-going missionaries, $15 of which is in hand, and $20 for McNemar fund. The collection at Capitol Street Church was $20.

Shall we commemorate our Savior's birthday, which was to introduce light into the darkened lives of all mankind—woman the most needy—by giving costly presents to those who do not need them?—or shall we not give to the needy, send clothing to Bro. Methvin and Miss Holding, delight Dr. Anne Waltar, at Snohow, with money, "sheets for single beds, towels, pillowcases, scarfs for tables, swings, horses, dolls, baby chairs, etc.?" And those possessed of larger ability to place a substitute in China by sending annually $60 to support a Bible woman, or select from the following: $20 constitutes a life member, W. F. M. S., $100 an honorary life member, $300 an honorary life patron, $10 supports a girl in school in China one year. Shall we, of this age, lower the standard of gifts to our dear Savior—gold, etc.—the best gifts? Dr. Anne Waltar needs a physician. How many will give themselves?

Rev. J. J. Methvin, in letter, W. M. A.: . . . "In the clothing of the children we are aided now by a number of societies and individuals adopting each a child to clothe, and this is indeed a help. . . . Do not send us worn-out goods; we can not use them. Any good second-hand garment we can use. . . Let me say to those who make up boxes and barrels, when all the contributions are brought in, let the one who does the packing leave out what can not be used, and put in any garment that has good cloth in it. We can cut it up and make it over. Any new goods put in unmade, we can fit it better here. We need now boys' clothing very much. We have boys in age from four to fourteen. Hereafter I will acknowledge the receipt of every box or barrel that comes through the Woman's Missionary Advocate. Please bear in mind that our freight and express depot is Chickasha, Indian Territory; but if things are sent by mail, let them be directed to me at Anadarko, Oklahoma Territory."

OUGHT THE POOR TO GIVE?

"It is sometimes said that we have no right to ask the poor to give; that they can not and ought not to afford to do so. Did Christ thus judge? Did he say it was a pity the poor widow had been moved to give to the Lord, and that she ought to have kept the money for her own needs? How could he have said so who had the cattle on a thousand hills at his command, and the hearts of men in his hand to turn them as he would? Could not he supply the widow's need, and do you suppose that he allowed her to lack for food when she returned to her humble home? He is the same Lord now, and his promise standeth sure, 'Bring the tithes into my store-house, and I will pour you out a blessing till there shall not be room enough to receive it.' If we believe his word, we need not hesitate to ask the poor to give their mite to the Lord.

"Small gifts may accomplish great results. The value of a gift is not measured by its amount, but by its faithfulness and self-denial which prompted it, and which brings down the blessing of the Lord, that blessing without which the most stupendous effort falls valueless to the ground, and which can make the smallest offering of love bring forth an hundredfold. A doll sent by a child, a little card with one sweet Bible verse upon it, may touch a heathen heart, may convince of the love of God, and lead to Christ, may influence a whole family—who can tell where the influence will stop if the Lord but choose to bless it? Can you count the blades of grass that will come when you sow the tiny seed, if the Lord allows his rain and sunshine to fall upon it?"—Missionary Record, W. M. A.

MRS. E. D. JONES.

Mrs. D. H. McGavock,

FOREIGN SECRETARY OF THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Woman's Board of Missions is called to mourn the loss of another chief executive officer. The year just closing—1895—has claimed two of our most enthusiastic, untiring leaders.

Seven months ago our honorary president, Mrs. Julianna Hayes, was summoned from the church militant to the church triumphant—from labor to reward. Now the Father's voice is again heard saying to our faithful foreign secretary, Mrs. D. H. McGavock, "It is enough: come up higher!"

On the morning of Dec. 25, at her home in Nashville, Tenn., her spirit was borne back to the God who gave it. On Dec. 26 her loved form was laid to rest in the cemetery to await the resurrection, when it shall arise with the righteous dead to meet her Lord.

The loss of this soldier of the cross will be felt throughout the entire Southern Methodist Church. Yet, when we consider her eternal gain, we humbly bow in submission, and say:

"Thy hand the boon was given;
Thou hast taken but thine own;
Lord of earth and God of heaven,
Evermore thy will be done."

We know to the Christian there is no death. What seems so is transition; and though our workmen are being rapidly removed, the influence of such holy lives as our honored president and foreign secretary will cease only when it shall have reached the boundary walls of eternity.

We praise God for the inspiration they have been to the women of Southern Methodism. We praise him for their widespread influence, which reaches to the nations beyond. We praise him for the promised reunion in the home of the soul, where the redeemed of all nations shall assemble to "lay their trophies at his feet, and crown him Lord of all!"

May the Lord speedily anoint with a "double portion of her spirit" another to carry on the labor of love which she has so worthily performed since the organization of the Woman's Board of Missions!

"O happy, happy soul!
In ecstasies of praise,
Long as eternal ages roll,
Thou seest thy Savior's face.
Redeemed from earth and pain,
Ah! when shall we ascend,
And all in Jesus' presence reign
With our translated friend?"

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 29, 1895.

Resolutions Adopted by the Woman's Board.

The Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, M. E. Church, South, met Dec. 26, at 3 P. M., to take some action in regard to the death of Mrs. D. H. McGavock, foreign secretary.

On motion, Mrs. W. G. E. Cunningham was called to the chair, and Mrs. J. D. Hamilton appointed secretary.

After expressions of love and admiration for the dear departed, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

In the presence of a severe loss, in the shadow of a great bereavement, there is no consolation out of Christ. To-day we come to him as to a divine Helper, to a Friend who was once "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," for courage and sympathy. We pray that our faith fail not, that our zeal does not relax, that our hearts do not faint.

In the death of our valued and beloved Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Mrs. D. H. McGavock, each member of this Board has lost a precious friend and a wise leader, whose firm hand and ready pen carried the host of consecrated women to success in all our fields of labor—in China, in Brazil, in Mexico, and in Indian Territory.

Seventeen years have passed since our General Conference authorized the women of our church to organize for special work for foreign lands, and placed Mrs. McGavock in the front. During these seventeen years, by her foresight, prudence, and consecration, the "little has become a thousand," and mission stations have been opened and maintained, without being involved in debt, even when the country passed through a great financial crisis.

Our representatives in far-off lands have had in Mrs. McGavock a helpful, sympathetic friend, who loved them, cared for them, and advised them as a mother faithful and true.

Therefore, resolved, As servants of the Most High, submitting to his holy will, we thank God for her example, her unflinching heroism in discharge of duty, her perseverance, courage, strong faith, and consecration.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves anew to the work she loved, and to which she gave time and strength and talent; that we put upon the altar of sacrifice, as did she, all we have and are, through Christ; that her memory is a sacred legacy we will cherish while we wait and work.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to her bereaved husband, her only son, and her grandson, and pray that they may have the strong arm of her God about them, guiding, consoling, and strengthening, until called to join her in the "blessed beyond," where loved ones never part.

Resolved, That, as a Board, we will be present at the funeral obsequies, thereby in some sense showing our profound respect as well as love.

Resolved, That a copy of the above preamble and resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Board, published in our various church papers, and a copy presented to the family of the deceased.

MRS. W. G. E. CUNNINGHAM,
Chairman.
MRS. S. C. TRUEHEART,
MRS. H. N. MCTYEIRE,
MRS. I. G. JOHN,
MRS. PORTER WEAKLEY,
MRS. J. D. HAMILTON,
Secretary.

Resolutions Adopted by the Board of Missions.

Whereas, Mrs. David H. McGavock, foreign secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, has, in the infinite wisdom and mercy of God, been called to her reward; And, whereas, Our honored sister has, during the period of seventeen years, with surpassing skill, undying devotion, and invincible faith, inaugurated and carried to successful completion large plans for woman's work for women and children in China, Mexico, Brazil, and the Indian Territory; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the undersigned members of the Board of Missions, assembled to-day in Nashville, bow in humble submission to the will of God in this dispensation of his providence.

Resolved, That in recognition of her splendid achievements and invaluable service rendered the church and the cause of missions, we hereby express our profound sense of the irreparable loss which has been sustained.

Resolved, That, as friends of this elect lady, whose fellowship we have enjoyed, we suffer personal bereavement, and in Christian love tender to her husband and son our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes; that a second be sent to the family, a third to the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, and copies be furnished the press for publication.

Signed in behalf of the Board.

Where Can He Go?

A religious paper out West is greatly exercised because the churches keep their doors closed five nights in the week, thereby forcing the poor man to spend his evenings in the bar room. This "rampant inconsistency" is luridly set forth in a recent issue by a colored cartoon in which the aforesaid poor man is represented as standing in front of a brilliantly lighted saloon on a snowy night gazing yearningly at the closed door of a high-steeple church across the street. He wants to go to meeting, but the door is shut, and the heart-wringing question is asked, "Where can he go?" Altogether it is a stirring picture, but unfortunately we had seen something like it before. We know where there is a high-steeple church, and a saloon across the street from it. And we have seen more than one poor fellow standing in front of that saloon gazing sadly at the closed door across the street—wondering, probably, where he could get another nickel. But just around the corner stands a rescue mission, where anyone can find shelter and as good a free lunch—minus liquids—as the average saloon affords. And within easy reach are three other places, kept open by Christian benevolence, where any man who is willing to wash his face can spend the evening, and have something to read. We have the deepest sympathy for the unfortunate of every class, and we are deeply conscious of the shortcomings of the church; but until the places of resort already provided by Christians are better patronized, or until the saloon keepers begin to complain that our Wednesday night meetings interfere with their business, we see no necessity for turning our churches into social clubs, or our pulpits into free-lunch counters.—Richmond Advocate.

Religious faith has kindled the music of the world. Unbelief never sings. Despair composes no sonnets. Oblivion is not a prospect over which to chant hosannas. The sinful condition is not favorable to exultation and praise. Doubt begets no joy. The world would never have known a sacred song had Christ not brought life and immortality to light. It is the radiance that shines from heaven into trusting hearts that illumines life's pathway, and puts a new song into the mouths of happy pilgrims.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Did Not Die Right.

The Christian Inquirer makes the following statement, which will, we hope, provoke profitable thought. "It is stated that Deacon J. W. Converse, of the First Church in Boston, died worth $8,000,000 and left not one dollar to any benevolent institution. We don't understand it. The kind of religion that allows a man to heap up $8,000,000 and die without doing anything for the cause of Christ, must be singularly defective. Mr. Converse leaves but two children and no great business to be carried on. He did not die right. The pulpit and the press ought to say so."

Yes, the Wesleyan will say so; and, more than that, will say that he did not live right.

We can not see how a man can live according to Bible teaching, can follow Christ, and yet accumulate $8,000,000. If the spirit of Christianity has a good hold on him, it matters not how much he may make honestly, he will be giving to the needy world so liberally that it will be impossible for his gains to reach that figure. This is heresy, we know, to the selfish world, but it is gospel truth to anyone who wants to be like Christ, and go home to live with God when he dies. A selfish man has the right to make and keep as much as he pleases if he is willing to take the consequences, but one who wants the divine nature must give, and give so that it would be impossible for very large amounts of money to stick to him.—Wesleyan Advocate.

There was a time when in evangelical circles it used to be thought that the one business of a Christian was simply to secure the salvation of his own soul. Happily that time has passed away. Who does not see what a poor, limp aim that is, compared with the object of him who realizes the obligation and the honor of Christian service, and consecrates himself, soul and body, to do all the good he can, to do good to all he can, to do good on all occasions he can? How truly noble is the life that is regulated and stimulated by such an aim! The church of Christ will never rise to her proper level till this becomes the predominant spirit of her people. The form of men's service must be regulated by their gifts; but the duty of service in some form ought to be recognized as not less binding than the duty of faith.—Prof. W. G. Blaike, D. D.

The gulf between aspiration and achievement is often so deep and wide that it swallows up one's courage and hope. Between the thing that was planned and the thing that is done there is a distance which seems immeasurable. If one suffers himself to brood over this chasm between the ideal and the real, he loses the power of effective work; the consciousness of his own weakness, the sense of the imperfection of whatever he does cuts into his soul and destroys his power. To achieve we must become blind, in a certain sense, to our own defects. We must recognize the lines along which we work most naturally, and we must know the tools with which we work most effectively.—Christian Union.

Worry makes most of the tangles which hinder our progress in life. We worry over the past and get entangled in it, and it is impossible to go forward. We worry over the present until our hands and brains and work are in inextricable confusion, and it is impossible to go forward. We worry over the future until all our powers become involved in it, and it is impossible to do the work of the present so that we may go forward. It looks sometimes as if we worry a good deal with malice aforethought—like the child who deliberately gets himself tangled up with his playthings that he may not have to run at mother's call.—Exchange.

The net product of every man's life will be increased in value relatively with the healthful development and discipline of all the man's powers. It is only good sense to assert that God himself can make better use of a whole man than of a half a man at any time. This world is not greatly in need of malformations, or eccentricities, or oddities, or cranks. What the world needs more than anything else is men—whole men—robust, disciplined, equipped, symmetrically-developed men.—Rev. E. P. Farnham.

The coast of human life is strewn with wrecks who came to their destruction through lack of decision. Many people deceive themselves by thinking they must come to Christianity through long series of reasonings; that to permit themselves to be wrought up to immediate action in some special service would be hasty and unwise. A decision is always the work of a moment, but it is the pivot on which a whole life swings.—L. A. Banks, D. D.

Prayer is so mighty an instrument that no one ever thoroughly mastered all its keys. They sweep along the infinite scale of man's wants and God's goodness.—Hugh Miller.

Worth While to Ask.

When the champions of skepticism are most vociferous and most confident of the waning influence of the Bible, it is worth while to ask one's self what has become of their predecessors who were equally bold and bitter from a hundred to a hundred and fifty years ago. Does anybody read their books? Does anybody, except special students of history or theology, recall their names? Did they weaken permanently in any degree the power of the Word of God over human hearts and lives? On the contrary, the Bible never has had such general and willing heed as to-day, and there never was such a spirit of frank respect and admiration for it even among those who deny its inspiration and authority as now. We need not worry about the hold of the Bible upon men. We only need to see to it that we regard it aright ourselves.—Exchange.

An intelligent and responsible ballot was never more needed. We have too much ignorant and irresponsible voting. Every election brings this fact to the surface. Education and religion are the safeguards of national life. It is becoming more and more manifest that the rising generation must be fitted for the exercise of the elective franchise. The right to it must be based upon something more than mere citizenship or manhood. A voter should know what the privilege means, and be able to use it to the best account. He should not be at the mercy of the ward politician, nor be a purchasable commodity, awaiting the highest bidder, but he a man of thought, probity and patriotism, wielding his power for the public welfare.—Presbyterian.

We want broad-minded, meditative men. We want guides, we want reality, we want souls who will do and act before God; who would have that disposition in building up the spiritual church which the reverential Middle Age masons had, when elaborately carving some graven imagery or quaint device, unseen by man's eye, on the fretted roof of a cathedral—they worked on God's house, and before God!—Norman Macleod.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you temperance, self-control, diligence, strength of will, content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.—Charles Kingsley.

If the church register could be compared with the Lamb's Book of Life, and the names not written in both stricken off the pages of the former, we fear there would be a large decrease in the next annual report of membership. "Is your name written there?"—Baltimore Advocate.

He who has seen only the daylight knows nothing of that heaven of stars which all night long hangs overhead its lamps of gold. When death has dusted off this body from me, who will dream for me the new powers I shall possess? It were vain to try. Time shall reveal it all.

The attempt to serve God without love is like rowing against the tide. Love makes duty sweet. The angels are swift-winged in God's service because they love him. Jacob thought seven years but little for the love he had for Rachel. Love is never weary.—Watson.

It is said that during one of Mr. Moody's meetings a worker approached a young man with the question, "Are you a Christian?" The young man looked up, smiling good-naturedly as he replied:

"Oh, no, sir; I am one of the choir."

Find your niche, and fill it. If it be ever so little, if it is only to be a hewer of wood or drawer of water, do something in this great battle for God and truth.—Spurgeon.

Some people never accomplish anything for Christ, because they wait until to-morrow to begin.

As long as the devil can handle our money, he don't care how much noise we make in church.

Those whose whole minds feed upon riches recede in general from real happiness in proportion as their stores increase.—Burton.

Some men are counting on getting to heaven because they have never been in jail.

It depends a good deal on who says a sermon is good as to whether it is or not.

To be a good listener is to possess as great an art as to be a good talker.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. D. Bass writes from Wagoner, I. T., Dec. 26, 1895: "You may say through your columns that we have just closed a good meeting at Wagoner, I. T.—a growing town of about twenty-five hundred people. We had about one hundred additions to our church. Methodism is marching on."

Rev. B. T. Crews: "I have been well received by this kind people, and expect, under divine influence, to have the best year of the three. This is the second dry day in the history of Mansfield. Thank God that the saloon went with the old year. Like the old year, I believe it went never to return."

Rev. T. Cameron: "We have been received in our new home and charge in good Injun fashion, which means a great deal. I had the misfortune to fracture one of my ribs while unpacking my goods on the sixteenth instant, from which I have suffered a good deal of pain. Am improving, however."

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, P. C., Gunning, Miss., Dec. 31, 1895: "Bro. J. A. Randolph preached Saturday and Sunday to good congregations. He held our first Quarterly Conference, which was the best I have known in my ministry in the Delta. Bishops' fund paid in full, and a good report from all the stewards. The prospects were never so bright for a great year in every respect. Blessing upon our district and the entire Conference for 1896!"

Rev. M. L. White, Montrose, Miss., Dec. 30, 1895: "Please let me say that I served the people of Mt. Carmel four years. They were good and kind to me (better than I deserved). I was loathe to leave them. On arriving here last Saturday I found a number of good people at the parsonage, who gave us a hearty welcome and showed their love not only in words, but in deeds. I trust the Lord will be good to Montrose circuit, and the circuit to him, and that I measure up to the expectation of the people."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Hermanville, Miss., Dec. 29, 1895: "We arrived at our new home, Hermanville, Dec. 24 and found a very warm reception. Several ladies and gentlemen met us at the depot, and escorted us to our nice and comfortable parsonage, where we found warm fires and a hearty welcome, and soon were invited to the dining-room, where we found the table well supplied with the good things necessary for the body; and you may be sure we did our duty well. After dinner the brethren, with a wagon, brought our freight and baggage from the depot, and left us in full possession of the parsonage, and after all had left we found several nice things left by loving hands for our comfort. May God graciously bless all the good people!"

Rev. B. F. Patterson, Abbeville, Dec. 30, 1895: "Please put Abbeville down on the list of those who can give their preacher a hearty reception. My better 'nine-tenths,' by the kind assistance of the good sisters, was ready for housekeeping when the preacher arrived, via overland, with horse and buggy on the eleventh instant. Have not quite made a complete round yet; but have been moving right along in the work. Our people are in fine spirit. Two of our much-loved members have been called to their reward since my arrival. I hear many kind expressions of our former pastor. This is the only kind I want to hear. This indicates our spiritual thermometer considerably above the freezing point. For our spiritual prospect we thank God, and take courage."

Rev. H. C. Morehead, Dec. 29, 1895: "The work in Water Valley opens auspiciously. Our Methodism is imbibing the progressive spirit and catching the quick and prosperous step of this delightful city. Main Street Church, planned by the Bishop and his cabinet, is assuming form. The energetic and faithful pastor, Bro. T. B. Clifford, will lead his enterprising people to victory. The noble people have received in a royal manner the two pastors, Bowen and Clifford, and the presiding elder. The parsonage of Wood Street has been refitted and refurnished throughout. The hired house for Clifford has been so kindly and considerately treated. God bless the good women who lead in this work! The district parsonage was taken in hand and made ready for the coming of my family. Bro. Bowen is having a good meeting. God bless you. Pray for and come to see us."

Rev. B. H. Rawls, P. C., Auburn, Dec. 31, 1895: "We reached the parsonage at Adams on Dec. 17, and found a company of the ladies and gentlemen of Adams Church awaiting our arrival. The ladies had us a good dinner prepared, and we were in condition to enjoy it. We have a very strong church at this place. The membership is 330. The congregations that attend this church are very large, and for that reason the people have erected a large tabernacle to accommodate the congregation on special occasions. I understand that there was a camp ground here before the war. We have an excellent parsonage built at a cost of about twelve hundred dollars, and it is partially furnished. Our church here is in good condition. We have two prayer meetings a week, and the Sunday-school is fine. There are about one hundred and sixty pupils that belong to the school. Bro. E. H. Mounger, our presiding elder, held our first Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday. He preached us two good sermons, and our people are well pleased with him. I have many things to say, but maybe you can't bear them now. At some other convenient season I will call on you. I trust that the ADVOCATE will prosper this year. God bless you and it!"

Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 12, 1895.—We have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia and indigestion, from which I have been a sufferer for years. I have taken three bottles, and am greatly relieved of this complaint.—A. F. Smith, 1640 North Claiborne St.

Hood's Pills cure sick headache, biliousness.

Hydropathic Preaching.

Some there are in the pews who measure the preacher by his ability to "make them cry." And with such people it requires very little ability to effect the result. A recipe for the process can easily be given—a traditional little child-story, a stereotyped death-bed scene, a time-honored description of heaven, mixed with a few of the preacher's own tears, and delivered with proper funerality of voice—it never fails with those who hold to the hydropathic theory of religion. And there are some preachers who are never so happy as when drawing water from these shallow wells. Such apparently agree with Aristotle's conception of the function of the brain, which might be expressed in the famous dictum of modern materialism, with the variation of one word: "The brain secretes water as the liver secretes bile."

There are some principles involved in what may be called the hydrostatics of preaching which ought to be kept clearly in mind. One is that repressed (not suppressed) tears are usually more powerful than effusive tears. It is not the traditional "great tear-drops rolling down his cheeks" that give the greatest moving and persuasive power to the orator, but the hidden tears which drives all the engiocry of his thought. You have been lifted to the fourteenth story of some great building by the tireless power of the hydraulic elevator; but you did not see the water that lifted you. Its power was expanded in lifting you, not in giving you a shower bath. It is the speaker who impresses you that he could weep if he would, but who does not because he is too deeply in earnest, that most profoundly affects you. Let not the flood-gates of tears be lifted, but rather wait until the resistless pressure breaks them open. Be not ashamed of tears, but do not shed them until you can not help it.

But underneath all this lies the general law, which so few seem to recognize, that the creation of an emotional state should never be regarded as an end, but as a means. The hydropathic preacher and hearer naturally regard the sermon as "effective" and "powerful" if it stimulates the lachrymal glands sufficiently. But powerful and effective in what respect? Does the emotion thus engendered expend itself in any new or increased moral activity? Unfortunately those who most enjoy this "luxury of tears" never think of anything beyond the emotion itself. When they have wept most profusely over some fanciful description of a poor orphan child dying of hunger, there is not the slightest prompting in their hearts to minister relief to the fatherless and the widow in their own community. They flatter themselves that they are tender hearted because they are so easily "touched" by such descriptions, when in fact every tear they shed in this shallow, sentimental way has the same effect upon their hearts as the dripping of the water from the roof of the cave upon the stalagmite below—to increase its stony hardness. Unexpected emotion, emotion sought or excited for its own sake, is the sensuality of the mind, and is possibly even more fatal and debasing in its moral effects than physical sensuality.—Standard.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED.

Any lady or gentleman who desires a good business education and a good position should write for free catalogue of Draughon's Practical Business College, Nashville, Tenn. This College guarantees positions under reasonable conditions, and will allow students to deposit money for tuition in a bank until position is secured. It is strongly endorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers, and others.

Has no vacation; students enter any time. Board $10.00. It pays part of railroad fare. Four weeks by Prof. Draughon's method of teaching book-keeping is equal to twelve weeks by the old plan.

HOME STUDY.

He has prepared books on book-keeping shorthand and penmanship, especially adapted to home study. Address, stating your wants, J. F. Draughon, President, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

Weary in Well-Doing.

People get tired waiting for the consummation of their worthy and beneficent activities. Much that is hopeful and promising is already in sight if they would only remove the specks from their glasses and take in the cheering significance of the signs of improvement about them. For instance, municipal reform seems now in hang fire in New York, and many who went into it with eagerness are disposed, on this account, to abandon further effort. Yet great progress has been made. Opposition multiplies and appears in unexpected quarters, but the good work goes on steadily. The discouraged overlook the fact that changes attempted in city government are not easy to effect, and require united action and determined and persistent effort. As in civic, so in ecclesiastical matters. Many grow weary when there is delay and hindrance in their undertakings. At first they push the enterprises in which they are engaged with bright hopes and much energy, but as time advances, the issue is not up to their expectations, and they begin to think that their labors have been largely in vain, or they tire of renewing their efforts and of waiting the day of full realization. They forget, however, the strength of the evil forces arrayed against them, or the clipping influence of weakened faith. Nor are they mindful of the fact that God is either testing them, or delaying the complete accomplishment in order to larger, more permanent and more glorious results. It is both foolish and sinful to grow weary in anything to which we have set our hands in God's name. If we are co-workers with him, difficulties and delays should only awaken a mightier confidence. He takes his own time to realize his purposes. It is ours to hold on and work on bravely and unceasingly, and sooner or later success is sure.—Presbyterian.

Now—The Time to Make Money.

Last month I cleared, after paying all expenses, $175.46; the month before, $149.93, and have at the same time attended to my regular business. I believe anyone, anywhere, can do as well, as I have not a particularly good location and no experience. When you have an article that every family wants, it is very easy selling it. It seems strange that a good cheap Dish Washer was never before placed on the market. With the Climax you can wash and dry the dishes for a family in two minutes, without putting the hands in water; as soon as people see the Washer work, they want one, and that is why so much money can be made so quickly. All you have to do is to send for a sample Dish Washer. The Company does not ask any pay until you have them sold. For full particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio. I feel convinced that any lady or gentleman in any location can make from $5 to $10 a day, as every family will very soon have a Dish Washer. Try it, and publish your experience for the benefit of others.

No good deed, no genuine sacrifice, is ever wasted. If there be good in it, God will use it for his own holy purposes; and whatever of ignorance, or weakness, or mistake was mingled with it will drop away, as the withered petals drop away when the full flower has blown.

Our Premium Offer.

Rev. W. C. Black, New Orleans—

DEAR BROTHER: The Bible received yesterday. I am delighted with it. Think it is very cheap. Every Sunday-school teacher ought to have one.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN A. GUICE.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 14, 1895.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to January, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

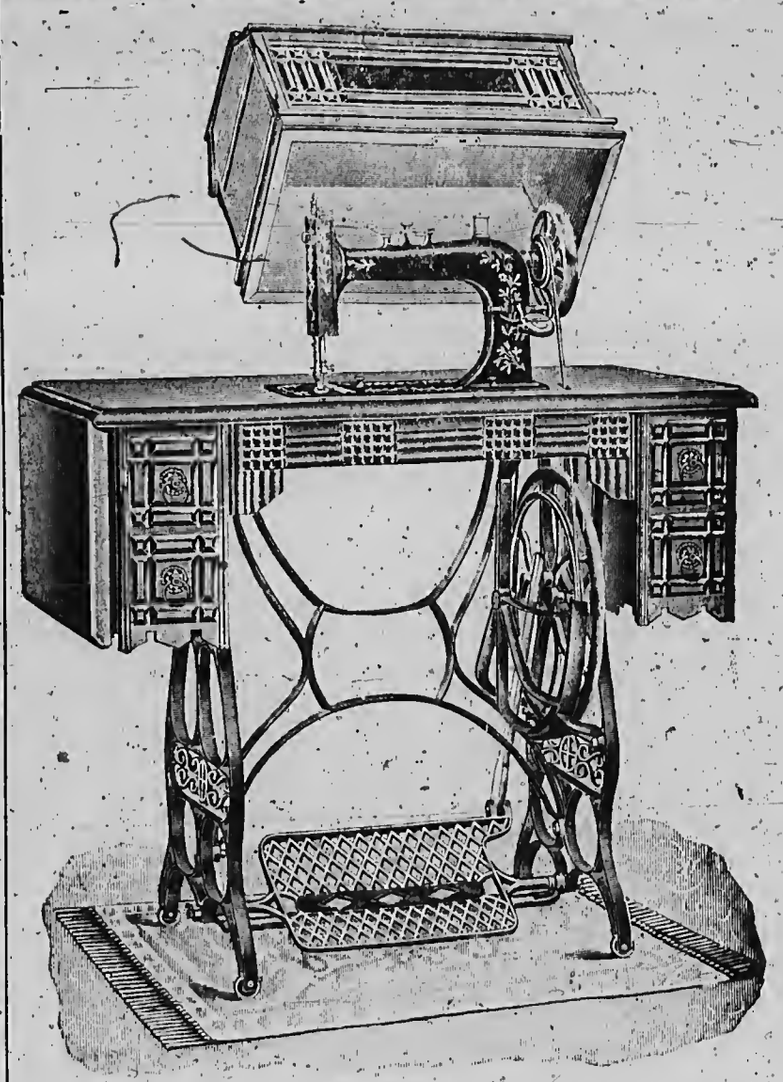
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one roller-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

"Go Forward."

It is as natural for man to look forward in joyful anticipation to the future as it is for the birds to sing. While to-morrow is in no sense ours by right, yet we should plan for it and be inspired by the hope of its coming. Without the future with its promises and glorious possibilities the present would be meaningless, the past would be but a mockery.

As we stand upon the threshhold of a new year, it is fitting that we should seek to profit by the failures and disappointments of the past, and in the oncoming days rise to higher things. What man among us in glancing back over the days gone by is entirely free from misgivings and regretful feelings? How few can say that through all the days of the year just passed they have done their best! Alas! how many vows have been broken how oft has duty been slighted, how frequently the tempter has come upon us unawares, how little improvement there has been.

Whether we have lived well or ill, we should rejoice in prospect of opportunity to amend faults and build character upon a surer foundation. The past may have been glorious, but if we use our time aright, the future may become more glorious. Little hope of improvement, however, is there for the man who fancies he has done well enough. The artist, the mechanic, the musician, the student, the merchant, the Christian who thus thinks within himself is the child of stagnation and failure. A truer sentiment was never voiced by poet than this from Longfellow:

"Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end or way;
But to act, that each to-morrow
Find us farther than to-day."

The man or the woman in whom thought of the future arouses no loftier purposes and aspirations, no desire for temporal or spiritual advancement, is little above the level of the brute creation. There must be within us the purpose to go forward, to achieve greater success, else there can never be progress in any direction. Ideals are a necessity. Much force is there in Whateley's remark: "Though we may not be able to attain unto our ideals, woe unto us if we have no ideals!"

Many people know not what to do with time. It hangs heavy upon their hands. Yet each moment comes to us a precious gift from God, to be used in fitting ourselves for a higher destiny and for the glory of our Creator. "Golden opportunities," it is said, "are nothing to laziness, but industry makes the commonest chances golden." We know not what the future may have in store for us, yet it is our plain duty to prepare for it. Our work will not be done till God calls us home. Each in his sphere should strive to make the best of himself. The Christian, above all, should aim to make each day better than the preceding. We should "forget the steps already trod, and onward urge our way." A motto worthy of constant remembrance is this:

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun

When the Israelites, fleeing from before the Egyptians who were in hot pursuit, had reached the borders of the Red Sea, at the very moment when all hope of escape seemed to be cut off, the Lord said unto Moses, their leader, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Behind and on either side were their enemies; in front were the floods of great waters. How could they advance? But when they began to obey the strange command, Moses having stretched forth his rod over the sea, the waters parted, and they crossed over safely. In like manner God, speaking to us through his Word and through the Holy Spirit, ofttimes now commands us to "go forward," to advance to higher ground, when to do so seems impossible. But when we make the attempt, the waters of doubt are parted, and over the mountain ranges of difficulty passes are found for our feet. Roaring lions of opposition, when boldly approached, are found to be chained. What God expects us to do can be done.

To many the future is far from being radiant with promises of better things. Out of the hearts of some who have been overtaken by deep poverty, misfortune, or sore affliction, the light of hope has almost vanished. To bring the sunshine back to these burdened, grief-stricken souls is the mission God has for those to whom "the lines have fallen in pleasant places, and who have a goodly heritage." To the humble, trusting Christian the future can never be wholly dark; for, whatever betide, "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost" are his abiding possession. God and heaven are still his own.

In some pastoral charges "going forward" should mean the building of a new church or parsonage, or perhaps the liquidation of a church debt of long standing. In others, it should mean the making of much-needed repairs upon the house of worship. In others, again, it should imply an increase in the pastor's salary; in still others, the healing of an old feud.

Every preacher and every layman should pray, work for, and expect an increase this year in the numerical, financial and spiritual strength not only of his local church, but also of the church at large.

To some Christians "going forward" signifies setting one's face like a flint against debt and extravagant living. To others, it signifies avoidance of financial speculation; to others again, the laying aside of malice, a more complete mastery of that unruly member, the tongue. To still others, greater liberality of purse, more prayerfulness, more active participation in benevolent work, and greater regularity in attending divine worship. Let each examine his own life, and see what imperfections are there. As time rolls on, every Christian should look forward to closer communion with God, to a deeper, richer experience, to a higher development of the Christian graces.

The Louisiana Sunday Law.

The saloon keepers of New Orleans are not content to enjoy the undisturbed and undisputed right to ply their infamous vocation six days in the week; they demand that the seventh day shall be theirs also. For the accomplishment of this purpose they are organized and working with a diligence and an adroitness worthy of a better cause.

There lies before us as we write a circular which they are distributing in wholesale quantities throughout the State, placing them in the hands of every voter whom they have any hope of influencing. Their aim is single. They are not handicapping themselves with side issues or with a multiplicity of demands upon the law-making power. The repeal of the Sunday law—this is their one aim. Give them that, and all questions of tariff currency, etc., may go to the winds. They care nothing about a man's religious faith or political creed; if he will only do their bidding in this one matter of the Sunday law, he can count on their vote for a seat in the Legislature. The good citizenship of the State needs, therefore, to bestir itself. It will not do to sit with folded hands and allow things to take their course. When a man announces himself as a candidate for legislative honors, no matter what his ability or social position may be, it should be demanded of him that he declare himself on this point. Men of whom better things would naturally be expected may make secret pledges in order to secure the liquor vote. This is a matter of no ordinary importance to the State of Louisiana. A colossal step backwards will be made if the Sunday law is repealed.

We deem it our duty as a journalist to sound this note of warning in the ears of the people. Brethren, we tell you plainly that this battle is not going to be won easily. Gird on your armor and quit you like men.

The Venezuelan Commission.

The Venezuelan Commission appointed by President Cleveland is as follows: D. J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court; R. H. Alvey, of the United States Court of Appeals, District of Columbia; Andrew D. White, ex-president of Cornell University; D. C. Gilman, president of Johns Hopkins University; and F. R. Condert, one of the ablest lawyers at the New York bar. The personelle of the commission will command universal respect at home and abroad. We venture the prediction that the report of this commission will be adopted by Congress, and that Great Britain will either accept it or submit the matter to arbitration—what she ought to have done at first.

BOOKS.

"SECOND BLESSING VERSUS HOLINESS." By Rev. H. Walter Featherston, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference. Yazoo City, Miss.: Pearl Press Printing Office.

The above is the title of a pamphlet of eighty-six pages, which has been on our table for a few weeks, but which we have not had time to read until now. The work is well printed on good paper. As to its literary merits, it is hardly necessary for us to speak, the name of the author being a sufficient guarantee of high quality. The title of the book indicates its character. It is written for the purpose of disproving the "second-blessing" theory of sanctification. This the author seeks to do from a scriptural standpoint. Little use is made of the so-called "standards of Methodism," further than to present numerous quotations from them as proems to the several chapters. The appeal is made to the Bible as "the only and all-sufficient rule both of our faith and practice." The author's spirit is admirable. While he makes a vigorous presentation of his own views, he is fair and courteous to those who differ with him. In addition to the scriptural argument the author has several chapters concerning what he regards as the evil results of the propagation of the second-blessing theory.

We predict for the work an extensive circulation. Discussing, as it does, a question which is now engaging a large share of attention throughout Methodism, and doing so with marked ability and in a spirit of love, it will doubtless have numerous readers of all shades of opinion on the holiness question. It can be had from the publisher, or from Rev. R. W. Bailey, Jackson, Miss.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL STUDIES; OR, EXPOSITORY AND HOMILETIC NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL LESSONS FOR 1896. By E. E. Hoss, D. D., LL.D. With maps and illustrations. Cloth. 400 pages. Price, $1. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

We take great pleasure in commending to our preachers and people this carefully prepared volume from the pen of the able editor of our general organ. The comments upon the lesson-text are given in the form of a continuous narrative, differing in this respect from Peloubet's and Hurlbut's "Notes." To many this form of treatment is preferable. These notes evince research, accurate scholarship, and considerable exegetical ability. Appended to the discussion of each lesson-text are a number of very helpful practical points and homiletical hints. Preachers and teachers will find these to be of especial value. Though not as elaborate in the way of literary illustrations and references as some other lesson commentaries, the volume in hand combines many admirable features, and is worthy of a wide circulation. It is beautifully printed and bound, and would make a splendid gift-book for a pastor, teacher, or pupil. The work is adorned by a number of excellent engravings. Dr. Hoss deserves the thanks of the church for having so creditably supplied a much-needed volume.

The Methodist Review of Missions.

[We heartily commend the following article to all our readers, lay and clerical.—EDITOR.]

The Review of Missions, for January, 1896, is an exceptionally fine and full number of this splendid publication. This periodical is ably and judiciously edited by Drs. I. G. John, W. R. Lambuth and H. C. Morrison. Any single number is worth the price of the publication for a whole year. The Review is beautifully and elegantly printed on the presses of our own Publishing House. The shape and size of it is wonderfully convenient.

No preacher in the connection, traveling or local, can afford to be without this Review, and it ought to be in the homes of all our leading laymen. It will tend to stimulate the missionary zeal and enterprise of our people. Our great trouble on this subject is more a lack of information than of ability. We are abundantly able to do whatever ought to be done, and our people are generally willing when they come to see and understand what ought to be done.

The present number of the Review is richly burdened with information in its several departments. Under the head of "Home and Foreign Missions" there are five choice articles. The first, "Rio de Janeiro," by Rev. H. C. Morrison, is very interesting and suggestive. It ought to stir somebody to do a great and much-needed work in that great city.

"The Mission Work of our Churches the Heart of our Church Life," by Merrill E. Gates, an address before the Massachusetts General Association of Congregational Churches, is a very superior paper, and touches the heart of the subject. There are sixteen seeds for as many sermons on missions in this one article.

"The Island of Formosa," by Robert W. Lambuth, B. A., is exceedingly interesting and entertaining. If we had this island for Christ, we would hold the gate-way to both China and Japan.

"The Missionary Uprising among the Young," an address by Mr. Jno. R. Mott, of New York, delivered at the fourteenth International Christian Endeavor Convention, Boston, Mass., is a stimulating and encouraging paper at this particular time. We are now on the threshold of a great uprising among our own young people in this glorious South-land of ours.

"Some Problems of the Age," by the very Rev. F. W. Farrar, Dean of Canterbury, taken from the North American Review, is a paper that will attract general attention and stir profound thought. We are living in the greatest age the world has ever known, and we have greater problems to solve than any that ever engaged the attention, time and thought of man. A man or woman who would be idle or indifferent now is hardly worthy of the name. Each and all ought to be up and doing.

The other ten departments of this Review are full, fresh and intensely interesting. If we had the enterprise and could find some way to put this publication in the majority of the homes of our people, we would soon have a great revival and uplift on the subject of missions. Our people perish for lack of knowledge, and yet the storehouses of the church are full of it. How can we get this bread into the hands of the people? GILDEROY.

NOTES.

Bishop Haygood is in better health than for several years past.

Hereafter the address of Rev. J. B. Walker will be Mississippi City, Miss.

Rev. W. H. Saunders has made a good start in his new field at Carrollton, Miss.

The postoffice of Rev. J. H. Holland for a time will be Ellisville, Jones county, Miss.

Rev. Paul Whitehead has been secretary of the Virginia Conference for thirty-six years.

The Chicago Bible Society will soon begin the erection of a building in Chicago to cost about $500,000.

A reception was given to Bishop Hendrix by the faculty of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school on the third.

On the third instant, while conducting a funeral at Opelika, Ala., Dr. Allen S. Andrews was stricken with paralysis, from which he is not expected to recover.

Rev. H. S. Spraggins, of the North Mississippi Conference, was married on the second to Miss Lila M. Nangle, of Buena Vista, Miss. May peace and prosperity attend them through life!

Rev. S. P. Jones, who was to lecture in this city on Tuesday night, did not arrive in time to fill his engagement. A wreck on the Louisville and Nashville road delayed his arrival. He will probably speak on Thursday.

Rev. T. B. Regan, of the St. Louis Conference, let the light of his countenance shine into the ADVOCATE office a few days since. He has been visiting relatives in Mississippi and Louisiana for several weeks.

The gift of $1,000,000 to the Chicago University, by Miss Helen Culver, of Chicago, is the largest gift that university has received, excepting the gifts of Mr. Rockefeller. This gift assures a further gift of a million from Mr. Rockefeller.

Ex-President Harrison stated a fact very neatly in a recent missionary address when he said that some people try to prove from the works of God that there is no God, and to prove from the Word of God that God has no Word.—Canada Presbyterian.

Acetylene, the brilliant new gas, can be easily liquefied and stored until needed. When it is to be used the pressure is lessened, and it becomes gaseous again. It gives more than ten times the light of coal gas burned in the best burners.

Rev. W. C. Hayes has an article in the last Nashville Advocate, in which he shows that the Louisville Conference pays less per capita for ministerial support and for all purposes than it did twenty-two years ago. That Conference has increased largely in number, but has not grown in the grace of liberality.

The Y. M. C. A. Building, in this city, was dedicated on the first. Appropriate addresses were made by J. H. Keller, C. H. Sunte, Rev. B. M. Palmer, and Rev. J. T. Sawyer. The building is quite a handsome four-story brick structure, and is admirably adapted to its purpose. It cost about fifty thousand dollars.

On returning home from a preaching tour, a missionary of Singapore found his church all newly whitewashed. He was greatly surprised and gratified, and asked, "How was the work done?" He was told that it was done as a labor of love on the part of a new Chinese convert, who said, "I did it to thank God."—Exchange.

The pastor who will do as we once did, when not an editor—canvass in two weeks his congregation—will have two surprises. Surprise No. 1: How few of his members take any religious newspapers. Surprise No. 2: How many, by a small amount of trouble and loss of time, he can induce to take the paper he recommends.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

The two hundred and eighth Volume of Littell's Living Age opens with the issue of the week ending Jan. 4. The beginning of a new volume is an excellent time for the beginning of a new subscription, especially when, as in this instance, it includes a new—a lower price. For 1896 the subscription price will be six dollars. Good news truly to its subscribers and to all others who appreciate and enjoy good reading.

Several church corporations in the State of New York have been presented to the grand juries of their respective counties for gambling. It may be that the simple enforcement of civil law will avail to teach some people in the church that the preacher knows what he is talking about when he protests against fish-ponds, grab-bag and chances as means of raising money in church festivals.—Arkansas Methodist.

At the holiday season a remarkable service was held in the Kentucky State Prison, at Eddyville, by the Christian Endeavorers of the neighborhood. The meeting was held at the invitation of the prison Christian Endeavor Society. It was a wonderful service, and there were more than one hundred professed conversions before the end of the day, and more than four hundred persons expressed a desire to lead a better life. Kentucky has four strong prison societies.

Li Hung Chang, the celebrated Chinese statesman, in a conversation with Bishop Hendrix, said, "Say to the American people for me to send more men for the schools and hospitals, and I hope to be in a position both to aid and to protect them." From such a source this is profoundly significant. A great and effectual door is opened unto us in the East. There are about six hundred missionaries already in China, but five times that number could not do the work that is needed.

Dr. D. J. Waller, president of the British Methodist Conference, sent a telegram a few days since to the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, asking them "to arrange for united prayers with the British Methodists for continued peace and good-will between the two kindred nations." Bishops Keener, Hargrove and Fitzgerald replied by cable as follows: "We will join in prayers for continued peace and good-will between the two kindred nations, and when the war clouds are all blown away, we will heartily unite in praises." Let all the people say, Amen!

"We have heard of a member of the church who is greatly troubled because members of his family do not seem to be interested in the church or its work," says the United Presbyterian; "and yet this man does not take into his home a single church paper. He has himself to blame for the careless condition of his family. One who does not patronize a grocery store must expect to go hungry." There are many such "greatly troubled" church members nowadays, and their only solace seems to be sought in the very edifying 36-page Sunday morning blanket-sheet. Was it Spurgeon, or Moody, who said that "the angel Gabriel couldn't preach to a man who had just been reading the Sunday paper"?—Mid-Continent.

Don't wait for us to send you a dun, but send us the money at once. If you wish to discontinue your subscription, you have only to say so, after paying up to date.

Books Wanted.

No doubt many of the readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE are doing good deeds and rejoicing in Christ Jesus in the beginning of the new year. Will not one of you give a set of Clark's Commentaries to Bro. J. T. Meyer, and another give a copy of Watson's Biblical and Theological Dictionary, or Leverett's Latin Lexicon, to Dr. S. H. Wainright? These faithful men are members of our Japan Mission Conference and "servants of the Most High God." Second-hand books in good condition will be quite acceptable. If you will give, please send books to Benj. S. Rayner, Easy, Miss. Express office, Okolona, Miss. Please prepay expressage or postage to this place.

New Orleans City Mission.

The first quarterly meeting of the New Orleans City Mission will be held at Carondelet Street Church on Friday, Jan. 10, 1896, at 7.30 P. M. It is important that New Orleans Methodists rally to this glorious work. Let all attend. JOHN T. SAWYER, President.

CHILLIFUGE is guaranteed to cure Chills and Fever. It makes rich blood. Children love it.

CHILLIFUGE contains Iron that does not blacken the teeth, nor constipate the bowels. Makes rich blood.

CHILLIFUGE possesses all the virtues and none of the disagreeable features of Quinine used by Physicians.

CHILLIFUGE does not require a knitting needle or a stick to mix every dose. No iron filings to settle at bottom of bottle and irritate a weak stomach.

When you feel shaky, Malaria has singled you out as a victim. Take CHILLIFUGE; it will rout the trouble at once.

CHILLIFUGE is a superb appetizer, and is highly valuable for weak and sickly children, as well as the aged and feeble.

Christmas Revival in Water Valley.

The glorious revival that began in Wood Street Church, Water Valley, during the session of our Conference, Nov. 27 to Dec. 2, 1895, was protracted from Christmas Day, and continues with increasing interest. The presiding elder, Rev. H. C. Morehead, and T. B. Clifford, pastor of Main Street, this city, are assisting the pastor. The Lord is blessing us wonderfully. Since Dec. 15 we have received 40 members into the church, and others will join.

These good people gave the presiding elder and the two pastors and their families a most cordial welcome. The new furniture in Wood Street parsonage and in Bro. Clifford's "hired house" eloquently express the thoughtful kindness of the Methodist ladies of Water Valley. The Main Street Church will be built. Bro. Clifford is securing cash and subscriptions every day. He has organized a good Sunday-school, and is preaching in a private house in North Water Valley. He and his good wife are doing a great work.

Bro. Morehead and family command the love of all our people. He is planning wisely for Grenada district. Bro. Clifford and I are debtors to these dear people for their love and kindness to our families. Our worthy predecessors have prepared this great field well for a great harvest. We appreciate their work.

We are preparing for a successful year. Come to see us. The united efforts of the two pastors and the presiding elder here are much appreciated by these people. J. A. BOWEN.

Water Valley, Miss., Jan. 2, 1896.

For General Debility Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. T. P. WYNN, Tarboro, N. C., says: "No other preparation compares with it in ordinary cases of general debility."

Foreign Mission Correction.

If anyone has taken the trouble to add the receipts for the Foreign Mission since Nov. 6 to the receipts previously, as reported in the ADVOCATE of Jan. 2 it will be seen that the whole amount will be $971.85 The whole amount collected and paid over to the Missionary Board is $976.85, as reported in the ADVOCATE. The discrepancy is because one subscription was inadvertently omitted, viz: From the teacher of Class No. 10 Sunday school, First Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., $5.

C. G. ANDREWS

Should be kept at stables and stockyards.—Salvation Oil is the best friend not only of man, but of dumb beasts as well. For swelled joints, strained tendons, old sores, saddle galls, and wounds of all kinds there is no remedy like Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents per bottle.

Under her new Constitution, the State of South Carolina will neither grant divorce for any cause nor recognize divorces granted in other States. While we deplore the extent to which divorce is carried in many States, we can not think that the protecting of infidelity in marriage relations, or the refusal to recognize the infidelity of husband or wife as just ground for sundering those relations, can conduce to the dignity and purity of the home. Our ideas of the sacredness of the marriage relation are not heightened by laws which protect adultery in the home circle.—Arkansas Methodist.

For Only $15

The Texas and Pacific Railway Company will this year furnish to regularly ordained clergymen, duly credited missionaries, or others solely engaged in ministerial duties, one thousand-mile tickets, good on all portions of that system.

Applications for these tickets should be made to the nearest ticket agent of the Texas & Pacific Railway, or address GASTON MESLIER, Gen'l Pass. and Tkt. Agent, Dallas, Texas.

A Fortune Lost.

It was not at Monte Carlo or Baden-Bader, but at home, in her own house, when her system broke down under the strain of Uterine trouble, that her fortune and good health were lost. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC restored it rapidly by its wonderful influence and tonic power.

1. The repetition of the Lord's Prayer does not operate like a charm, as Roman Catholics vainly believe. They are enjoined to pray their Paternoster—the Lord's Prayer—every day as often as there are beads in the rosary. The Buddhists have a contrivance similar to the rosary.

2. Divesting ourselves of superstition—the bane of the Christian religion—we must accept the statement that the Lord's Prayer is a sample prayer. This admits of no gainsaying, since the Master prefaced the same with the injunction: "After this manner, therefore, pray ye." This can mean neither more nor less than: 'Formulate your prayers after this subjoined pattern."

3. An analysis of the Lord's Prayer will reveal the fact that it is indeed an ideal prayer, brief, pertinent, comprehensive. The invocation is grand. Sad, that in this particular so many prayers are deficient. The seven petitions touch on all matters of the Christian's solicitude. The added benediction: 'For thine is the kingdom," etc., is not in the original. Christ did not authorize it. Some scribe, deeming it apropos, added the same.

League Odds.

"All for Christ!" is the League motto of our church. The motto of the League of our sister church is no less expressive: "Look up, lift up!"

Brief reports from the various Leagues of Louisiana and Mississippi are welcome. Use postal cards.

In twelve months from now it will be difficult to find a congregation in our church devoid of an Epworth League.

In selecting a lecturer for our League, the pastor should not be overlooked.

The League meetings should be bright, cheerful, and enticing. Tombstones are out of place. But hilarity no less.

Holiness

Holiness is readiness to do what the Lord requires.

Holiness exhibits its imitre chiefly at home.

Holiness is a life in full harmony with profession.

Holiness is satisfied with God's dealings with man.

Holiness is restless if no souls are won for Christ.

Holiness understands the Psalmist when he declares, "My cup runneth over."

Holiness bodly declares: "I can do all things through him that strengthened me—Christ."

Salvation is not merely an act whereby the soul is rescued from hell. Its chief virtue lies in its power to introduce a man into a quality of being upon which no fire of hell can kindle.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

A secular paper says: Even the most casual onlooker must be impressed with evidence of the growing degeneracy of the American theater. Of those who have lent to it such dignity and worth as any theater can have, one after another has died, until among both actors and playwrights not one is left. Nor is there promise of any to come forward and fill their places. And the reason is given by a writer in the Century, who says "that all the talk about elevating the stage is sentimental rubbish; that the people do not want an elevated stage; that they wish to be amused, and not instructed; and that all that he and his fellows can do is to follow the general economic law of supply and demand, and cater to the public taste."

A Very Desirable Calendar.

Calendars of all kinds and sizes herald the coming year. Many are to be had for the asking—many without asking—but to them as to other things the rule might be applied that what costs nothing is worth about what it costs. The calendar we always welcome has just reached us. We refer to the one published by N. W. AYER & SON, Newspaper Advertising Agents, Philadelphia. This is—seems if possible even better than its predecessors. Handsome enough for the library, and yet carefully adapted for every-day use, it is naturally a great favorite. The firm's well-known motto, "Keeping Everlastingly At It Brings Success" appears this year in a new and very attractive form. The daily presence of this inspiring motto is worth far more than the price of any calendar. The date figures are so large and clear that they can easily be seen across the room. The reading matter on the flaps will also possess interest to the progressive. Those who have used this calendar in other years will not be surprised to learn that he demand for it is constantly increasing. Once introduced it becomes a welcome friend. Its price (25 cents) includes delivery, in perfect condition, postage paid, to any address.

HOME CIRCLE.

THOSE WHO HAVE GONE BEFORE.

BY REV. J. W. CHADWICK.

Sigheth low in every heart,
We hear it each and all—
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.
They throng the silence of the breast;
We see them as of yore—
The kind, the true, the brave, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

'Tis hard to take the burden up,
When these have laid it down;
They brighten all the joy of life,
They soften every frown.
But, oh, 'tis good to think of them
When we are troubled sore!
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Although they are no more!

More home-like seems the vast unknown,
Since they have entered there;
To follow them were not so hard,
Wherever they may fare.
They can not be where God is not,
On any sea or shore;
Whate'er betides, thy love abides,
Our God forevermore!

Worry and Fretting.

Avoid worry and fretting, for it is only a habit, and does not help you in difficulties, makes no sunshine on a rainy day, no light where there is darkness. On the contrary, it causes the eye to lose its lustre, the roses to fade from the cheeks, and the fair brow to be lined with wrinkles. Then remember you alone are not the sufferer, for on those around the shadow of your gloom and unhappiness which you have no right to cast into the lives of husbands and children is attributed to you. True, man and woman too, were born "to trouble," but do not convince yourself that you are the high priestess appointed to deal each one out his portion, for, alas! too soon the cup is quaffed, which is given alike to king and peasant. Again old Father Time is accused of writing his story on a fair brow. Did you ever realize how well you have helped him, for while he has traced the outlines, you have filled admirably the sketch. In moments of trial apply the words of the old song, and see with what happy results we find—

"To-morrow the sun may be shining,
Although it is cloudy to-day."

Look up then and see brightness behind the darkest cloud, for it is only the background of a picture called Life. In your hand is the brush to fill in the lines, be they light or dark. Choose then with your clouds the bright tints of the rainbow and in your night let the stars shine out to guide you to the happiness which can be reflected so beautifully on those around you.—B. W.

A Child's Thoughtfulness.

An old gentleman writes us that one day lately he sat alone and lonely, thinking back over the seventy-seven years of his life, grieving for friends whom he had loved and lost, wondering how he was going to get through the Winter, and getting more sad every moment, with no company but his gloomy thoughts.

Just then the door opened, and a little girl came in with her arm full of Christian Advocates, and said: "You look so lonesome I thought I'd bring you some papers to read."

Touched by the kindness, the old man thanked the child, and was soon so interested in reading that he forgot the burdens he had been groaning over just before, and found many articles that gave him comfort and consolation, so that he was able to bear his troubles with a better spirit.

He adds that the little girl was very happy over the result of her experiment, and he hopes other children will take pattern after her and find some sick, lonely, or sad person to whom the old Advocates would be a blessing, as those were to him.

Books and Reading.

The great secret of right reading, as of all other right work, is that it be conscientious and thorough; that of one who does not forget that life is brief and work sacred. An earnest man may be left in the company of any books. There was a world of significance in Johnson's putting the motto on his watch, "The night cometh." This little islet of our life—with deep calling to deep round it forever, and the tide covering it moment by moment—is too small for any neglect. Eternity comes up like the night, hiding all things, and blotting out the sun. There is no time for trifling. The true Pactolus, with every sand golden, is life. Stupidity or commonplace is tolerable only when no better can be had; like bread of moss or sawdust, that needs a famine to get it down, except with simpletons, who will eat anything. Men gave up acorns when they grew wheat; and black bread had no chance against white where there is either taste or sense. Some men read too much and think too little; that is, they read too much for their thinking. By rail, you can remember no details of a journey; the speed confuses recollections, and leaves only general impressions. To gallop through book after book is to turn intellectual Gilpins. You might as well be carried blindfold from one point to another, you would know as much of the road you came. Let the whole bench of your faculties sit in full court on whatever you read, and rather read five good books well than a hundred with light inattention.—Dr. Cunningham Geikie.

The True Home Principle.

One principle which ought to permeate the reciprocal relations of family life is that of self-improvement for the sake of others. "Get that you may give," was the strong, terse motto given by a favorite teacher to the pupils in a girls' school. "Make the most of your life that you may do most for the lives of others," said Phillips Brooks. But what shall we get that may contribute to the enrichment of other lives? Not material things surely. These are hedged about with moneyed values quite out of proportion, usually, to our purses. Fortunately, the essential possessions—love, joy, peace and all graces of the Spirit—are attainable by the weakest and poorest of us, and these furnish a noble equipment for the wear and tear of daily life. We say, in hackneyed phrase, "I can not afford" this or that. But we can afford these priceless gifts of character. Nay, in the ordering of our home life we can not afford to be without them. However meager our mental endowments, however barren our external surroundings, we may yet have that "moral sentiment," which Emerson tells us is "the foundation of culture as of character." There is encouragement here for the most humble and ordinary woman.—Congregationalist.

How to Save Boys.

Open your blinds by day and light bright fires by night. Illuminate your rooms. Hang pictures upon your walls. Put books and newspapers upon your tables. Have music and entertaining games. Banish demons of dullness and apathy, and bring in mirth and good cheer. Invent occupations for your sons. Stimulate their ambitions in worthy direction. While you make home their delight, fill them with higher purposes than mere pleasure. Whether they shall pass boyhood and enter upon manhood with refined tastes and noble ambitions depends on you. With exertion and right means a mother may have more influence over the destiny of her boys than any other influence whatever.—Appleton's Journal.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

The Old Reliable.
Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations without. Hence, to cure the disease the cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure ever be effected. Warner's SAFE Cure is established on just this principle. It realizes that of all diseases arise from deranged Kidneys and Liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and, by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.
For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for all Nervous Affections, and physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Its past record is a guarantee of continued performance.
WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO.,
London, Rochester, Melbourne, Frankfort, Toronto, Paris.

Be Sweet Toned.

The sweet-toned bell rings out sweetness, however gently or rudely it is struck, while the clanging gong can not be so touched as not to respond with a jangle. There is the same difference in people.

From some you learn to expect always a snarl or a whine or a groan, while others give forth words of cheerfulness and joy. When the grace of God possesses mind and heart, you will respond with a sweet spirit to every touch, kind or unkind, rude or loving. You will be a voice for God, in whatever place or company you are thrown, a witness for charity and kindness and truth. "When a man lives with God," says Emerson, "his voice shall be as sweet as the murmur of the brook and the rustle of the corn." Be a sweet-toned bell.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Learn to Work.

No young man makes a success in life unless he works. He can not loaf around street corners and stores without deteriorating. He must learn a trade or do some honest work; or, before he knows it, he will be a chronic loafer, despised by all with whom he comes in contact.

Do something, no matter how small, and do it well, and you will eventually find yourself climbing the ladder of success. There are many obstacles to overcome, but toil, grit and endurance will overcome them all. Help yourself, and God and good men will help you.—Farm and Fireside.

Manual Training.

It is difficult for a boy—almost impossible—to get the chance to learn a trade. The unions fix the number of apprentices. Every citizen not selfishly interested rejoices when some new manual training-school is established. Hence Mr. Hackley, President of the Board of Education, of Muskegon, Mich., who gives $135,000, and $5,000 annually while he lives, to construct and support such a school, and promises to endow it at or before his death with $100,000, to provide instructors for it, performs a deed which has a direct relation to the prosperity of his city, State, and country.

Cyrus W. Field said that he considered half of his success in life to be due to his punctuality. He was always at his office at the very minute each morning, and if he made an appointment to talk business to a man, he never failed to keep it.

"I have made thousands upon thousands of dollars by being on hand at the right moment," he says; "and I consider punctuality as strong a point in a business man's favor, as—well, it is second only to honesty."

Opportunities do not crawl under our feet like terrapins, but they fly over our heads like birds. We must look up if we would not miss them.—Baltimore Advocate.

When home is ruled according to God's Word, angels might be asked to stay at night with us, and they would not find themselves out of their element.—Spurgeon.

HYGIENE.

Total Abstinence and Perfect Health.

Sir Henry Thompson says: "Perfect health is compatible with total abstinence from all intoxicating beverages. All such drinks can with perfect safety be discontinued, either suddenly or gradually." Sir Andrew Clark said: "I am bound to say, that for all honest work, alcohol never helps a human soul." Professor Sidney Ringer says: "Varied, repeated and prolonged experience and the testimony of many medical men prove that troops endure fatigue and the extremes of climate better if alcohol is altogether abstained from. * * * Modern trainers recognize the apparent fact that power of sustained exertion and the resistance to fatigue is best promoted by abstaining from alcohol." The London Lancet stated that "Given digestible, solid food and fair, that is, normal digestive power, water alone is all sufficient as liquid. * * * Health, happiness and work find stimulus enough in the unsophisticated well of nature." The saloon is only a supply to the demand. When the demand is gone the saloon will vanish. We need a successor to the saloon, where both men and women will not be ashamed to go, and yet there are hundreds of resorts today where one can enjoy himself better than in the saloon, depending entirely upon his tastes and disposition, and the field of attraction is daily growing larger as we advance in refinement and intelligence. There is not much hope that there will be any reform for the multitude who are given over to the saloon; it is the young who are constantly taking the place of their elders to whom we must look for the adoption of higher ideas. Herein can every humanitarian take heart, and work for the regeneration of his kind.—Charles H. Shepard, M. D.

The Necessity of Composure.

One thing that, if not a necessity, is at least conducive to comfortable living, is hardly appreciated even by those who most need it. This is the need of having some time each day entirely alone. It is impossible to live comfortably without composure of mind, and there is no way of securing it so surely as to spend a short time each day (and a long time is even better) in silence and free from interruption. It is soothing to tired nerves, and strengthening to a tired mind. The person who does not like to be alone, who does not even strongly desire to be alone once in awhile, is already on the high road toward ill-health. It is the only way to have relief from the confusion of always being in some one's presence, which will, sooner or later, either affect the nerves or weaken the mind.

Whenever, or however you live, then, see to it that you have at least one hour out of every twenty-four that you can call your own. Some busy people may at first think this is impossible; but we rarely find anyone who does not waste more than this every day, and who is not the worst off for the waste. The very act of taking this hour strengthens the will, and adds that much to the comfort of living, since a weak-willed person is at the mercy of everything and every person that encroaches upon his rights; and not the least of these is the right to live a healthy, comfortable life.—Demorest's Magazine.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

BEAUREGARD EGGS.—Boil four eggs twenty minutes. While they are cooking prepare a cream sauce with one tablespoonful of butter, one of flour and one cup of cream or milk. Melt the butter without browning, add the flour and stir until smooth, then add the cream or milk. Stir continually until it thickens. Season with salt and pepper. Add the whites of the eggs, pressed through a sieve, to the sauce. Lay nicely browned even pieces of toast on a hot platter, cover with the sauce and whites, then put on top the yolks of the eggs pressed through a sieve also.—Table Talk.

It is easier to get people into the church then to get them out. We throw wide the gate, stir up the people, by any means, drive them in pell-mell and presently complain of a worldly and dead church.—Arkansas Methodist.

OBITUARIES.

WARREN—William Colson Warman was born Sept. 3, 1823, and died in Covington, La., Oct. 19, 1895. For many years he lived near Pearl River, Washington parish. He was one of my stewards at "Pleasant Valley" in 1858. At his home a bounteous hospitality was extended to the traveler, and especially he loved the company of the Methodist itinerants. He was the friend of the widow and the orphan. Many years of his life were spent as superintendant of the Sabbath-school. Possessed of a strong, musical voice, he loved to sing sacred music at church and about the fireside. After the war he moved to Covington, La., and engaged in mercantile pursuits for many years. The infirmities of age and affections of body never soured his genial disposition. He loved the young people, and delighted to see them enjoy the innocent pleasures of life. In 1894 the writer again became his pastor. He was now partially paralyzed, seldom ever able to attend church service; yet he delighted to have the pastor to visit him and sing, pray and converse about spiritual things with him in his home. In 1895 he said to me: "When you hear I have passed away you may feel assured that I have gone to heaven." Seven days before death a stroke of paralysis silenced his tongue and rendered him helpless. Yet he could look up with face wreathed in smiles, and towards the last utter two words, "Home, heaven."

He leaves the legacy of a good name and well-spent life. May God help the dear wife and children to so live as to meet, an unbroken household, in "bright mansions" above!

Ront. B. Downer.

Vicksburg, Miss.

MOORE—Mrs. Mary Catharine Moore (nee Clark) was born in Anderson district, S. C., Nov. 2, 1831. Her father moved to Winston county, Miss., in 1836, and to Attala county in 1843, where she was married June 8, 1848, to H. F. Moore, with whom she lived a happy wedlock until Dec. 17, 1893, when in Kosciusko, Miss., she departed this life.

Sister Moore was converted and joined the Methodist Church at a camp meeting in November, 1843, from which time until her death she evinced the life and character of a true Christian and faithful church member. In all relations of life—as wife, sister and friend—she was affectionate, kind and helpful. Those who knew her long and intimately says: During the forty-seven years of married life not one angry word ever passed between her and her husband." She was always ready, according to her ability, to aid the needy and comfort the distressed. Preachers who have served the old Attala circuit and Kosciusko station will remember her hospitality and words and deeds of helpfulness. She was a regular reader of the Bible and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, from both which she derived much comfort.

The illness which resulted in her death was long and painful, but she bore it with Christian patience. She died, as she had lived, happy in the Savior's love and in the blessed assurance of entering the rest that remains for the people of God. On Dec. 18, after funeral services by Rev. J. C. Park, pastor, her body was deposited in the cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." G. W. Backman

PEGUES—Dr. Charles A. Pegues was born in Chesterfield district, S. C., June 26, 1827, and died at his home in Abbeville, Miss., Dec. 26, 1895.

He received the degree of M. D. from the Medical College, Charleston, S. C., after having graduated in the Literary School at St. Mary's, Md. From South Carolina he moved to Alabama, thence to Arkansas, thence to Bolivar county, Miss., thence to Lafeyette county, where he was engaged in his profession till death.

He was married to Miss Nannie W. Ragsdale in 1855, who died in 1874. This union was blessed with five children. Three of these survive him. In 1876 he was married to Mrs. J. J. Logan, widow of Col. John Logan, C. S. A., with whom he lived happily till death.

Dr. Pegues was wise, conservative, very spiritual. He loved the church, and was its faithful supporter. He loved home, and took great pleasure in making home attractive. He was so considerate of the happiness of his companion. His illness was brief and very painful. He knew it would be fatal, and expressed a perfect readiness to depart and be with his Lord.

While the hearts of his loved ones were sad on Christmas Day, they "sorrow not as those who have no hope," but look for the grand reunion which shall last forever.

SAUCIER—Miss Adelia Saucier, daughter of Bernard and Martha Saucier, was born March 15, 1850, and died at her father's, in Harrison county, Miss., on Dec. 18, 1895.

Delia was an amiable, sweet-spirited girl, and was a source of joy to all who knew her. She attended the Poplarville High School during the last session, and had returned for the present session when she was taken sick with typhoid fever. At her request, and with the consent of her physician, her parents carried her home, where she had all the care of attentive physicians and loved ones; but the disease made haste and stole her life away. Surrounded by loved ones, and with assurance of Christian triumph, she departed this life singing, "We are crossing over the river," etc. By a gracious providence her pastor was permitted to attend and conduct the funeral and burial exercises, and a more perfect expression of Christian resignation he never witnessed than was manifested by her loved ones. Her parents fully resigned to the Lord's will, and anticipating her glorified condition and their happy reunion, praised God and shouted for joy.

Good-by, Delia; we'll meet again.

E. T. Breland.

Too Fast

The world is in a hurry. We are living too fast. We do not take the necessary time to reach our best. Character can not be cultivated well amid a constant rush of engagements. It needs opportunity to think and pray. "The steady cold," says some one, "yields the solid ice. Flowers will not bloom in a whirlwind. Plant life appears to need its breezy days, but it waits also on quiet days, breathless nights, and still dews."

A man of leisure may be "the devil's darling," but the man who is always on the run is about as much so. "In quietness shall be your strength," wrote the prophet. Many are not religious because they are oppressed by a needless multiplicity of interests. They belong to so many organizations, so many clubs and societies, that they never stop to think. The truth can not get a fair chance at them, or, as a New York preacher puts it, "The Holy Ghost can scarcely overtake us." Impressions fail to get their grappling-hooks on us as we rush along. A serious thought is at once dissipated by a different one which immediately succeeds it.

This bustle and haste of our nervous, superficial life is a great disadvantage to us. Our young people are not meditating enough to get Christian principles deeply and firmly implanted in their minds and consciences. Consequently, they are hard to hold—in the League to-day and somewhere else to-morrow. We would urge the husbandry of time. Belong to less; go less; read, think, pray more. Find companionship in yourself. Remember that your nature is not like the string of an instrument which is only musical when kept on a constant strain. You need relaxation, quiet, a still hour brought into your day. In this you will gather strength, stability, maturity, depth, enrichment. Cease being ever on the go. Plan for the still hour, and let your soul delight itself in quietness for a season.—Epworth Herald.

As to the Sins of the Patriarchs.

Do you suppose that if the Bible had been written by some learned doctor, revised by a committee of eminent divines, and published by some great religious society, we should ever have heard of Noah's drunkenness, of Paul and Barnabas' quarreling, or of Peter's lying, cursing, or dissembling? Not at all. The good men, when they came to such an incident, would have said: "There is no use in saying anything about that. It is all past and gone; it will not help anything, and it will only hurt the cause." If a committee of such eminent divines had prepared the Bible, you would have had a biography of men whose characters were patterns of piety and propriety, instead of poor sinners, as they were. Sometimes a man writes his own diary, and happens to leave it for some one to print after he is dead; but he leaves out all the mean tricks he ever did, and puts in all the good acts he can think of, and you read the pages, filled with astonishment, and think, "What a wonderfully good man he was!" But when the Almighty writes a man's life, he tells the truth about him; and there are not many persons who would want their lives printed if the Almighty wrote them.—Exchange.

The Human and the Divine.

The stupendous achievements of railway engines—nearly two miles to the minute for a little while; ninety miles to the hour for one; sixty-four miles an hour for nearly nine consecutive hours—now fascinate the eye of the world.

Surpassing all in strength is the electric locomotive, now drawing more tons of freight than any two steam locomotives yet built, on a steep grade in the Baltimore tunnel.

Man is getting all the credit. Let Warman, the engineer poet, teach the final source of all these achievements:

"I hear the whistle sounding,
The moving air I feel;
The train goes by me, bounding
O'er throbbing threads of steel.

"My mind it doth bewilder
These wondrous things to scan.
Awed, not by man, the builder,
But God, who made the man."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address borrowing from health.

If you have borrowed from health to satisfy the demands of business, if your blood is not getting that constant supply of fat from your food it should have, you must pay back from somewhere, and the somewhere will be from the fat stored up in the body.

The sign of this borrowing is thinness; the result, nerve-waste. You need fat to keep the blood in health unless you want to live with no reserve force—live from hand to mouth.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to January, '97. (A little later it will be February, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2.45.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Forty-two million is the municipal budget for New York City for this year.

Mayor Swift, of Chicago, says that if the city council is corrupt, it is the fault of "prominent citizens."

Carnegie and other owners of iron and steel works at Pittsburg are asking Congress for an appropriation to build a ship canal from Lake Erie to that city.

Chicago, New York, St. Louis, San Francisco and Cincinnati have all put in formal application with the Democratic National Committee for the National Convention.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works, of Pennsylvania, has just shipped a cargo of twenty oil-burning locomotives, ordered by the Russian government for the Trans-Caucasian Railway.

The street car companies of Detroit offer to sell seven tickets for a quarter, but the mayor demands eight for a quarter, with transfers, and says that he will veto any other arrangement.

Fire started in a stock of fireworks in St. Louis, on Jan. 2, and in the explosion the building and those adjoining were wrecked. About five persons were killed, and over thirty were seriously wounded.

The street railway strike in Philadelphia, precipitated by a few hot-headed agitators, against the urgent protests of President Mahon and other leaders, ended in a complete fiasco. Most every line is running its cars as usual.

On Jan. 4 the President signed the bill admitting Utah into the Union as its forty-fifth State. The new State contains about 84,000 square miles, and is the second largest silver producer in the Union, being outranked only by Colorado.

A mass meeting of the friends of Armenia was held in Chicago, last week. Miss Clara Barton, president of the Red Cross Society, made an address, in which she said $500,000 would be needed to relieve the sufferings of Armenia. She expressed her willingness to go with any expedition to that country.

Congressman Boatner, of this State, introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives providing for an investigation by the Judiciary Committee of the action of Comptroller Bowler in refusing to pay the bounty appropriation made by the last Congress, because, in his opinion, the appropriation was unconstitutional.

W. J. H. Traynor, the supreme president of the American Protective Association, has issued to the councils of the order throughout the country a circular of nearly 8,000 words, reviewing the progress of the organization and the political situation. Mr. Traynor states in his circular that a large number of the members of Congress are also members of the A. P. A., pledged to certain measures.

FOREIGN.

The Hawaiian government has entered into a contract with an American to establish inter-island communication by cable.

Prince Bismarck has announced that if the state of his health permit, he will attend the state banquet at the royal castle, Berlin, on Jan. 18.

The ministers of Hamilton, Ont., tried to prevent the street cars from running on Sunday, but the courts have decided that it is not contrary to the Sunday laws.

During the present difficulty Spain has sent to Cuba 116,000 troops, and Campos wants more. The insurgents started with a force of 100 men, and now have 60,000 in the field.

It is reported that China has ceded to Great Britain four states on the frontier between China and Burmah, and that an English-Chinese commission is about to meet to delimit the new frontier.

Michael Davitt, the prominent Irish leader, who has lately reached the United States from Australia, says that neither Ireland nor Australia would fight against this country in case of a war with England.

Unless all indications are misleading, the end of the Cuban insurrection is at hand, and the result, it will seem, must be in favor of the insurgents, whose armies, under Maximo Gomez, Antonio Maceo and Quintin Bandera, are nearing Havana from three different directions.

The disaster which has overtaken the Cuban sugar crop, through the tactics of the revolutionists in that island, appears now to be complete. It was hoped that the estates in the immediate vicinity of Havana would not be molested; but the latest news declares the invasion of the province of Havana by the patriot troops, and a repetition of the burning of cane fields and the closing of sugar-houses, such as have already occurred in other provinces, is reported.

In The Beginning

Of our new year, when the Winter season of close confinement is only half gone, many find that their health begins to break down, that the least exposure threatens sickness. It is then as well as at all other times, and while people even in good health, that the following facts should be remembered, namely: that Hood's Sarsaparilla leads everything in the way of medicines; that it accomplishes the greatest cures in the world; has the largest sale in the world, and requires the largest building in the world devoted exclusively to the preparation of the proprietary medicine. Does not this conclusively prove, if you are sick, that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine for you to take?

CHILLS,

Rheumatism, White Swelling, Diabetes and Slow Fever.

What One Man Has Cured With the Electropoise in His Family and Immediate Neighborhood.

For the benefit of suffering humanity I make this statement as to what the Electropoise has done for me, my family and some of my neighbors. I have had an Electropoise for four years, and prior to getting it I had always paid $25 to $50 a year doctor's bill every year. Since I have had the Electropoise my entire expenses for doctors has been $15, and if I had known as much about the Electropoise then as I do now, I would have not spent that $15. I have cured chills, slow fevers, rheumatism, diabetes, toothache and white swelling. The case of white swelling was that of one of my neighbor's boys who was 9 years old. When I commenced to treat him he could not stand on his feet; he began to improve from the first, and is now well. If anyone desires to know more about this case they can write to Mrs. Fannie Lewis, Epes Station, Ala. Yours, etc., A. L. DAVID.

ELECTROPOISE

$5.00

For Two Months Rent

We feel confident that a great many will appreciate this liberal offer, and have obtained a large supply of instruments from the Electrolibration Company. No one can afford to be without an Electropoise, especially in Winter, when it is so effective for colds, la grippe, pneumonia, etc., as well as all forms of chronic ailments. Rheumatism speedily and effectively cured. Liberal terms for the ultimate purchase after renting.

Those who are not familiar with the wonderful curative work of the Electropoise should write for booklet giving full particulars. It is endorsed by thousands all over the country.

How I Got a New Spoon for Nothing.

I saw in the columns of the Christian Advocate, that in order to introduce her New Hook Spoon, Mrs. W. H. Baird, of Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., would give away a few. I sent at once five 2c. stamps to cover the cost of packing and postage and got one. It is a large kitchen spoon heavily plated, with a little hook to the back that prevents it slipping into the cooking vessel while used. I sold five dozen in 2 hours and cleared $12.75. I sold them at every house, did not miss one. Every woman knows how nice it is to have the spoon ready just when you want to stir things and not have to fish it out of the vegetables, preserves or jellies. I think Mrs. Baird will send anyone a spoon who will send the stamps for postage. It is nice to make a little money these hard times. ELIZABETH A.

The designs for five of the twelve main buildings of the Tennessee Centennial and International Exposition have been accepted and the construction put under contract to be completed by June of next year. In the meantime the seven remaining buildings and the eight edifices intended for special purposes will be planned and the erection begun. The lakes and terraces have been finished and the Administration Building is ready for occupancy.

The filibustering expedition of Dr. Jameson, of the British South Africa Company, into the Transvaal Republic has come to a sudden and inglorious end. A dispatch from the scene of the disturbance to the British Colonial Department, at London, states that Dr. Jameson had been defeated by the Boers and compelled to surrender, after great loss of life had been suffered.

Bronchitis. Sudden changes of the weather cause Bronchial Troubles. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" will give effective relief.

IN SERVICE.

BY HORATIUS BONAR.

Make me of me, my God;
Let me not be forgot,
A broken vessel cast astide,
One whom thou needest not.

I am thy creature, Lord,
And made by hands divine;
And I am part, however mean,
Of this great world of thine.

Thou usest all thy works;
The weakest things that be;
Each has a service of its own,
For all things wait on thee.

Thou usest the high stars,
The tiny drops of dew,
The giant peak and little hill—
My God, O use me, too.

"Post Oak Circuit"

In his essay, "Of Studies," Lord Bacon says: "Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested—that is, some books are to be read only in parts, others to be read not curiously, and some few to be read wholly, and with diligence and attention." To the last category belongs the little book in question. Little, but only in bulk! Few books so richly deserve the trite compliment of multum in parvo. Milton said in one of his sonnets of his Tetrachordon: It was a book so to Bishop Keener's "Post Oak Circuit" may the same language be applied. One of the striking features of this book is that the average reader may read it again and again and again, and yet find that some point has escaped him in a former reading. Indeed, to few other books we have ever read are we so disposed to apply (with modification as to number of perusals only) the language of Dugald Stewart with reference to Lord Bacon's "Essays": "The volume may be read from beginning to end in a few hours, and yet, after the twentieth perusal, one seldom fails to remark in it something overlooked before." We have read "Post Oak" the third time. On each occasion our "torpid faculties" have been aroused to new discoveries; and there are yet mysteries in it to us. We dare not say these are ambiguities or obscurities in the book—rather enigmas. We rather say that our eyes have not got used to the brilliancy of his wit. It is still "dark with excessive bright." We prefer to say with one of the old Greeks: "Until you understand a man's ignorance, always presume yourself ignorant of his understanding." The book meets a dogma of Carlyle, who, in his essay on Goethe's "Helena," says: "No book that will not improve by repeated reading deserves to be read at all." Surely this is "a book the world will not willingly let die," nor let "pass into the portion of weeds and outworn faces." We regard it as one of the most trenchant and effective books we have ever read, which language of panegyric is deliberate, defensible, needing vindication, we well know, by illustration or proof, and involving a task of no small dimensions. Indeed, it is very difficult to write about such a book as this, for reasons it is unnecessary to give here. To be sure, in one sense it is easy to dismiss the book, or rather to commit it to the reader, with the brief commendation of its editor, the late Dr. Summers, who, in the language of panegyric, most briefly says: "Post Oak Circuit is sui generis. There is nothing like it in all our literature." It is hardly likely that this most broad, yet laconic, eulogium was uttered in "admiring despair," or pride or caprice of laconicism, but rather because it would have been presumptuous, supererogatory, at least superfluous, to be profuse in commending something that "beggars praise," and is at hand for the reader's own judgment. But, gentle reader, we have not the book to hand to you. We must try to induce you to read it. If you have not done so, you will not rebuke our enthusiasm after having perused it. If you have, you will probably have no word of reproach. It is nowise difficult for us to imagine one who has never read the book, and who now rather floats our consideration and commendation as overdone, after reading it applying to us, with a substitution of ourself for the word "fame," the language in Milton's "Arcades":

"Woven close, both matter, form, and style;"

"You, that his high worth to raise
Seem'd erst so lavish and profuse,
We may justly now accuse
Of detraction from his praise
Less than half we find express'd."

But we are not going to be apologetic for our admiration. With the devoted Juliet we can say in that regard, our

"Bounty is as boundless as the sea."

Dr. Summers' panegyric is written in all the sobriety of most deliberate phraseology, with the immense weight of his endorsement, with the competency and force of most abstemious comment. Under the sanctions of his weighty eulogium we shall presume to be somewhat elaborate. We are quite aware that we are but paraphrasing Dr. Summers' tribute when we say that the book is one of the greatest contributions to humorous and satiric literature in the tongue in its line, and in its line stands almost, perhaps quite, alone. It is a book that ingratiates and endears itself in a way suggestive of the charm of fascination attaching to Robinson Crusoe, Don Quixote, Gulliver's Travels, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. Of course, the personages of Bishop Keener's book do not so deeply engrave themselves on the heart and memory as do those of the books we have mentioned; but it must never be forgotten that our acquaintance with the characters in Bishop Keener's book is comparatively limited, and they have not time to sink into the mind and take hold on the memory through long intercourse. Long time are we with Don Quixote and Sancho Panza. So with Gulliver. And how many scenes are we in with Crusoe, even ere he rescues Friday! We know the voice of Poll. We fairly see the trees grow that shelter Robinson's retreat. We are with him often in his excursions, even ere he dismantles the old ship in which he met his fate on the never-to-be-forgotten island. And then, what a long way it is from the City of Destruction with Christian until he and his companion are lost behind the golden gates of the New Jerusalem! The journey compasses a life. And then, too, consider that these books are read in the plasticity of youth, in the impressionable time when imagination aids the writer, and helps to clothe fiction with illusions as strong as facts engrave their impressions and impress their truths in after years, and when memories harden into ineradicability. If one wants to know the difference, let him give the books in question to an adult of average intelligence, and see how little they impress compared to the way they do the average youthful reader; or even let one who has read these same fictions in youth, re-read them in mature years. We think that one will repent the trial. He is disillusioned, and undone is the dear handiwork of imagination and the sensibilities in the "days that are no more." Not that we would assert that "Post Oak Circuit" equals the great works of fiction we have "named," but the compositions of these with the former are all to the disadvantage of "Post Oak," because of the diverse periods at which the effects of each are produced. Few past the impressionable period of childhood read these great fictions. We doubt if they would much amuse or interest our riper years, whereas the Bishop's book appeals to manhood, and its best appreciations are of the judgment and the critical faculty, while imagination has its scope, too, and experience, common sense, and a grand rationale unparadd their sanctions; so, while we may only compare the books in question to illustrate the graphic power of "Post Oak Circuit," we must never lose sight of the disadvantage the last must suffer in the premises. If we were asked which would most take hold of the adult, if for the first time read (the Bishop's book or the great masterpieces we have mentioned), we should say the former. No matter why it is so. The truth is thus. It is a charm from merit. That it may be occult or difficult of analysis, is nothing against the potency. If we be under a dear spell, why ask to know if the wand of the enchanter be golden or not? The "mighty magic" has wrought its entrancement. 'Tis enough. So we appeal to any reader who, in mature years, has read "Post Oak Circuit," are there not characters he can never forget? Let us briefly present to the recollection of the readers some of the more salient personalities or characters of this book:

An ignorant creditor in Russia took a note from a party indebted to him, payable on St. Henry's Day—no such day being specified in the authorized calendar. The rogue refusing payment, suit was instituted. At first the judge was puzzled, but finally he decided, a la Solomon, that the note would certainly be due on All Saints' Day, inasmuch as the doubted St. Henry was likely to be included among the saints worshiped on that day.

According to Dr. Carroll, in the Independent, there are 2,690,638 negro communicants in this country. Of these, 1,403,559 are Baptists. Next come the Methodists, with 1,190,671. Only 5,000 are Episcopalians. Much room for missionary work among the negroes at home.

In Paris the discovery has been made that sick and dead parrots cause many deadly maladies. They emit very active microbes, whose inhalation will result in pulmonary and other diseases.

dine the church, with his whining fustian, the ridiculous rodomontade, the inane grandiloquence, the loquacious, resounding tinselry of phrase, his wriggling, squirming inbricity and canting tergiversation, his irrepressible bumptiousness, the grotesque lugubriousness of Squire Wallet, the funereal pertinacity of —— ——, the rich old niggard, who runs to the grave as a fox to his hole. It is the home of his thought. His "heart is in the office" with his dead niggers. It is the place of his buried treasure. Then there is the quaint humor of the negro exhorter, Oakhart, in his missionary sermon, with its broad strokes and surprises of comicality, and its wild and grotesque melange of truths, bizarre with alliterations, its trip-hammer hits, its lofty derision, soaring scorn and swirl of epigram. It is a seething torrent, and such a current of wit, humor, sarcasm surges through it as our language hardly parallels. We have the shamdemolishing, humbug-puncturing Bro. Blackman, the presiding elder, with his adroit and ingenious sallies at the meannesses and canting sophistries of his Board of Stewards, and his relentless pertinacity in raising the preacher's dues; Jim Hunnicutt, the unsparing anti-tergiversationist, the sly hitter, who is always on hand when there is a chance to unmask a fraud, and who seconds always so promptly, like a loyal lieutenant, Bro. Blackman; the contrarious, opposite-sided Bellus brothers, and their delicious mazes of ingenious incoherence, their hair-splitting dialectics and mazes of word-play; the honest-heartedness, uprightness, downrightness, unpretending usefulness and meritorious straightforwardness of Goodsine, the recording steward. Then there is the imported preacher from Lynn, Mass., Rev. Zelophehad Crane, with his pomps of theological pedantry, his polysyllabic, sesquipedalian roll of pretentious nothingness of affected metaphysical profundity and resounding alliteration; John Bear, the honest gunsmith; the good Sister Hardiman, with her merciless homethrusts and wise reflections; the headlong meritoriousness of the Dutchman Ben Bone; Father Hemphill, with the aureola of mellow sanctity about his reverend head. Then there is Col. Hector G. W. Barb, the wealthy planter. He is a picture of cold and haughty disdain, phrase-proud supercilliousness, overbearing self-assertion, austere, nauseous pretentiousness, puffed and swollen evasiveness. He has nothing but a hard heart, a hard check, a handsome home and figure, his negroes and his title. Without the negroes he would have never had the title, and, withal, he is "something nothing," except as he is "a fixed figure," pilloried in the immortal punishment of the quaint placidity of the Bishop's brilliant scorn.

Those are some of the characters in this wondrous little book, which, among much besides, is both a picture gallery and a museum. We think any reader who could fail to remember one or more of its characters would fail to remember Gulliver and Lilliput, "the knight of the dolorous countenance," Crusoe and Friday, Christian and his checquered and glorious career.

Ecclesiasticism

Or a "strong attachment to ecclesiastical observances," is well illustrated in the following confession of an Episcopalian in The Forum: "At the time of the Chicago fire our General Convention was in session in Baltimore. In the midst of the session one day a delegate from Illinois rose to read the telegram which he had just received, announcing that the city was in danger of utter destruction from the flames. Naturally, he moved that the convention interrupt its business and proceed to prayer. Unfortunately, however, there chanced to be no collect in the prayer book for a burning city. What, then, could be done? Extemporize a prayer? Perish the thought that in order to bring down help for a city wrapped in flames the sacred order of the prayer book should be disregarded! Still, some prayer must be offered. So these assembled dignitaries, representing the combined wisdom of the church, went solemnly through the Litany, which prays for well-nigh everything except a burning city, and then rose from their knees, feeling that, though Chicago might be burned to the ground, the majesty of the prayer book had been duly honored."

The Methodist Church makes a sorry show when she undertakes to pose in ecclesiasticism. There is not an Episcopal Church in the State of Mississippi in which one of our Bishops would be allowed to officiate as a minister of the gospel. Our church, in its origin, principles, and history, is a standing protest against the folly, not to say the wickedness, of extreme ecclesiasticism; and when we so far forget ourselves as to become "High Church," we simply make ourselves the laughing-stock of well-informed people who are not in sympathy with us.

I knew a gentleman who was brought up in the country by plain Methodist parents. He studied a profession, succeeded well in it, and built himself up in the world. In the days of his prosperity he decided to join the Episcopal Church. Some friend of his family asked him why he was going to leave the church of his father. He said it was the "style" of the Episcopal Church that fascinated him. And he was reported as adding, "I would rather go to hell in style than to go to heaven out of style."

I do not vouch for the correctness of the report above quoted; and, of course, if the gentleman made the remark, he did not mean what he said; but it seems some people would let poor sinners be lost rather than tolerate an unauthorized agent in saving them.

"And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbade him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part." (Mark ix, 38-40.)

May God speed everyone who can "do a miracle" in the name of Jesus!

In the Living Present.

Fruit is not only a wholesome food, but also operates medicinally. Fruit diet will prevent and even cure neuralgia, scurvy, dyspepsia, etc. Apples are specially recommended. For rheumatism plenty lemons are invaluable.

Though Pope Leo XIII. does not oppose reading the Holy Scriptures, the benighted adherents of Roman Catholicism pay little heed to the contents. The archiepiscopal book-store in Milan, the principal book depository of that church, does not dispose of a hundred Bibles a year.

Twenty-five years ago there were but seven hundred Protestants in Spain, the Pope's stronghold; but now that number has increased to eighteen thousand. They have a hundred and forty churches, with five thousand children in two hundred and fifty Sunday-schools. Pastor Fliednar is indefatigable in his missionary superintendency.

Gilmer Steel, in The Forum, slanders our American peasantry, calling them "as illiterate as any class of any state in the civilized world." Says that they have not learned how to think, and are led by the nose by demagogues. His mistake lies in adding our numerous negroes to the peasantry, and thus scores a sadly high percentage of analphabetes.

An ignorant creditor in Russia took a note from a party indebted to him, payable on St. Henry's Day—no such day being specified in the authorized calendar. The rogue refusing payment, suit was instituted. South Carolina Letter.

I am reminded that it has been some time since I furnished you any South Carolina items. Our Conference met on the fifth of December, and I fully intended reporting its proceedings; but the Bishop decided that I had been having too short a move in the past, so he picked me up from Kingstree, where I had been three years, and landed me at Allendale, my present home. The trip was about one hundred and seventy-five miles—five times as far as I have ever moved before. Mr. Editor, did you ever have a long move? If so, you know why I have not been able to report the proceedings of our Conference.

The Conference met in the progressive town of Rock Hill, in the upper part of the State. I do not suppose that there is a town in the State that has made such rapid progress within the past few years as Rock Hill. The Presbyterian Synod had met there just a few weeks before our Conference convened, and we were somewhat apprehensive that the supply of chicken would be considerably exhausted by the time of our arrival; but when we assembled we found that a new supply had been brought in, and we were elegantly entertained. Bishop Galloway presided. It was his first official visit to our Conference. Of course, his national reputation had preceded him, and expectation ran high. I had heard the Bishop in Chattanooga, Tenn., last June, and, consequently, knew what was in store for the South Carolina Conference. The Bishop literally captivated everything that came in sight. His presidency gave universal satisfaction. The brethren were so carried away by the charming manner of the Bishop that one of the presiding elders took the chair for a few minutes on the last day of the session, while some resolutions were offered expressing our high appreciation of the manly way the Bishop had deported himself while among us, and expressing the hope that we would soon have him with us again. A cordial greeting awaits him.

The question of the evangelist was up for consideration at this session, and the following resolutions were adopted by the body:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that no local preacher should enter the territory of any other preacher of our Conference without an invitation from those in charge of that territory, and thereby brought under their control.

Resolved, That every preacher in charge shall be held responsible for his local preachers, and restrain them when they go beyond the bounds of his charge without an invitation from the preacher in charge where he proposes to work.

Resolved, That all preachers in charge who employ disloyal local preachers, or unauthorized or unreliable evangelists, are not worthy to receive an appointment among us.

The Epworth Orphanage, a new enterprise in South Carolina Methodism, was fully organized, and a superintendent was elected. I dare say that there never has been a movement among us in which the people were more interested than this. May it have Heaven's richest benedictions!

Dr. Barbee was the only connectional representative with us. The Doctor grows upon us every time he comes to us, and South Carolina is laudably proud of such a connectional officer. He preached for us once while here. His sermon was on the talents, and was up to his usual mark.

The reports showed progress along almost all lines of work. There was increase in collections and membership, the per cent. of which I am unable to give now.

The moves are all made, and the preachers have entered upon the new year with increased energy and, I trust, new power.

A Happy New Year to you, Mr. Editor, and to all your readers.

That Church Choir.

Some people think it very cute to poke fun at the church choir. They grow witty when talking about the Lord's singers. Choirs are often made up of young people who are most conscientious and devoted. They are true blue. Always on hand. No storm is severe enough to keep them away. Extra occasions find them willing to be drafted for service. They dedicate their songs to God as sincerely as others dedicate their influence and dollars and endeavors. Most choirs are not properly appreciated. They are seldom thanked for their faithful services. And many are subject to constant and unreasonable criticism.

Some ministers do not realize how largely the choir counts in making their services popular and effective. There are people who go to hear fine music who care nothing about the commonplace discourses which they hear. If the choir should step out, the chief charm of the sanctuary would, to them, disappear. And even those who go to church to worship, and regard the sermon as the main attraction, find the service greatly enhanced in interest and blessing by a tender solo or a rapturous chorus.

Now, not all choirs are ideal. Some members of some choirs whisper during the prayer. Others write notes during the sermon. Others giggle. Others are fussy and fidgety. But thousands upon thousands of our choir singers are guilty of none of these things. They are devoted and devotional. They are the King's messengers—messengers in song. They are trying to sing people into the kingdom. They are the minister's most faithful allies. They may be counted on. Their all-the-year-round faithfulness should bring a blush to the faces of people who make greater pretensions.

That church choir! Blessings on the sopranos, and the altos, and the tenors, and the bassos, and the man who makes the organ talk, and even the small boy who pumps up its wind! Let the jokers joke, and the grumbler grumble, and the unappreciative keep silent. Sing on! Sing on!—The Epworth Herald.

Mrs. Cleveland has inaugurated a social reform in Washington that ought to meet with success. The custom has been gradually gaining ground of devoting Sunday evening to social calls and entertainments, especially among the representatives from foreign governments. Mrs. Cleveland, assisted by Miss Morton, sister of Secretary Morton, has undertaken the task of promoting Sunday observance. This is not the first time that a reform movement has been instituted, but it has heretofore been a failure. The practice of using Sunday afternoon and evening for social entertainments has been growing for some time, until now almost all the members of diplomatic corps, including the British Ambassador, have selected that day to hold their receptions and dinner parties. Secretary Olney has been in the habit of attending official dinners on Sunday afternoon, thus giving the apparent sanction of official authority to the growing custom. Naturally others have followed the example until a reformation movement has become necessary. The plan of operation proposed by Mrs. Cleveland and her co-laborer, Miss Morton, is to persuade society leaders to give up Sunday entertaining and thus set an example for those who follow the fashions. We trust Mrs. Cleveland may succeed in her endeavor.—Methodist Recorder.

We don't believe that England and America will go to war; but the anticipation of war has caused Congress to do in a jiffy what ought to have been done deliberately as a matter of duty long ago, the removal of the disabilities of all the men that participated in the Civil War on the Southern side. This is magnanimity with a vengeance! If no enemy had presented itself in our front, or no such formidable enemy as England, the poor "rebels" would still be dancing a jig in the corner by themselves. But when men are wanted for breast-works, a "rebel" is as good as anybody, and better too! Being old and tough, he will make an excellent target for English bullets. The government has said for thirty years, we don't want your Confederates to fight for the country. Why should it change its mind so suddenly? The Confederates have fought enough, suffered enough, and they would be excusable to stay at home to rebuild their shattered fortunes.—Holston Methodist.

When a man sees his duty plainly defined before him, he has no option but to go forward and do it.

SERVING.

Not disabled from the service,
No, nor absent from your post;
You are doing gallant service
Where the Master needs you most.

It was noble to give battle
While the world stood cheering on;
It is nobler to lie patient,
Leaving half one's work undone.

And the King counts up his heroes
Where the desperate charge was led,
But writes, "My Best Beloved,"
Over the sick man's bed.

Communications.

Bro. Miller's Blunder.

MR. EDITOR: Two weeks occupied in packing up, moving and unpacking is enough to put a natural man in a state of ferment, even without the fearful charge of misrepresentation which Bro. A. D. Miller, of Mississippi, has preferred against this one of your numerous correspondents.

If Bro. Miller's communication, published in the ADVOCATE of Jan. 2, 1896, is true, then I am guilty as charged. If, however, it is not true, then somebody else is guilty of misrepresenting the status of an argument.

Evidently Bro. Miller did not refer to his communication published in the ADVOCATE of Nov. 21, 1895 or he would not have written as he did on Jan. 2 of the present year. In the last-named communication he says, speaking of myself: "He not only fails to comprehend, but also misrepresents me." Then in the next paragraph he defines his position in order to show wherein he has been misrepresented. He says: "I did not even refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons, and hence did not build up any argument or even refer to unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits."

Bro. Miller ought to act on the advice he gives about one getting "himself in trouble by taking the wrong side." Had he done this, he would not have been forced to surrender or deny the salient points in his former argument.

Now, "look upon this, then on that," and tell how it looks.

Remember that Bro. Miller says, on Jan. 2, 1896, that he "did not even refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons," and the ground of my offending lies in the fact that I said he did "refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons."

To show that Bro. Miller has forgotten what he did say on Nov. 21, 1895, refer to the ADVOCATE of that date, page 2, column 2 and read these words:

But the late Palmer Camp Ground affair, if it had been carried out, would have been contrary to law. There is a law authorizing the Woman's Missionary Society and giving them the right to hold services in our churches, and no one with a grain of sense would deny it. But there is no law authorizing woman to preach and hold regular preaching services; and the church has denied them the right by failing to make a law authorizing it or the granting of license.

To what does "authorizing woman to preach and hold regular preaching services" refer if it does not "refer to the pulpits," since all our "regular preaching services" are held by men occupying "the pulpits"?

But Bro. Miller put forth his opinion which I dared call in question much more strongly "as he waxed hot in the fight." In his heat of anxiety he wrote this:

Now, why should Bro. Parker raise a cry against the presiding elder of Seashore district and the brethren that passed the resolutions referred to? I think they acted wisely and according to law. Why not? If persons are allowed according to law, or without law, to travel and preach all over the country without license, and we open our churches and pulpits to them, then why give anyone license? Why not let every man and woman preach without license, if they want to?—and some brother will open his church and pulpit to them. Why not?

—Is there not some reference "to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons" in the above extract? Who has been misrepresented, Bro. A. D. Miller or myself? Let me assure our dear brother that I understood his language perfectly well in both his November and January arguments. I hope that not only Bro. Miller, but all others whose legal sense has become so distorted, will be consistent, and do nothing for which there is not a law in the Discipline, either expressed or implied. Under this law, as interpreted by him, he can shake hands "one time only even with his most intimate friends, and then only on the occasion of their admission into membership in the church of which he is pastor—never otherwise, because the church has denied him the right by failing to make a law authorizing it." (Paragraph 441, Discipline, edition 1894, page 211.)

—Inconsistency is not a jewel; but since the brother has got to a point where he can not be consistent, I move that he be excused.

Respectfully, J. A. PARKER.

Asbury College.

I came to this little town, noted as being the location of Asbury College, several days ago to begin my year's work with a series of revival services as assistant to the pastor in charge of our church here, Rev. F. J. Sawyer. The day that I came via the Q. and C. was as beautiful as ever blessed the earth, and the trip was one of absorbing interest on account of the glorious scenery in the Tennessee and Kentucky Mountains. I enjoyed it in spite of twenty-seven long tunnels.

I am staying in Asbury College, and am blessed by being permitted to see what I never saw before—a college on fire for Christ. I was in another town not many months since, and it was estimated that there were in regular attendance upon the service over three hundred young men and young women who had never been converted. What a contrast I find this place! I never met in all my experience such a number of Holy Ghost, baptized young people as I find here. I seem to be literally surrounded by flames of religious joy and enthusiasm. The young ministers—and there are quite a large number of them among the students—are a splendid set of young men, superior in mental power, fine looking physically, and their eyes show the light of the indwelling Christ in their souls. What beautiful prophecies one might truly make of the results when these young soldiers shall go out into the white harvest fields of God! Many of them spent the holidays in holding religious services, and have come in with glowing accounts of precious souls saved. It is a great inspiration to teach the Bible to an audience composed largely of young men and young women "hungering and thirsting" for the things of God, and to have a testimony meeting with them. It makes almost an epoch in one's religious experience. It is worth a trip of ten thousand miles to see the things I have seen since I came to this God-blessed place.

Mr. Onipepper, the noted evangelist, lives here, and is now at home attending our meeting.

President Hughes and wife seem to be God-chosen for the sacred place of leaders of this college, that one of our Southern Bishops says is so evidently God-inspired and directed that it is destined for great usefulness to the church and the cause of God everywhere.

Let our Christian people be reminded to pray for Asbury College and its future.

Wilmore, Ky., Jan. 4, 1896.

Sister Snell's Work.

I notice several of our brethren are opposing Sister Snell in the great and grand work she is doing. I don't think if these brethren could and would attend Sister Snell's meetings and witness the great and grand results of her work that they would ever say another word or write another line in opposition to her. I think I can very safely say that in all my life I have never known anyone to do anything like one half the work, in the same length of time, as I saw Sister Snell do in one service in Crystal Springs. I don't make this statement to disparage any of the brethren or to discount their labors, for I love them all, and know they are accomplishing a great, grand and glorious work; but when we see a work being done and honored by God as that of Sister Snell, why oppose it?

Let's give her, one and all, our hearty co-operation and bear her up on the arms of our prayers, and help her to push the cause of our Savior to glorious heights of victory.

We all see, every day, men and women rushing wildly into sin and ruin, landing in hell to suffer forever; then we ought to feel very, very keenly the need of something being done to rescue these perishing souls. We should strive to do all in our power to promote God's cause and not say or do anything to impede its progress.

A Suggestion for an Orphans' Home.

MR. EDITOR: If you will allow me, I will make a suggestion, which, if adopted and carried out by the different charges in the Mississippi Conference, will build for the homeless a home. I am glad to see the question agitated. The only way to get the people to work on it is to agitate it and keep it before them. My suggestion is this: Let each Sunday-school scholar make a birthday offering on the Sunday following his birthday. This is a suggestion made from practical experience. The offerings are to be voluntarily made, and for each year old one cent is to be given. If the Sunday-school superintendents will take hold of this thing and manage it right, every Sunday during the year the children who had birthdays the preceding week will gladly make the offerings. Like everything else in Sunday-school work, it will depend upon the life the superintendent puts into it. There is elected each year from our school a treasurer for this special fund. It is a girl usually. She keeps a record of each amount and the name of the giver. At the close of the year, when there has been no specified direction given the money at the beginning of the year, all who have made an offering are entitled to vote on the disposal of it. The superintendent can suggest to those who do not care to make their ages known by giving an amount equal to their age, to give more.

I make another suggestion on this line. To make the fund larger, let each reader of the ADVOCATE in the Mississippi Conference make such an offering when their birthdays arrive. Select, say, Rev. T. B. Holleman, of Meridian, as treasurer for the "Readers' Fund." Let him, at the close of each month, furnish a list to the ADVOCATE of those who have given, with the aggregate amount for the month and for previous months.

Having tried the birthday offerings, I know what it will do if worked; and, besides, each child that gives will feel that he has an interest in the home.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: While I was at home in 1892 many of my friends in Mississippi requested that after my return to China I let them hear from me sometimes through the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. The weekly visits of this much-appreciated periodical which come to me in my oriental home remind me of a long-neglected, though not forgotten, request. May I claim the privilege of a space in your paper for this purpose now?

First of all, I should like to tell of some of the interesting and encouraging features of our work at this time. God's blessing truly has been with us in abundant measure during the year which is so near its close. The labors of Dr. C. F. Reid, who during the past three years has been in charge of Shanghai station, have been crowned with marked success. A large number have been added to the church during the year. The services are all well attended, whether held for the native Christians or the outside heathen. Our monthly communion service was held last Sunday afternoon, and more than a hundred and fifty communicants were present. The occasion was one of joy and blessing to many. Our native Christians, many of them, seem truly to love the services of the house of God, and are faithful and diligent in their attendance upon them. There are those more than sixty years of age who are regular attendants at Sunday-school as well as the other services. We have two Epworth Leagues in connection with our church here in Shanghai—one for the men, the other for the women and girls. Many of you know how Chinese etiquette, or custom, forbids the bringing of the two sexes together in any sort of social gatherings. It seems best, in the present stage of our work in China, to observe these customs in some degree among our native Christians; hence the two Leagues in connection with our church at this station. The one for women and girls held its weekly meeting here at our mission home this afternoon. It was, in some respects, a most interesting occasion. The meeting was for prayer to-day, and was led by Mrs. Reid, who is quite a fluent speaker in the native dialect. At the close of an earnest exhortation the request for voluntary prayer was made. We bowed together, and before we arose from our knees almost a dozen voices had been raised in prayer. Among those who took part in this way were girls from "Clopton" School—our girls' boarding-school—some of them barely in their teens, who have just come into our society, and whose voices have never been heard in a religious meeting of any kind before. At the close of this season of prayer one of the older girls asked, in a most earnest way, for our prayers in behalf of a little society for spiritual growth and development of Christian character among the younger girls of the school. We had only recently heard of the organization of this society, but had not fully understood its object and aim until they were explained to us this afternoon. As it is entirely the work of the girls, and was instituted without the knowledge even of the missionaries in charge of the school, I am sure the home workers will be interested in knowing how it came about. Mo Sien-ling, a former pupil of the school, who, for several years, has occupied the position of assistant, or primary, teacher, is a most devoted Christian. There are other strong Christian characters in the school, but she, having had a fuller experience than those who are younger, is naturally more fully developed along spiritual lines. She wields an influence for good constantly in the school, and we feel that her influence over the girls is of great worth. She sometimes holds meetings with them on Sunday evenings for the purpose of aiding them in their individual lives as Christians, and for praying with them for fuller blessing upon the school and upon God's work in China. It seems that in such a meeting recently she urged upon them, in such a forcible manner, the necessity of their own lives being fraught with help and blessing to others, that the little ones went out from the meeting with their hearts all aglow, and did not rest until they had arranged plans for the organization of the little society for mutual help and development in things spiritual, which is now known in the school as the "Children's Society for Watching and Prayer." By "watching" they mean more than a personal preparation of heart for the Master's coming. It seems to include to them a keeping of the eyes open to the needs of others, and a readiness of hearts and hands to meet those needs. By helping, too, they mean more than the simple sharing or lifting of a burden. It is their object to meet and overcome, or cast out, every obstacle to the growth and development of Christian character among the pupils. If an unkind word is said, an unhappy spirit shown, or anything tending towards the ruffling of feelings or estrangement of hearts indulged in, these brave little soldiers for Christ step in to drive out the enemy and restore peace and quiet. So far their efforts have been marvelously successful, and, whereas, ugly tempers, selfish dispositions, and indifference to the needs or desires of others once prevailed, a sweet spirit of loving helpfulness and mutual burden-bearing now holds sway. Those who have been familiar with the school in other days, and have seen what bold advances Satan has made to gain ascendency over hearts and minds of those committed to our trust, can but exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" Pray that the work begun may go on, and that the influence which now prevails, and which is working such good in the school and the Epworth League, may extend beyond the confines of our mission compound, blessing other hearts and other lives.

My story has grown too long, but there is much else of which my heart burns to tell you. May I claim the privilege of another space in your columns at an early date? I feel so strongly that all that our home workers need in order to enlist a stronger interest and warmer sympathy in the work here is facts. God is working in our China Mission. We praise him for what he has already wrought, and trust him for that great ingathering which we have reason to expect in the near future. Let us truly thank him and "take courage." The church in China needs your prayers. Shall it have them?

Yours in the Master's service,

L ELIZABETH HUGHES.

The following from Bro. Loehr concerning the work of our Woman's Board in China will doubtless bring joy to the heart of every member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Surely such an encouraging and gratifying report from our work should cause us to redouble in gifts and prayers that our workers may be even a more powerful agent in the spread of the gospel in China.

"MY DEAR MRS. BUTLER: It was a pleasure and a privilege to attend some of the meetings of the representatives of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions held in Shanghai during the tenth session of the China Mission Conference. All the ladies were present except Dr. Anne Walter, the gifted physician in charge of your Woman's Hospital in Suchow. She had some patients in the hospital who required her attention, and, true to her nature, she gave up the pleasure of coming to the annual meeting. Her absence was regretted by all the workers.

The reports from the women were bright, fresh, and inspiring. In many of them there was a vein of humor which was enjoyed by those who heard them.

Bishop Hendrix presided at all the meetings, and more than once expressed his great pleasure at knowing how much good these noble women are doing. Your representatives are equal to any on the mission field—devoted, gifted women, who are carrying happiness into the homes and lives of hundreds of Chinese women.

When Rev. D. Allen was superintendent of your work in China he earnestly endeavored to so adjust the work of your Board with that of the Parent Board that the one would assist the other. Wherever the Parent Board had first opened up work and had a church building, around that as a center your Board should work, the pupils from your boarding and day schools attending services at the church. If the Woman's Board of Missions first opened up work then the Parent Board should there build the church and gather in the children. This plan has always worked well. In Shanghai, in connection with Central and Trinity Churches, you have two girls' boarding schools, and nine or ten day schools. The teachers and pupils from the schools largely make up the two flourishing Sunday-schools and the Sunday morning congregation; and several of them are members of the church. The foreign women who have charge of these schools, and the native Bible women under the supervision and direction of Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Gaither, assist greatly in building up the church in this charge. Rev. C. F. Reid, the pastor, is assisted by the strongest, most earnest native pastor we have, and also has a man of much promise—a preacher educated in Buffington Institute. There is no charge in the mission where the pastor has more efficient aid, more heartfelt sympathy, and more intelligent assistants than at Central and Trinity Churches. Subtract the work represented by your workers, and the charge will make a very small report in comparison with the large, gratifying report made at this Conference. Dr. Reid stated on the Conference floor that he estimated that eight-tenths of the success of the work in his charge was due to the representatives of the Woman's Board, and in this statement some of us who know of their work most heartily concur. In Soochow, Nantalang, and Kading your work complements the work of the Parent Board, and it is well to acknowledge and recognize our obligations.

Two afternoons were given to hearing the reports from the representatives of the Woman's Board, including the wives of many of the missionaries who have been associated this year in work with them. One afternoon was taken up with the reports of the eleven Bible women engaged in this very important work. Each one read her report in Chinese, and then Dr. A. P. Parker translated them for Bishop Hendrix. When all had reported the Bishop said that he thought he had already had the crown of the work from the foreign women, but the reports of the native Bible women were the jewels in the crown. I wish that every one could be properly translated into English and published. Light is what is needed. More letters from the field should be written and have a wide circulation.

From the statistics I note that you have three girls' boarding schools with 75 pupils, 31 day schools with 35 teachers and 839 pupils, 1 hospital with a foreign physician and 4 native nurses, and 6,405 cases treated in the hospital, and 11 Bible women, with 5 others in training. This is a very creditable showing indeed, and I rejoice with your workers in all the success achieved, and most heartily congratulate the Board on having such an efficient staff of foreign and native workers in this land. The need for other help is great. Each one here has her hands full."

Selections.

Nothing, it seems to me, showed Christ's divine insight more clearly than what he saw and treasured in the commonplace, in the things which most men passed hastily by. He gathered with tender, reverent love the sweet and gentle lily of the field, so common that the ordinary passer-by would not turn his head to look at it. His all-embracing eye took in the bird of the air, not the grandest and most gorgeous, but the common sparrow, the despised little waif which no one dreamed of loving until Christ said that the heavenly Father stood by its dying bed. He loved all happy and innocent things, and found that these creatures of instinct could be better trusted than the fickle-headed tribes of flesh and blood whom he had come to serve and save. And nature never did betray the heart that loved her. When he had not where to lay his head, then nature took the Divine Head upon her gentle breast and spread the spangled cover of night about him. Her kindly sleep refreshed him. His heart went out to her Mount of Olives, where he and God could keep a tryst. Hermon saw his transfiguration, and Gethsemane soothed him in his agony. He seemed to be more at home with nature than anyone ever was.—Rev. C. S. Horne, M. A.

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man that he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction.—Henry Ward Beecher.

All the resources of the Godhead are at the command of the feeblest soul that aspires. You may not become a great philosopher or poet or artist. But there is no reason why you may not become a great saint.

Drudgery is as necessary to call out the treasures of the mind as harrowing and planting those of the earth.—Margaret Fuller.

New Trials.

A Christian says: "I was never tried in this way before. What shall I do?" But, believer, you must not think it strange that you should have new trials. To have the same sorts of trials over and over again, without any variation, would be unfortunate for you; you would be left considerably undeveloped. A certain side of your Christian character, and perhaps several sides, would remain in the dough state. Your character needs turning over and trying in a new place. New trials mean the touch of the hand of discipline on hitherto untried parts of life, of character, of being. One can not be symmetrically built up in Christ without new trials, and hence new experiences. Besides, new trials tend to surprise and startle and stir us as never before. They break up old forms of praying and we pray more freshly. They also change the tone and emphasis of our testimony of the power of Christ. Thank God for new trials!—Zion's Herald.

What We Can.

The earnest, deeply conscientious John Newton said: "If the Lord has given us a willing mind, he will graciously accept it, not according to what we have not, but to what we have. The expression of the woman's love in Mark xiv was no great affair, but our Lord was pleased to say, 'She hath done what she could.' The Lord help up to do faithfully what we can, and then may he enable us to do more!" When God lays upon us any duty, he never asks us to do what we can not perform. Such a requirement would be unjust, and certainly God is absolutely just; therefore when he demands anything of us it is not only just that we should comply, but also a recognition of God's knowledge of our ability to do what he requires of us. Then, too, by doing what we can, God helps us what he can in all our work and worship.

True Prayer.

That prayer which does not succeed in moderating our wish, in changing the passionate desire into still submission, the anxious tumultuous expectation into silent surrender, is no true prayer, and proves that we have not the spirit of true prayer. That life is most holy in which there is least of petition and desire, and most of waiting upon God; that in which petition most often passes into thanksgiving. Pray till prayer makes you forget your own wish, and leave it or merge it into God's will. The divine wisdom has given us prayer, not as a means whereby to obtain the good things of earth, but as a means whereby we learn to do without them; not as a means whereby we escape evil, but as a means whereby we become strong to meet it.—F. W. Robertson.

It needs, therefore, in us, infinite carefulness and watchfulness as we walk ever amid other lives, lest by some word, or look, or act, or disposition, or influence of ours, we hurt them irreparably.—Dr. J. R. Miller.

One secret act of self-denial, one sacrifice of inclination to duty, is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers, in which idle people indulge themselves.—J. H. Newman.

The weakest living creature, by concentrating his powers on a single object, can accomplish something; the strongest, by dispersing his over many, may fail to accomplish anything.—Carlyle.

The burden of suffering seems a tombstone hung about our necks, while in reality it is only the weight which is necessary to keep down the diver while he is hunting for pearls.—Ricter.

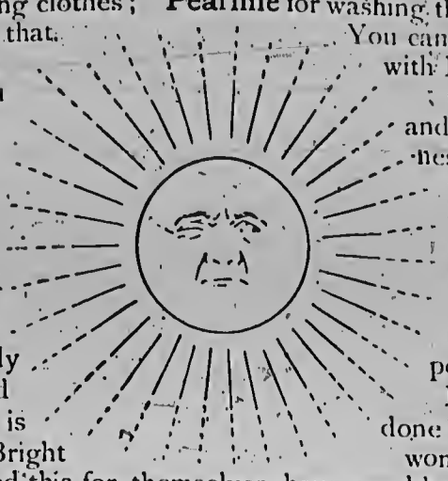
The Sun



for bleaching clothes; Pearline for washing them. Just remember that. You can't change any colors with Pearline. but if you want the brightness and freshness and newness back, then you want Pearline. The ease, the safety, the economy, the saving of time and of things washed— these are not the only points that recommend Pearline. The work is done better, all through. Bright women, who have proved this for themselves, have used hundreds of millions of packages.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as," or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 421 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. A. Parker: "We are now in the old historic town of Opelousas—a place around which clusters more Methodist history than any other place in the State of Louisiana. I have had a very cordial reception, and good promise of co-operation upon the part of the church. Notwithstanding the very bad weather, the congregations have been larger than I have seen in our churches further South."

Rev. Hesiep R. Tucker, P. E., Corinth district, Jan. 2 1896: "On making our first visit to Inka station, for the new year, we found everything moving well. Bro. Cameron and family were kindly received by as good and loyal people as can be found anywhere. They have been careful to look after all the necessities of their new pastor, and so Bro. Cameron begins his work with much encouragement. Bro. W. A. Clark moves off on the Booneville circuit with fine prospects of a successful year."

Rev. J. M. Huggin, Big Creek, Miss.: "I am in my new field of labor, the Pittsboro circuit. Arrived here in time to have preached the second Sunday in December, had the weather permitted a congregation to assemble. We are occupying the parsonage, which is situated in a very fine community, near the village of Big Creek, about eight miles from Pittsboro. Quite a number of the ladies of the neighborhood visited us the day we arrived, and prepared for us a magnificent dinner. Besides this, packages of coffee, sugar, rice, flour, meat, canned fruit, preserves, etc., came from many directions; and still they come. On Christmas Day a barrel of flour was sent to the parsonage as a Christmas present May the Lord help me to minister to this people in spiritual things!"

Rev. W. T. Currie, P. C., Montgomery, La., Jan. 7, 1896: "On Dec. 23 we left Covington for our new home; visited friends and relatives at Clinton, Slaughter and Blairstown, preached at Clinton and Slaughter, and had good altar services. God was with us in great power. On Dec. 31 we left Slaughter en route for Montgomery, our new home. On Jan. 1, 6:30 P. M., we boarded the steamer 'W. T Schovell,' arrived at Montgomery, Jan. 3. Bro. H. B. McCain, a steward of Montgomery Church, met and escorted us to his home, where we spent a delightful evening and night. Saturday we came to our parsonage. The next day being Sunday, we had our first service in the Montgomery Church. A good congregation was in attendance both at 11 A. M., also at night service. Our text at 11 A. M. was Eph. v, 26 and 27. God was with us in great power. On Monday the ladies moved about extensively and drummed up a crowd, which appeared at the parsonage at 7 P. M. with many bundles of 'great variety.' I assure you, they were thankfully received. We are looking forward for great things for the cause of Christ this year of '96. He has promised it, and we are standing on the promises. We ask the prayers of all."

Mrs. R. F. Witt, Brandon, Miss.: "We were at our post, Dec. 20, ready for work. Our reception by the good people of this charge was most cordial and fraternal. Judge Mayors, with carriage and driver, were waiting at the depot to convey us to the cosy little parsonage, where a bevy of ladies, with their own dainty hands, had arranged everything beautifully, while the ruddy flames dancing up the chimney gave a cheery look to each room. These loving friends met us at the parsonage gate and took us into their warmest embrace. Soon we were all seated in the sitting-room, while the good old cook prepared a splendid breakfast. As we entered the little plastered dining-room, where the steaming breakfast was spread and everything in beautiful order was prepared for the pleasure and comfort of preacher and family, how our hearts went up to God in prayer of thanks, and tears of gratitude coursed their way down our cheeks as we realized that our lot is again cast among Methodists of the purest type. The indubitable evidences of appreciation have continued almost from day to day without cessation or remission of ardor. How inspiring these words and acts of fraternal greetings! What heart-cords do they not touch! What magic influences do their not wield! What promptings do they not beget! A cold and disinterested reception is absolutely deadening, and is keenly felt by the weary itinerant. My prayer to God is and shall be, God bless pastor and people, and make this the happiest and most successful year this charge has ever known!"

Rev. E. E. Riggs, Floyd, La., Jan. 1, 1896: "We have always heard Floyd was a 'tuff' place. Not having met any of these people or visited this portion of Louisiana, we had no grounds to believe the reports to be untrue, and when the Bishop read us out for Floyd we must admit we felt like asking a special interest in the prayers of the brethren for our protection on what was thought by some to be a missionary field. In our way out here from Conference our friends along the road encouraged us by saying, 'You have been appointed to a hard place.' I thought, Bless God, with the Lord to back me, I can chase a thousand. We left the train at Delhi, took a private conveyance and drove across the country twenty miles on a body of land that is from three to seven miles in width and above high water. It has a red clay subsoil, very fertil, and well adapted to diversified farming. When we reached the town of Floyd we found the people looked just like the folks in Ouachita, from where we had come. They met us with open arms. The good ladies (thank God for our Christian women!) had the parsonage, which is a house with five rooms, an old time fire-place, where we can throw on a back log and set back, all cleaned, yards swept, a load of wood, the house furnished with everything from a coffee pot to a bedstead; and, Mr. Editor, the thing that tickled your humble servant, the pantry was supplied with groceries of every kind from a half barrel of flour to a pound of soda. We reached here at dark, and the ladies had a warm supper awaiting us. We felt we were among friends. These good people improve on acquaintance. They tell me they want religion, are hungry everywhere for the plain bread of life. We expect to see a great work done this year, through the power of the Holy Ghost, in Floyd, La. Pray for us."

Rev. W. S. Shipman, Sardis, Miss.: "At the late session of the North Mississippi Conference the Board of Missions appointed Rev. T. B. Hargrove, of Coldwater, Miss., Conference secretary; but the fact does not seem to be known either by our Conference or our general secretaries at Nashville. Bro. Hargrove is also secretary of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference, and is so exceedingly modest he forgot to mention this in his Minutes to the Conference. Bro. Hargrove is deeply interested in mission work and well posted. Write to him for any information you may want, and also ask him to visit you and address your people on the subject of missions. He will inform them, quicken their zeal, make them love our mission work more, and make them open their pockets wider and deeper than ever before. Of course, the church provides no salary for him, and this work is not to interfere with his pastoral obligation. In conversation with an intelligent young preacher, a few days ago, he said: 'I am willing to give all my time to the secretaryship of foreign missions of the North Mississippi Conference. Get my living and expenses out of it, and then leave at least as much in the treasury as was paid, this year, which was $7,257.65.' I believe with the right man in the field we could pay him a fair salary and expenses, and in a very few years largely increase our collections; and I now move that next year the North Mississippi Conference put him there. We need more missionary sentiment, and we are not likely to get it without a special head to this department of our work. There are great storehouses of wealth in the North Mississippi Conference yet to be opened for the spread of the gospel. Put it upon some one's head and heart to think and pray for the opening of these long closed doors, and we will be surprised how many will be torn from their rusty hinges. Who will second my motion?"

Rev. J. M. Alford, P. C., of Jordan Street Church, Shreveport, La., Jan. 6, 1896: "I arrived here Dec 21, at 8 o'clock P. M. Bro. C. D. Hicks, one of my stewards and Sunday-school superintendent, met me at the train, and registered me at the City Hotel until permanent arrangements could be made for a home. I am now pleasantly situated within the limits of my work. I must say I never met a more kindly disposed people. I don't feel as if I were in a strange community. We have some people here who have something like the 'old-time religion.' My predecessor preached full salvation, and many of our people are in the blessed experiences of entire sanctification. I have had two regular services already, and am convinced that I have the hearty and ready support of my brethren. It does my heart good to hear the 'Amens' from all parts of the congregation. We don't have any one special 'Amen corner,' as is usually the case, but every corner and even the sides and the center have all been converted into the 'Amen' and 'Praise the Lord' department. I would not hesitate to say that this little church ranks second to none in the Louisiana Conference for spirituality. Church members fully alive to a sense of duty. At least ninety per cent. of our membership will pray in public. Our Sunday-school is indeed encouraging. Yesterday (Sunday) Bro. Hicks, the superintendent, asked me to conduct the children's services, which is at 3 o'clock every Sabbath afternoon, and I was astonished to hear little children, six eight and ten years old, pray in public—not simply the Lord's Prayer, but with words of their own, and some of them would do credit to some prayers of grown people. God bless the dear children! Our worthy Sunday-school superintendent informs me that not less than 40 children will pray in public. Who can beat that? We have an Epworth League which is doing excellent work. All of our services are well attended, and everything now indicates a glorious year. A happy New Year to the beloved editor and success to the dear ADVOCATE. Pray for us."

A COUGH SHOULD NOT BE NEGLECTED. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are a simple remedy and give immediate and sure relief.

An Easy Plan.

I received a letter from a lad, asking me to find him an easy berth. To this I replied: 'You can not be an editor; do not try the law; do not think of the ministry; let alone all ships, shops and merchandise; abhor politics; don't practice medicine; be not a farmer or a mechanic; neither be a soldier or a sailor; don't work; don't study; don't think. None of these are easy. Oh, my son! You have come into a hard world. I know of only one easy place in it, and that is the grave."—Henry Ward Beecher.

A Veteran's Story

Joe. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1862, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends as a blood purifier and tonic medicine, especially to comrades in the G. A. R.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Our Premium Offer.

Rev. W. C. Black, New Orleans—

DEAR BROTHER: The Bible received yesterday. I am delighted with it. Think it is very cheap. Every Sunday-school teacher ought to have one.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN A. GUICE.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 31, 1895.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to January, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1 75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1 50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

You may use this letter if you see fit for the benefit of suffering humanity. Yours truly,

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

M. D. BARBER.

The Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home.

The Board of Directors of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home met at Jackson on the ninth and organized. The following is a list of the officers: W. A. Gunning, president; J. M. Wyatt, vice-president; A. F. Watkins, secretary; J A. Bowen and M. L. Burton, treasurers. The secretary was instructed to advertise for bids for location. The first Sunday in April was appointed as the time for taking the collection ordered by the Annual Conferences. A committee was appointed to secure a charter. The Board will meet again on the first day of May, if not earlier, to decide the question of location.

Thus it is seen that the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, which has been so much talked of, is soon to be an accomplished fact. The charter will be secured within a few weeks, and by the first of May the location will be agreed upon. The bids for the location will doubtless be many and liberal. All this, however, is only a small part of the work to be done. A considerable sum of money will be needed to put the institution into operation. The sum of $3,000 raised by the two Conferences at their recent sessions will not go far towards founding and equipping such an institution as Mississippi Methodism needs and must have. Orphans' Day, the first Sunday in April, will afford all our people an opportunity to contribute according to their ability for the furtherance of this enterprise. It is to be hoped that all our preachers will not only take the collection, as required by a vote of the Conferences, but that they will present the cause in such a way as to loosen the purse-strings of their congregations. No worthier cause can be presented. Just think of it: The Methodists of Mississippi have been for, lo! these many years contributing thousands of dollars annually for the support of Catholic Orphans' Homes. Not only so, but we have also been turning over our Methodist orphans to these Catholic institutions to be reared. Why should this state of things continue? The Catholics constitute, perhaps, less than five per cent. of the population. Why, then, should we turn over our orphans to them for support? Why should we not do as much of this philanthropic work in proportion to population as they?

The time has come for a forward movement. The other Protestant denominations see it as well as ourselves. The Baptists and Presbyterians are bestirring themselves in this cause. If our preachers will make a proper presentation of the matter, we believe that the collections on Orphans' Day will aggregate thousands of dollars. The heartiness of the response at the recent session of the two Conferences augurs well for the success of the enterprise. At the North Mississippi Conference it was proposed to raise $500. In about fifteen minutes $1,100 had been secured. The Mississippi Conference in a very short time raised over $2,000. We regard the outlook for this enterprise as decidedly encouraging.

Christian Unity.

Unity in Christ is, with some, a sentiment often entertained and much admired, but otherwise inoperative. To true believers, however, it means a state of grace to be earnestly sought after and incarnated in the life, both of the individual and of the church. The various sects and communions of Christendom are nearer together in spirit, perhaps, than ever before, but for all that they are many stages removed from that "unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God" to which we are finally to come. The sublime, beautiful, and tender intercessory prayer uttered by our Lord shortly before his betrayal incorporated a petition that his disciples and they who should believe on him through their word also might be one with himself and with the Father.

One conception of Christian unity is that all must accept the same creed and pronounce the same Shibboleth. The Savior, however, announced no other creed save this: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." It was no formal, outward union that he prayed for, but a spiritual union, that of heart with heart. "He that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit," says Paul. So then union with Christ means something higher and nobler than outward connection with the church, than the harmonizing of discordant beliefs. To use the words of Dr. Joseph Parker: "The deepest meaning of Christian unity is identification with Christ in spirit, labor, and purpose; and coming out of that, as a cause and inspiration, union of Christians, genuine brotherly love and trust, a love that sees the Christian in the man and that sees Christ in the Christian. Christian unity is living sympathy with Christ; it is being so like Christ as to be almost himself; it is to be under the sweet dominion of passionate devotion to the blessed and all-blessing cross of Christ."

In Christ Jesus we may all be one, having a common interest in the same Lord, the same heaven, the same glorious salvation. The oneness of believers in Christ is far more real than uniformity in doctrine, or in the externals of religion. Obliteration of social, temperamental, ecclesiastical, and other distinctions, would produce not unity, but dreary monotony. Concord in feeling and desire, in prayer, in love, in action — this is the kind of unity for which the Savior prayed. Strife, envy, and contention, whether between individuals or between sects, are alike the foes of peaceful unity. There is many a church within the borders of our Zion that needs to heed Paul's exhortation to the Corinthians: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." Now and then a brother who "thinks more highly of himself than he ought to think" opposes everything that is done because he is not made prominent or because his opinions have not been consulted. Alas! that any should be so self-willed as to refuse to cooperate in church and charitable work because conducted according to somebody else's plans.

It is self-evident that no church can accomplish much whose members are factious, censorious, and lacking in fellowship. Greed and selfishness dominate the world; the love of God it knows not, understands not. Oneness with the Father is a meaningless term to unbelievers until Christianity interprets it by pointing to visible results in the lives of Christians. The exhibition of usefulness, meekness, and self-sacrificing love for humanity —these are the things that impress men with the reality of Christian unity. Sowers of discord whether in family or church circles are foes of true Christianity.

In localities where religion is at a low ebb, if the Christians would all pull together, the effect would be irresistible. Souls would be saved, vice would disappear, and righteousness would triumph. Pity is it that men calling themselves Christians should watch each other, fearing lest this or that church, or this or that member should obtain an advantage. How powerless an army would be without concert of action among its many regiments? What a lesson might the Christian world learn from the sad downfall of the Grecian States caused by intestine strife.

Too often in the past the significance of the commonalty has been overlooked. History has dealt mainly with royalty, great generalship, and genius. Kings can not rule without subjects, neither can generals win victories without the common soldiers. Railroads can not be run without switchmen, brakemen, and engineers. Upon the faithfulness and efficiency of the individuals composing the masses depends the success of those in authority. A chain is composed of many links, but each is essential. A bridge has many parts, but without them all the structure is incomplete. The body has many members, each having its peculiar function. Likewise, in the church with its countless members, each has his place and work; but all must be animated by the same spirit and purpose. Amid almost infinite diversity of effort and talent community of hopes and interests is the bond of union.

It is worthy of our remembrance that in the body of Christ, the church, the individual Christian finds opportunity for the fullest development and exercise of his God-given faculties, just as man in organized society does his grandest work. It takes community of interests to call forth grand inventions, architectural and literary triumphs, educational and benevolent enterprises. The perfection of a palace depends upon the adaptation of each part to its place and the harmonious arrangement of the whole mass of material. Likewise, in the church complete unity is necessary to its perfection. Each should seek to please his neighbor to edification. Regard must be had for the conscience and weakness of others. Individual differences should be held in check. If the cause of Christ is to make a great advance this year, it will be due not simply to the efforts of a few great leaders, but to the united action of the thousands of private members. We have many waves, but one sea; many stars, but one sky; many nations, but one blood; many folds, but one flock; many sects, but one Bible and one God. In the words of Tennyson:

"Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea,

Kill It Quick.

It is announced through the press that a bill will be introduced into the Mississippi Legislature to legalize horse-race gambling. Why make a discrimination between the different forms of the gambler's art? The State prohibits all other forms of gambling under heavy penalties. On what principle of ethics, then, can it make an exception in favor of the turf? If gambling is wrong at the card-table, it can not be right at the race-track. The plea made in behalf of this measure is the hackneyed one that its passage will promote the stock-raising industry. That such a law would increase the quantity and improve the quality of racing stock is evident; but this would be a positive calamity to the State instead of a benefit. Every race horse reared in the State, or imported into it, means an increase in the number of gamblers. Pass such a law, and only a few years will elapse until many young men who otherwise might have led honorable lives will be professional sports. What sort of statesmanship is this, to debauch the young manhood of the State for the sake of pecuniary gain to a mere handful of men? Such a measure we feel sure will not prevail. We believe there is enough of morality and good sense in the Mississippi Legislature to bury it beneath an avalanche of indignant "Noes." If the originators of this measure wish to promote the industry of stock-raising, let them put their wits to work to devise a measure that shall increase the number and improve the quality of horses for the farm and the road. As for the turf, Mississippi wants no more of it. It is "evil, only evil, and that continually." If the members of the Legislature will consult their constituents, we know what the result will be.

Wise Words.

The following extracts from the message of Gov. Stone to the Mississippi Legislature are worthy of the attention of every citizen of this great republic. These wise words are no less applicable to Louisiana and other States than to Mississippi.

I invite your attention to the necessity of some provision for immediate and summary investigation of homicides. Human life is far too cheap. Manslayers often go unwhipped of justice. One reason is that in a few months after its commission the enormity of the crime is forgotten and swallowed in sympathy for the imprisoned murderer. Witnesses are scattered, often got out of the way, and public opinion is molded by the well-directed and persistent efforts of the friends and followers of the accused. Men are disqualified as jurors, and the difficulty of due administration of justice is greatly increased by delay. There is no reason why all the circumstances of a homicide, or of other great crimes, should not be immediately investigated and judicially determined. Court should meet in as few days as possible after the commission of the crime charged, empanel a jury and inquire into the charge. If an indictment is found, let a speedy and impartial trial be had forthwith, or within as few days as the ends of justice may require. The innocent can not be too soon delivered, or the guilty too quickly condemned to suffer the just punishment of his offense.

Nothing calls so loudly for correction as the present miscarriage of justice in trials for homicide. It is the source of many evils. It breeds mobs and lynch law. It encourages crime by begetting hope of escape from punishment. A man of means and many friends, able to call to his aid all the advantages to defeat justice, has his chance to success greatly increased by time to bring his many resources to bear upon the community; and this has led to the reproach that a man of means may slay his fellow-man with impunity. It is, alas! too true, as often exemplified.

One of the most effective checks to this abuse will be to provide for an immediate opening of court to be held for the case, as a coroner's inquest is held, the sole business of which should be that case, and to draw a grand jury, and if indictment is found, a special venire to try the case then or in such short time as justice may require. It could be adjourned from day to day, according to the exigency, and the case tried.

A great evil attending criminal trials of the highest grade is the persistent and successful effort of a large class of persons who would be good jurors to avoid jury service, especially in capital cases.

The best representatives of the community should be secured for jury service.

By whatever means it is to be effected, I consider it of the highest importance to the welfare of Mississippi that all shall be done that can be by legislative enactment to suppress crimes of graver character, and nothing can be found more effective, as I think, than immediate investigation and trial. Undoubtedly crime should be suppressed. Life should be made securer. Wrongs should be redressed by society through its constituted tribunals. All pretense of exercise of mob law should be removed, and the State should redress wrong so certainly and effectually as to remove from individuals the temptation to undertake to redress them. One of the great objects of the social compact is to substitute the will and action of society for those of the individual; and society fails of one of its chief objects when it fails to dominate individual action in enforcing rights and redressing wrongs. A mob is utterly inconsistent with the basal principles of civilized society. It is at war with government. It is without excuse or justification under any circumstances, or in any case. All who participate in one which takes human life are murderers, and outrageously wrong civil society. Every mob is a menace to society; it weakens the bonds of government, it inflicts a serious blow upon the Commonwealth, and it paves the way for further and greater evils. It can never be justified, if the victim be ever so guilty, for even the guilt of the most atrocious crime has the right to be condemned by the law, which should operate on all alike, as it was made for all, and all are subject to it, and should be judged by it.

Let ample provisions be made to secure the speedy and impartial trial guaranteed by the Constitution for all accused of crime, and a most effective check will be given to the commission of crime, and to the disposition of communities to take the law into their own hands, and undertake the uncertain administration of rude and unwarranted justice upon offenders.

I very much doubt the justice or policy of undertaking to hold counties responsible pecuniarily for acts committed by mobs. That is to punish the innocent for that for which they are not responsible and could not prevent. It is to prevent the consequences of a wrong done by a few, comparatively, upon many who had no voice or hand in it; who had no knowledge of it, and no means of preventing it if they had been advised of it. It is but a repetition of what was done in England, holding the hundred (a subdivision of a county) responsible for certain felonies, unless the felon was brought to justice, and charging the community with loss sustained by robbery—a policy long ago abandoned and never defensible on sound principles.

As the suppression of crime is one of the prime objects of society, and certain punishment of the guilt has been found to be the best means of effecting this result, I believe that the State spends no money more wisely than in pursuing the guilty and punishing them for their crimes. Let it be known that the violator of the law shall surely be brought to justice and be made to suffer the consequences of his misdeeds, whatever the cost, and the most effective deterrent to crime will be provided, and the very best safeguard against action by communities outside of the law will be furnished. If not willing to trust our own tribunals composed of judges and juries of ourselves, we had as well dissolve society and cease to pretend to be a government of laws.

We should rather do all in our power officially and individually to strengthen the hands of civil government, to increase respect for law, which is but the voice of society, and to make impossible in our land a mob or a homicide.

BOOKS.

THE INDUSTRIAL EVOLUTION OF THE UNITED STATES. By the Hon. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor. 12-mo, cloth, Illustrated, $1.

This volume shows how American industries have developed from the colonial period to the present day. The subject is not treated in a dry or statistical way, but the romance of our industrial life is described in a broad and interesting fashion. Many illustrations add to the substantial value of the volume. Among these are representative pictures of a large number of important industries, drawings of those machines which have been revolutionary in their effect upon the development of industry, together with many graphic illustrations showing at a single glance the general industrial progress of the country in its various branches, and maps showing the density of population, the distribution of natural resources, the trade relations of the United States with foreign countries, etc.

THE GROWTH OF THE AMERICAN NATION. By H. P. Judson, Professor of Political Science in the University of Chicago. 12 mo, cloth, profusely illustrated, $1.

This new history of the United States is a distinct addition to American historical literature. It is designed to tell the story, in the form of a continuous narrative, of the development of the American nation from the scattered colonies along the Atlantic coast into a great people bound together in national unity by the constant forces of modern civilization. The book is thoroughly well illustrated. The great success of Professor Judson's "Europe in the Nineteenth Century" is a guarantee that this second volume will meet the needs of C. L. S. C. readers in a most satisfactory way.

In view of the present interest in the Armenian atrocities and the effect of European intervention with the Turks, a special interest attaches to the stirring romance, "Djambek the Georgian," translated from the German of A. The newspapers a few weeks ago announced all over the world the successful ascent of Mt. Ararat by a party of Russians. Scribner's Magazine, for February, contains an article by H. F. B. Lynch, describing the successful ascent which he made in 1893, with a series of graphic illustrations made from his own photographs. It is a remarkable description of a remarkable feat.

The South Carolina Conference, at its recent session, adopted the following resolutions: "In order to preserve peace and harmony in our Conference, Resolved, 1. That it is the sense of this Conference that no local preacher should enter the territory of any other pastor of our Conference without an invitation from those in charge of that territory, and thereby brought under their control. 2. That every preacher in charge shall be held responsible for his local preachers, and required to restrain them when they go beyond the bounds of his charge without an invitation from the preacher in charge where he proposes to work. 3. That all preachers in charge who employ disloyal local preachers or unauthorized and unreliable evangelists are unworthy to receive an appointment among us."

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Enterprise District, Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: The secretary of our district stewards' meeting has sent out the assessments upon the various charges of our district. Among these is an assessment for a district parsonage, which has been located by the committee charged with this work at Enterprise. We have a beautiful lot, and now we want a new house on that lot for our presiding elder. Please collect this assessment at once, and forward it to S. J. Taylor, at Enterprise, who, with two other brethren, has agreed to look after the building. Our laymen will help us very much by sending their contributions for this cause to Bro. Taylor at once.

One of a Thousand.

When at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference an appeal was read from Paine and Lane Institutes asking for $30,000 to aid in equipping those schools for the better education of the colored people, my heart responded, "I will be one of a thousand to give the thirty thousand asked for." We owe this to the colored people, not because they were once our slaves, but because they are an ignorant people, seeking education for their preachers and teachers, and are at our door. The amount they ask for would be a small sum for the whites to give, but would mean much to them. Patriotism moves us to this liberality; philanthropy and Christianity urge us to it.

When the move was made at Yazoo City, Bro. J. N. Ware, of Mississippi, promptly seconded the motion with a thirty-dollar subscription, and "a friend to the colored race" gave fifty dollars in cash. For went of time since the proposition was not pressed further there. Surely a thousand men can be found who will subscribe $30 apiece for this cause, payable during the present year, though subscriptions must not be conditioned upon the raising of the whole amount. Whatever can be raised will be sacredly appropriated, and will do good. Send your subscription or cash to the editor of this paper, or to me.

DEAR BRETHREN: It is with great pleasure that I introduce to you the Rev. Dr. T. S. West, the new agent of Millsaps College. He is worthy of your confidence and personal esteem. You will find him the right man in the right place. The Doctor is genial, full of humor, and very interesting in pulpit and family circle. Some one has said he is a bound edition of Sam Jones. I will not tell you his age, but in spirit and works he is the youngest of the youngest. I know that you will, not only receive him for his work's sake, but for his own personal character. I have already whispered to him that when he reaches the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, he will find as "loyal and royal" company of ministers and laymen as ever blessed the church of Christ.

Vicksburg District Conference.

At the next Annual Conference will be held to Port Gibson, I have changed the District Conference to Edwards, and the time is fixed at March 26 29. The opening sermon will be preached on the twenty-fifth, at 7 P. M. by Dr. C. G. Andrews, on "The Work of the Pastor." The twenty-sixth will be devoted to Sunday-school and Epworth League work, with a sermon on "Education," at 11 A. M., by Rev. J. W. Chambers, and an address at 4 P. M., on "Epworth League Work," by Rev. T. B. Holloman. At 7 P. M. there will be a missionary mass meeting, addressed by Rev. T. L. Mellen. And during the meeting, on Sunday, at 11 A. M., if we fail to get a Bishop, Dr. W. B. Murrah will preach a sermon on "The Church."

As the District Conference will embrace a fifth Sunday, let preachers and laymen come prepared to stay to the close. The effectiveness of the Conference work, as well as the moral influence of the assemblage, are lost in the haste and confusion that attend the effort to close at noon on Saturday. Besides, there are plans necessary to the fullest development of the work in the district, that can only be developed and perfected while we are together. And as the pastors have the assessments on their respective charges, let us all make an effort to come to the District Conference with the two missionary assessments paid in full. Why can we not do this? And let the stewards go earnestly to work and make a good showing on their pastors' salaries by this time. The habit of putting off special efforts to near the close of the year always has, and will continue to work disaster to the interests involved. As far as I have gone on this round, I have found a promptness and liberality manifested by the officials that prestige the largest success for the year. Let this continue in the district, and our watchword be, "A sweeping revival in every church, and every dollar we owe the Lord for 1896."

And now we all join in a hearty invitation to Dr. Black to meet with us in Edwards. J. M. WEEMS, P. E.

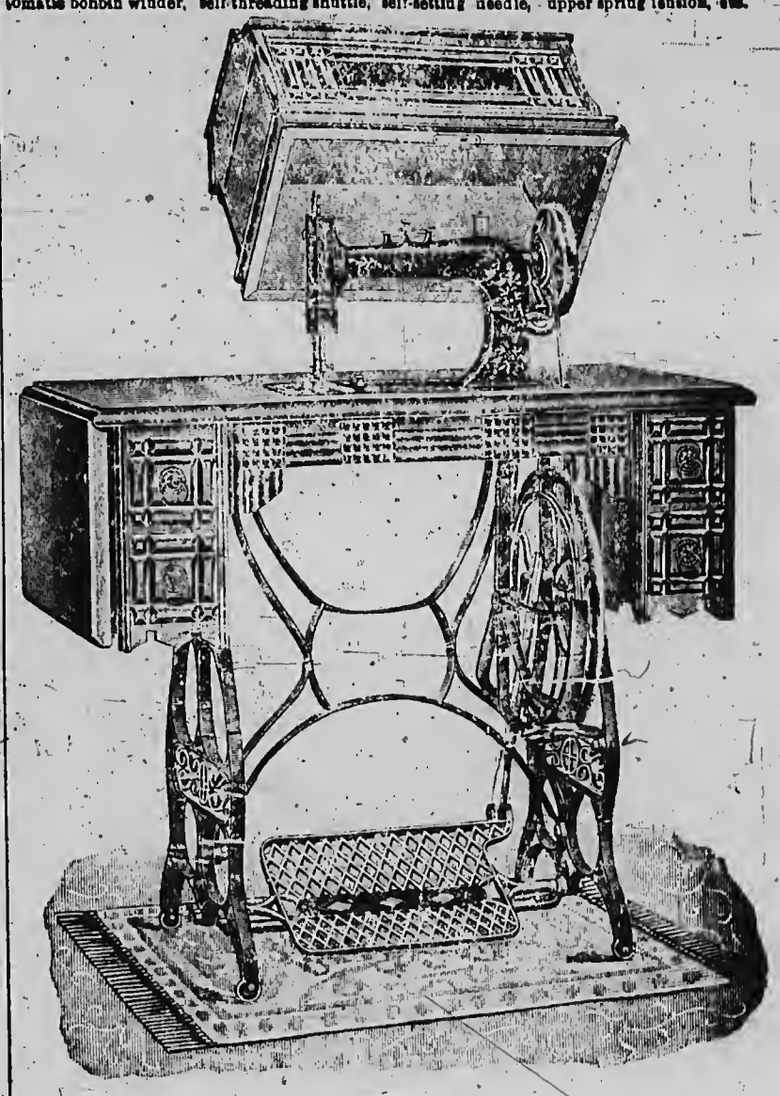
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-grader, packed in a handsome velvet-lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and presents a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack-in motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

MISSING THE SUNSHINE.

BY CHARLOTTA W. THURSTON.

Yonder, fair and round and rosy,
Grew a peach across the way;
But its flavor tells the story
How it missed the golden glory
Of the sunshine, of the sunshine, day by day.

Yonder, pure and strong and gifted,
Lived a man his life apart;
In his soul he loved none other;
Caring for no human brother,—
Missed God's sunshine, missed God's sunshine, in his heart

Losing Friends.

One of the things that most people wake up to when they are approaching middle age is that they have lost a good many friends through their own carelessness. You receive an invitation to the wedding of one whom you knew well eight or ten years ago. He has quite passed out of your life; though, if you were living near each other so that you would meet occasionally, he is the kind of a man in whose society you would find real pleasure. When the invitation comes you express your pleasure that Dick or John is to be married, and hope that he may be happy. And that is the end of it. You do not send a present, or, what is better—and often costs more—a friendly note conveying your congratulations and good wishes. The occasion passes without any sign from you, and you have lost an opportunity of identifying yourself with your friend's happiness. He will not associate you with that epoch of his life, and very likely will resent your silence. It is the same when you fail to take note of a friend's afflictions. It is a real effort to write a letter of sympathy. But such a note may mean a vast deal to one in trouble, and by it you can bind a heart to your own with a hook of steel. The people who complain that they have so few friends have themselves to blame for it. They have lost them through their indifference or thoughtlessness. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly."—Watchman.

Christ in the Heart and in the Home.

The heart is Christ's most coveted home—your heart and mine, and when he is within our heart we can take him into these buildings which we call home, but not until then. We are in an age when Christ is being taken into the home. It will be an age on ages telling because of this. This age is the John the Baptist for the coming century. It is saying: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." The hour is drawing nearer when there shall be more of the living Christ in the homes of our land; more of Christ back of all life and its expression. What an age of righteousness is coming! I should like to live to see it, and if God gives to the young of this generation the allotted length of days, we may all hope to touch its borders at least, for we see it from Pisgah now. Take this risen, living Savior into your heart, my reader. Ask him to abide with you the remainder of your life. He will change the character of all within and around you. He walks with you this moment. Stop! 'Tis he that speaks with you by his Spirit now. Take him home! Take him home! 'Tis thy Savior, the living Christ. —Presbyterian Messenger.

Home Service

If a boy is ever to amount to anything, he must reverence and obey his father. If he does not show reverence willingly, the father enforces it: he must enforce it, or the boy's life will be a failure. But by and by the boy is old enough to appreciate his father and to know his duty. Then the father changes his method. He does not want his son to reverence or obey him under compulsion; he wants him to do it willingly. He will be satisfied with nothing but a free-will offering. He wants heart service. The age of Nadab and Abihu was the child age of the church. The people knew little about God; they did not know what was due him; naturally they had little reverence. If they were ever to amount to anything, God would have to treat them as children and enforce reverence and obedience. And so God used his whip. But we are older and we know better. We can choose between the golden calf and Jehovah; and God wants us to choose. He wants a free-will offering. If we choose to blaspheme his name and profane his day, we can do it; he will not stop us now: the matter will come up for settlement when the day of choosing is past. To-day he asks for heart service. Shall he have it?—The Bible Reader.

Fretting.

A good many women are more fatigued by the work they fail to accomplish than by what they do—that is, they fret and worry over the thousand and one things which demand attention and the hurrying to get through present tasks in order to turn to these others, added to a mental performance which, even though it may never materialize are as physically exhausting to a nervously organized woman as manual labor. Fortunately there are some women who can see things in their rightful proportions, whose perception of perspectives is accurate and to whom small things do not assume the undue proportions which characterize Japanese art. Such women can separate essentials from non-essentials. They can stand off a little way from the situation and get its general effect or see it as it really is, which is the first and most important step toward an adjustment of themselves to it. But this practical sense of perspective is a thing which most women sadly need to develop and cultivate. Its application to women's work is no less important than to artistic effort.

One Hour of Home Reading.

One hour of thoughtful reading each day will furnish food for meditation for all your leisure hours. Persist in this practice until it becomes a controlling habit. Read and study the lives of good men until you have discovered the secret of their goodness and greatness. Read and study history until you know and appreciate the people, understand and measure the leaders, and thus are able to comprehend the causes that made the nation help or hinder the world's progress. Read and study literature until you make your own the ideas of the author, see the pictures he paints, understand the characters he portrays and can think out to their legitimate conclusions the ideas expressed. In science verify statements read by observation or by experiment, if possible. Do not feel satisfied with understanding the words of the author. Master the thought, welcome the enthusiasm he inspires and think out the ideas your study suggests. Study and respect the opinions of others, but in the end stand by your own conclusions.—W. W. Stetson.

The author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, was at one time a teacher in a little country school. She was so poor that she had not even enough money to buy stamps with, and she earned the wherewithal to post her first manuscript to the publishers by picking berries. As time went on, however, the tide of affairs changed, and Mrs. Burnett began to make money with surprising ease. Her income now amounts to over $80,000 a year.—Guardian.

Habits of a Financier.

Edwin Gould is reported to have said that: "If a man lives in the country a part of the year, takes plenty of outdoor exercise, air, and sunshine, eats plain food, makes sure of that peaceful sleep which he can get only in the country, helps to make his wife, children, family and home happy, and enjoys the happiness he helps to make, he ought to be able to work, to keep up the pace from year to year, for his natural term of life.

"I myself go to my office not too often, as I have a telephone in my country home connected directly with the office, and I stay in the country as much as I consistently can. The trouble with business men is a too close and steady contact with their desks. Some men work from nine to five—no longer, no less, every day; they worry when not at the desk, worry when they get there, and the poison of worry, added to close confinement, kills."

How to Make Mother Happy.

"Why, mother, how bright and cheerful you look to-night! What has happened?"

"I feel very happy, my dear, because my little boy has really tried to be good all day. Once, when his sister teased him, and he spoke quickly and crossly to her, he turned around a moment after of his own accord, and said he was wrong, and asked her to forgive him. I believe I should grow young, or never look tired or unhappy again, if every day my little boy and girl were as thoughtful, unselfish, and loving as they have been to-day."

Here's a grand secret for you, little ones; and now that you know how to make mother happy, may you keep her face always full of sunshine!—Scottish Reformer.

A Girl's Composition.

Boys are men that have not got as big as their papas, and girls are women that will be ladies by-and-by.

Man was made before woman.

When God looked at Adam he said to himself, "Well, I think I can do better if I try again."

And then he made Eve.

God liked Eve so much better than Adam that there have been more women than men ever since.

Boys are a trouble.

They wear out everything but soap.

If I had my way, half of the boys in the world would be girls, and the rest would be dolls.

My papa is so nice that I think he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy.—Watchword.

The Boot on the Other Leg.

I have heard of a Scottish congregation who presented their minister with a sum of money and sent him off to the continent for a holiday. A gentleman just back from the continent met a prominent member of the church, and said to him: "Oh! by-the-bye, I met your minister in Germany. He was looking very well; he didn't look as if he needed a rest." "No," said the church member very calmly, "it was na him, it was the congregation that was needin' a rest."—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

One of the sad things with which we often meet in the world is that thousands of young men whose fathers are abundantly able and perfectly willing to give them an education, are utterly indifferent on the subject. When a very rich man's son becomes a finished scholar, the case is so rare as to attract attention and excite comment. On the other hand, there are thousands of poor boys who are eager for the chance to gain knowledge, and full of grief because their way is blocked. Such boys have in them the making of great and useful men. They ought to be encouraged.—Exchange.

HYGIENE.

Sleeplessness.

Tired asked the Ledger to tell her of some harmless medicine that will induce sleep. She has a deep grief that makes her wakeful, but as she can not give the reason for sleeplessness, therefore can not consult a doctor. Answer: There are no harmless remedies that will induce sleep when wakefulness is caused by mental worry. All preparations compounded for this purpose are harmful drugs, the desire for which grows upon the user until he becomes the victim of the most horrible form of slavery. Death itself is preferable to such bondage. Probably one of the best medicines is a few moments active exercising before retiring. A lady who has tried it says she cured herself of a bad case of insomnia by running races with her pet dog. When she was ready to retire, she called Fido upstairs and ran through the hall and communicating rooms for about fifteen minutes, or until she was in a profuse perspiration and fairly out of breath. Then the dog was sent downstairs, and she popped into bed and was soon asleep. Another lady was cured by standing at an open window and for twenty minutes breathing as rapidly as possible. This is worth trying. Breathe through the nose, filling the lungs as full as possible at every inspiration. It is well in cool weather to put an ample cloak or thick shawl and some sort of hood for warmth. Breathe as though you were running, in quick, deep breaths. After about twenty breaths stop and count twenty, letting the lungs fill involuntarily, then begin the quick breathing again, and continue in alternate periods of twenty breaths and rest. After fifteen minutes of this exercise retire at once to bed, and do not allow yourself to be disturbed. This will not only be likely to bring sleep, but will greatly improve your general health.—New York Ledger.

Longevity and Labor.

An English report mentions thirty-three persons upwards of one hundred years of age alive in Great Britain in the year 1893. The oldest was a woman, one hundred and sixteen years old, if the claim was correct, though such cases are usually to be taken with some discount. One of the most striking facts regarding the centenarians is that their lives were those of simplicity and industry.

It is not useful work, but anxiety which kills men. Overwork of the stomach, liver, or kidneys is vastly more damaging to a man than over-work of the brain or muscles, since so long as the stomach is intact, overworked muscles may be easily repaired; and so long as the liver and kidneys retain their integrity, the effects of excessive brain work are easily removed by the elimination of the resulting poisons from the body. Many die from over-work, but it is over-work at the dinner table rather than in the field, workshop or counting room. Hard labor is healthful. The majority of men, and women also for that matter, are suffering, not from over-work, but from too light work. More work is required. It may be more mental activity or more muscular exercise. Evil results from work flow not from excessive work, but from a lack of the proper distribution of work so that every organ and every faculty receives its own share and not one organ an excess and another a deficiency.—The Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

FRIZZLED BEEF.—To every cup of smoked beef cut in thin shavings, take one tablespoonful of hot butter, one cup of scalded cream and one well-beaten egg. Put the beef in a saucepan, pour one cup of boiling water over it and let it stand on the back of the stove for ten minutes. Drain, add the butter, and as soon as the beef is frizzled or curled up add the cream and the egg. The egg should be well beaten and the cream poured over it. Season to taste with salt and pepper and serve at once.—Table Talk.

The duty for the moment is always clear, and that is as far as we need concern ourselves; for when we do the little that is clear, we will carry the light on, and it will shine upon the next moment's step.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

OBITUARIES.

BURTON—William Walter Burton was born in Staffordshire, England, June 12, 1814. He married early in life, but his wife died soon, leaving one son. In 1841 he came to America, and for many years exercised his skill as a machinist in various parts of the United States. On July 21, 1863, he was married to Mrs. Sarah A. Duson in St. Landry parish, La. Here he lived for many years, and became the father of three daughters, two of whom survive him. For the past six years he has resided in Crowley, where he is well-known and respected.

For many years of his married life he was irreligious, and was the subject of many an anxious thought and earnest prayer on the part of his devoted wife. About four years before his death he resolved to lead a new life, and in March, 1895, during a revival meeting he professed, with streaming eyes, a consciousness of God's pardoning love. Ever since his hope has been confident.

Recently he became very desirous of visiting his childhood home once more. As he took a mournful leave of his wife and children for the long voyage from which he might never return, he said, "I know we will meet in heaven." While yet in England he was taken severely ill, and, though tended lovingly by his son and sisters, his enfeebled constitution succumbed to the disease, and his spirit ceased its struggles on Nov. 15, 1895, having passed his fourscore years. His body was laid to rest beside his mother in Lancashire, England, until the resurrection morning.

W. Winans Drake.

TUKOLO—Malicia Tukolo, the subject of this sketch, was a full-blood Chootaw Indian. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1891, under the ministry of Rev. W. J. Dawson, and was baptized and received by the writer. She died Nov. 25, 1895.

She was the first fruits of our labors among the Indians. She was the first of our number to die. Her Christian life on earth was very brief, but these few years were years of great usefulness. She was full of zeal and love for her tribe, seeking us to see them all safe in the fold of the Great Shepherd, ever ready to speak a word of warning to the indifferent ones, and to encourage those who were seeking salvation. She was never ashamed or afraid to condemn all she believed to be wrong, or to uphold all she believed to be right. Her prayers, songs and exhortations at church, at home and in the community were so earnest and simple as to make even those who could not understand a word of her language feel that she was led by the Spirit and filled with the Holy Ghost.

"She being dead, yet speaketh." She is gone, but we will ever cherish her memory, and we fully expect to meet again in the home above. She died as a good Christian dies, submissive and resigned. Her end was peace. She leaves a husband and three children, all members of the church. May they be comforted and sustained!

W. W. Cammack.

MORELAND—John Alexander Moreland was born in Putnam county, Ga., May 4, 1836. He was married to Miss Mary M. Tucker, Oct. 3, 1858. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, from September, 1865, until his death, Nov. 17, 1895.

He had been in bad health for several years. Prior to his sickness he was a very active, busy man. He leaves a devoted wife and nine children who revere his memory. He was a good man and a true Christian, a devoted husband and pious father. I was his pastor for three years. We had many pleasant seasons together, both social and spiritual. His house was the preacher's home (and a good one it was). There I received many kind words of advice and encouragement. He had a host of friends. His funeral was very largely attended. You could hear words like these from almost every tongue: "Bro Moreland was a good man!" "The church has lost a true friend." "Who will take his place?" He had been a steward and class-leader ever since he joined the church. He magnified his office. He hated shams and despised pretensions. He was a sincere and devoted friend.

Bereaved ones, be true to God and the right, and you will soon meet him again at the beautiful gate.

His pastor, C. C. Evans.

Good Hope, Miss.

KENT—Dr. Walter Stephen Kent was born in Montgomery county, near Winona, Aug. 5, 1865, and died at his home in Sharon, Dec. 29, 1895.

At the age of twenty he had obtained a well-rounded education. He chose for his profession the practice of medicine, and after spending three years in the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University, and having gotten his diploma, he located at Sharon, Miss.

He was converted and joined the Baptist church quite young. November 18, 1891, he was happily married to Miss Annie May Pritchard, of Madison county. He joined the Methodist Church with his wife the first year of his married life. He was never known to refuse to discharge any duty his church put upon him.

A more successful and popular physician never was known by the people of Sharon. In his death Sharon lost an excellent physician, his wife a devoted husband, the community a noble, true citizen. His end was peace. May this precious wife so live that she may meet her devoted husband in the glory-land above, where parting is unknown!

W. J. Ferguson.

HOLLADAY—Robert M. Holladay was born in Tallofora county, Ga., March 2, 1819, and died in Kemper county, Miss., Dec 9, 1895. He joined the Methodist Church in his eighteenth year, and his life was a consistent Christian one from then till his death. He came to the State of Mississippi in 1844. He was thrice married. His last wife now survives him.

I knew very little of Bro. Holladay personally, but those who knew him well, and whom I have frequently heard speak of him, always spoke of him as being "a good man." This is saying a great deal of anyone. I was his pastor twelve months; was in his company only once or twice, and he impressed me very forcibly that he was indeed a good man. Not one word did I ever hear against "old Uncle Bob Holladay," as he was frequently called.

A good man has gone to his reward. Weep not, loved ones, but live for heaven, that you may meet him there.

He leaves a wife, two small children, and several children by his former wives, all of whom are doing well. May God comfort them all! is the prayer of his former pastor.

F. B. Ormond.

Toles, Miss.

WILLIAMS—At a meeting of the Board of District Stewards, held in Sardis, Miss., Jan. 3, 1896, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Almighty God, in his wisdom and discretion, has seen proper to remove by death from his labors here on earth since we last met our beloved brother, E. F. Williams, a former member of this Board of District Stewards, and an earnest co-worker with us in the vineyard of our Master; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Board of District Stewards, that we bow in humble submission to the will of Divine Providence, fully believing that he doeth all things well, and that while we shall miss him in our deliberations as a wise, zealous, and earnest advocate in all things pertaining to the cause of our Master, and deeply mourn the great loss we have sustained, yet we are reconciled in knowing that he has need for him. We sincerely sympathize with the bereaved family in this their great distress, and can truly say that he was a good father and husband, a bright and shining light in the church, an honorable man, and a good citizen. Our holy religion causes us to fully realize that he is now in a brighter and fairer world than this.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our Minutes; that a copy be sent to the family, and copies be furnished the Sardis Reporter and New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Instructive Strike Figures

Mr. Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, has issued his annual report, a copy of which is now before us. It contains some interesting facts about strikes. Coming from this source, they are impartial and authoritative. During the past seven and a half years Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania have had the largest number of strikes, and they stand in the above order. The number of persons thrown out of employment was 2,391,203. The exact amount of time lost is not estimated, but the loss of wages in the twenty-six leading manufacturing cities of the country was $35,000,000, and the loss to employers $29,000,000. The employees succeeded in less than half the strikes. Only seven per cent. of the strikes were sympathy strikes. Twenty-five per cent. were for an increase of wages.

In the face of these facts, it is for employees to decide whether strikes pay. To most persons it would seem quite clear that they do not. There must be some better way of settling such disputes.—Pittsburg Advocate.

A Chance to Make Money.

I read some weeks ago how one of your subscribers made money selling Dish Washers. I ordered one, tried it, and it did the work beautifully. My lady friends came in, saw it, and were charmed, as they all hate the drudgery of dish-washing, and they mostly all do their own work. My brother suggested that we start in the business. We did so and have made $1,700, after paying all expenses. Our sales were made at home. We have not canvassed any. Our business is increasing right along, and we are going to stick to it until we have made ten thousand dollars, or until the United States is supplied with Mound City Dish Washers.

We sell from five to fifteen Dish Washers every day, and some days more. The Dish Washer is lovely, and every house-keeper wants one. Get a sample Washer, show it to your friend, and you are sure to make money. No excuse for any to be poor, when money can be made as easily as it is selling Dish Washers. For full particulars and sample Washer, address, Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo. They will start you on the road to success.

What constitutes a good church member? This is a definition from an unknown writer: "He believes in his church. He loves it. He gives himself to it. He prays for it and speaks kindly of it. He does not put a stumbling-block in the way of his brethren, but avoids those things which grieve or cause them to offend. He is charitable in his judgments and promotes peace. He feels it a duty to build up his own congregation. He cheers his brethren and his pastor by regular attendance upon the public services. He helps his pastor and does not leave him to preach to empty pews with an aching heart, or to carry on the prayer meetings alone. It is no slight excuse that keeps him from the Lord's Supper. The appointments of his church and the memory of his Savior are sacred to him; he does not trifle with either. He keeps his covenant solemnly made with his church when he entered its fellowship. God bless our good members, old and young, and constantly increase their number."

Daniel was a busy statesman, but amidst the cares of office he found time to pray three times a day. The man must be busier than Daniel who has not time to pray, and wiser than Daniel who can do what Daniel did without prayer to help him.

germ-life

The doctors tell us, now-a-days, that disease germs are everywhere; in the air, in the water, in our food, clothes, money; that they get into our bodies, live there, thrive and grow, if they find anything to thrive on.

Consumption is the destruction of lung-tissue by germs where the lung is too weak to conquer them. The remedy is strength—vital force.

Scott's Emulsion, with hypophosphites, means the adjustment of lung strength to overcome germ-life. It is fighting the germ with the odds in our favor. These tiny little drops of fat-food make their way into the system and re-fresh and re-invigorate it. Whether you succeed with it or not depends on how good a start the germs had, and how carefully you can live. The shortest way to health is the patient one. The gain is often slow.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Burgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to January, '97. (A little later it will be February, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2.45.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Presbyterian Church at Soranton, Miss., was consumed by fire on Jan. 10.

Much alarm has been created in Brookhaven, Miss. by the discovery of three new cases of small-pox.

Mayor Strong of New York, flies a flag over the City Hall to show when he is there, and it does not meet with the unanimous approval of New Yorkers.

The greater part of the time of the Senate during the present week will be consumed in the discussion of the finance committee's silver substitute for the bond bill.

The mayor and aldermen of Dubuque, Iowa, have been indicted for voting themselves an increase of salary, contrary to the charter. The penalty is $500 and a year in jail.

A Masconiah (Ill.) preacher sued a member of his church for $35, his subscription to the support of the church. The court gave the preacher a verdict for the amount and costs.

Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the United States Senate, was first elected a congressional chaplain in 1845 just fifty years ago, being then 22 years old, the youngest man whose voice had ever been heard in Congress.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of citizens of Lake Charles, Calcasieu parish, on Saturday evening, to express sympathy with the Cuban insurgents, and to urge upon Congress the prompt recognition of the belligerent rights of the patriots.

At the time of his death Stephen Girard left $2,000 000 to the college which he established. Since that time the property, which was in coal lands, and various holdings in real estate, has increased to more than $14,031 828 The revenues from this vast estate last year were over a million dollars.

Miss Clara Barton, of the Red Cross Society, with fifteen assistants, will start within two weeks on her mission of relief to the suffering Armenians. Miss Barton met a number of leaders in the movement and consented to sail with $50 000 pledged. That amount was promised, and Miss Barton will donate at Constantinople.

On the fourth of January a large meeting of the Allegheny Bar Association was held at Pittsburg to decide the question whether or not women should be admitted to practice. The women were victorious by a vote of more than ten to one, consequently they will be accorded the same privileges as their male colleagues.

The meeting of citizens of this city on Thursday night, representing the various wards of the city, to demand an honest government for the city, and to promise co-operation with any proper movement to that end, is a matter of special interest. It shows that the people are aroused at the humiliating situation in which they have been placed by their present municipal government, and are determined to have a change.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the United States Senate has decided to recommend a resolution fully committing Congress to the indorsement of the Monroe doctrine. Although the line of action outlined in the celebrated message of President Monroe has ever since been, by general consent, accepted as the ground plan of our foreign policy, there has been no actual legislation on the subject by the law-making power.

FOREIGN.

Gen. Gomez and the revolutionists have captured Guira, Cuba. The city of Aguizar was also taken, with large ammunition supplies.

Li Hung Chang is no longer viceroy of the great province of Chihli. He resides in Pekin by imperial order with his family and few friends about him, and is said to have no influence in current affairs.

A grand monument is to be erected in Mexico in honor of President Diaz. It will be patterned after the Arc de Triomphe, in Paris, and will stand in the upper portion of the Paseo de la Riforma. It is to be very elaborately ornamented with sculpture.

Outwardly, at least, there is little, if any, change in the political crisis between Great Britain and Germany, brought about, it is asserted, by Emperor William's support of the South African republic in face of the suzerainty of Great Britain over the Transvaal.

Throughout the week the Transvaal question has monopolized public attention. It is the unanimous feeling in Germany that the Jameson raid was done to connivance upon the part of the British government, in spite of official denials, and all Germany is intensely, but quietly anti-English.

Great Britain is seriously and steadily preparing for war on a large scale at sea and on land against Germany, or against Germany, France, Russia, should they combine against her. Emperor William threw down the gauntlet and it was promptly picked up and energetic steps were immediately taken by the British government to back up this action by a most imposing display of sea power.

Although the excitement resulting from the raid of Dr. Jameson into the Transvaal has quieted down somewhat in both Great Britain and Germany, there are many evidences that the danger of a rupture, as a result of the complications which have arisen, is not yet passed. The German papers are distinctly less belligerent in tone, but the British press is still defiant, and the British people appear to have become thoroughly infected with the war craze.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

PERSISTENCE IN PRAYER.

(Luke xi, 5-13; xviii, 1-7.)

We like the old Latin proverb, "Perseverantia omnia vincit"—perseverance overcomes all things. This is not only true in secular and church matters, but also in spiritual things.

1. Both of the parables of our lesson teach that in prayer we may meet with seeming repulsion. Not that God is not willing to help upon the first approach, but the persistence in prayer is necessary to give our faith the receptive strength.

(1) In one case a friend at first refused to extend a neighborly favor. Said he, "Trouble me not; the door is now shut."

(2) In the other parable a widow asked a judge deliverance from an unreasonable opponent. But the judge would not for a while.

(3) In each case, finally, assistance is acquired. The unworthy motive here assigned does certainly not apply to God. Christ wished solely to teach that both ultimately obtained what they requested.

2. The first parable of our lesson contains the statement of a most wonderful fact. God answers prayer.

(1) Ask, and ye shall receive. Entreat, petition. A condemned criminal asking for pardon.

(2) Seek, and ye shall find. Seek anxiously, persistently. Thus Henry Stanley found Livingston. We've bought and found lost valuables.

(3) Knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Knock loudly, persevering-ly. In the rain before your home without the house-key.

3. Lastly, the lesson refers to parental love as symbolical of God's good-will to men.

(1) A father will not give a stone instead of bread, not a serpent instead of a fish, not a scorpion in place of an egg. Instinct indicates the contrary.

(2) "If ye, then, being evil"—ye, who compared to God are not absolutely and symmetrically perfect. The same as moonlight may be called darkness in sunlight. The best of us require daily to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses."

(3) Our heavenly Father will give the Holy Ghost in answer to importunate prayer. Does the Holy One live in you? If not, then you may acquire his indwelling now. Pray earnestly, perseveringly, weepingly, believingly pray, and you will certainly acquire the gift unspeakable.

SECURE A POSITION.

Timely Warning.

The great success of the chocolate preparations of the house of Walter Baker & Co. (established in 1780) has led to the placing on the market many misleading and unscrupulous imitations of their name, labels, and wrappers. Walter Baker & Co. are the oldest and largest manufacturers of pure and high-grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent. No chemicals are used in their manufactures.

Consumers should ask for, and be sure that they get, the genuine Walter Baker & Co.'s goods.

THE LESSON OF NATURE.

BY JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.

There's a wealth of lovely pictures in this blessed world of ours;
There's the rainbow in the heavens, after Spring and Summer showers,
With its wondrous hues prismatic, with its perfect arching grace,
From the zenith of its beauty to its distant misty base.

There's the sunrise o'er the mountains in the simmering August days;
There's the sunset in the valley in a veil of bluish haze;
There's the river flowing gently from the upland to the sea,
Now all golden in the sunlight, in the shadow silvery.

There's the meadow full of clover, and the cattle grazing there—
All is silent, all is peaceful, all is free from every care.
There's the vista through the woodland, with its gorgeous Autumn hue;
There's the twinkling star a-peeping through the deepening evening blue.

There's the vast, unrestful ocean, 'neath a fair, unclouded sky;
There's the dancing wave a winking as the ships go sailing by;
There's the garden with its flowers, with its roses all ablow;
There's the very soul of purity, the first fresh fall of snow.

And they come and go forever in a never-ceasing train,
And we mortals, gazing on them, know they're sure to come again.
'Tis the message of Jehovah to his people—you and me—
"Take the promise that I give you of your immortality!"

—Harper's Bazar.

But whether the reader will agree with me, or not, as to the power of Bishop Keener to engrave the characters of his book on the memory and affections, there can be no doubt as to the readableness of his book. He has the art of writing what people like to read—the charm of the interesting. And as it is all on the side of good, no critic can complain. Attractive mannerism even is a gift and a power. Macaulay has said in his review of Croker's and Boswell's life of Sam Johnson: "Mannerism is pardonable, and is sometimes even agreeable, when the manner, though vicious, is natural."

The book is a fine antidote against "eating cares." It reminds one of Hamlet's apostrophe to Yorick, "Of infinite jest, most excellent fancy." It is full of jibes and gambols, flashes of merriment "to set the table on a roar." It suggests some of the lines from that gladsome, soaring poem of Milton's L'Allegro. Through the book seem to trip:

"Jest and youthful jollity,
Quips and cranks and wanton wiles,
Nods and becks and wreathed smiles,
. . . . . .
Sport that wrinkled care derides,
And Laughter holding both his sides."

"The frolic wind that breathed the Spring" seems to play in the wild abandons of some of its moods. And the furies of sarcasm—the flesh tearers—are there, too; and the lines in Dryden's great ode are recalled:

"See the furies arise!
See the snakes that they rear!
How they hiss in their hair!
And the sparkles that flash from their eyes!"

If one did not recognize another motif—which is not so easily discernible, at least, not palpable—it might be thought to be an exercitation to display the immense versatility of the writer in the realm where he sways his sceptre. One almost feels like applying to the book the language Lord Brougham does to Burke: "A tempest of every weapon of attack, invective, abuse, irony, sarcasm, simile drawn out to allegory, allusion, quotation, fable, parable, anathema," or what Macaulay says of Jeremy Collier: "All the modes of ridicule, from broad fun to polished and antithetical sarcasm, were at his command." In breadth of faculty, in plenitude of play, there is almost bewilderment. The profusion, the sparkle, the variety, remind one of that garden in the Arabian Nights, where Aladdin found his lamp, where the trees bore all manner of precious gems, and where diamonds, sapphires, rubies, pearls, what not, flashed their myriad refulgences in dissolving resplendences.

Much might be said about the delight and relief his versatility offers the reader, to say nothing of the genius displayed in the affluence of the creative faculty. Anyone who is familiar with the comic dramatists of the Restoration, or with Sheridan (to say nothing of others), will understand our meaning. The glare of their wit is dazzling, undramatic, and soon becomes painful. It is like wandering through a large blacksmith's shop, where the whole space seems full of cornscations from the red-hot irons on the anvils; or like a Christmas eve night of our boyhood, when the zenith was a shower of sparks from fireworks. But the Bishop scintillates here with a flash of wit. Then there is a peal of selfish laughter. Then there is some dry and deadly sardonicism. And in infinite variety, in richest profusion, he goes, popping in puns, peppery with epigram, jingling in alliteration, airy and deft in raillery or banter; so sly sometimes that, unless you are very spry, you do not catch the furtive twinkle of his merry eye; then roaring with objurgation. He has a sting, too, and reminds one with it of the Latin phrase, Animam in vulnere ponit; and of more than one of his victims may one say, as Junius said of one of his, Hæret lateri lethalis arundo.

His wit is "a fantastical banquet—so many strange dishes." The most delicious melange, olla podrida, salmagundi—a very burlesquinade of crotchets, quirks, quips. It teems with bits and scintillates with surprising turns; humor rung on juxtapositions of contrary or diverse thoughts. And his assaults are deadly, and he is swift in dispatch. He seizes a foily, gives it one stab with death-dealing blade, and tosses it from him. Sometimes "he speaks poniards, and every word stabs," as Benedict says of Beatrice. He is a great master of innuendo, and is very ingenious and adroit in his indirections. Sometimes one feels almost tempted to say, as did one in "Much Ado About Nothing":

"Your wit is not seen enough. You should wear it in your cap."

For, as Shakespeare says:

"A jest's prosperity lies in the ears of him that hears it."

Some of his wit is so compacted in its expression as to be of almost "impenetrable density," as Macaulay designates some of the language of Thucydides; so full of acumen or abstruseness as to lose perspicuity. It is fairly metaphysical in its depth. Humor seems almost a prerogative. As Dryden said of Shaftesbury, "Wit is his attribute." Sarcasm seems a gift, as a sting to a hornet. Sometimes he is bristling with epithet and epigram; then lowering with saturnineness, and reverberating in thunder-peals of denunciation. It is slightly tinged with the didactic, philosophical, and oracular, too. Predominantly, there is a covert, electric quality about his thrusts, a furtive, sedate deadliness. One is not forewarned, and encounters the shock, like one when bathing, on pleasure bent, who encounters an electric lamprey eel. This is particularly before he enters the dramatic realm, and when he is speaking in the first person.

The wit and humor of "Post Oak Circuit," much of it, is the outbreak of exuberant animal spirits, and the activity of a most inventive and ingenious intellect. A most vigorous imagination, an excellent judgment or taste, and reasoning powers, are all involved. Also an exquisite sense of the ridiculous and humorous. And with all this characterization there remain phases of wit and humor, strokes of description, and other salient features we have not noticed, and which will receive attention as the occasion shall commend it.

Armenian Relief Fund.

Under the conviction that something should be done immediately for the relief of suffering humanity in Armenia, we laid before the Mayor and citizens of Nashville, Tenn., a paper, from which we make the following extracts:

"There are crises in the history of nations which challenge the attention of the civilized world and imperatively demand prompt and vigorous action. The situation of the unfortunate Armenians, at the present juncture, is one which appeals to the great heart of humanity, without distinction of creed or nationality. It is not necessary to review the situation or the facts which have been given the public through the press during the past three months. In an editorial in the Outlook, of Dec. 7, the New York Sun is quoted as having made the statement that during the twenty-five days preceding the fifteenth of November, 15,000 Armenians perished by the sword. Dr. Cyrus W. Hamlin, for many years President of Robert College, in Bulgaria, in a strong article in the same periodical, affirms that 250 000 will probably perish of cold and hunger before the end of the Winter.

"Relief committees have been organized in New York City, Boston, and London, and protection will be afforded by the great powers for those who are charged with the distribution of food and money. As in the great famine which occurred in Northern China a few years ago, a single dollar may save a human life. But what is done must be done quickly, when, as stated, there are thousands of women and children already exposed to bitter cold and starvation. The times are hard, and large amounts from individuals can not be expected, but there are thousands who can give at least one dollar each to this relief fund. We appeal to Jews, Roman Catholics, Protestants, and all whose hearts have been wrung by the barbarous and inhuman treatment of these helpless people. Will not the papers take up this matter with a request that the mayor of Nashville lead the movement by the appointment of a committee of representative men and women, who will take immediate steps to secure subscriptions and forward the same to Brown Brothers and Company, treasurer of the National Committee, 59 Wall street, New York City, for distribution under the auspices of the Red Cross?"

The paper above referred to has been favorably acted upon by the mayor and City Council of Nashville; and a committee of city pastors representing the Jewish Synagogue, the Roman Catholic Churches, and all the Protestant denominations, has been appointed to arrange for an immediate canvass. We believe that the spirit of Christ, and of universal brotherhood growing out of his life, must prompt our people in every town and section of our country to respond to so urgent an appeal, and we earnestly hope that those who read this will take immediate action toward the organization of relief committees and the forwarding of funds. If delay carries us beyond the end of February, it will probably be too late.

Since writing the above we have received a communication from Spencer Trask, Esq., 45 William street, New York, chairman of the National Armenian Committee, who says: "Within the last few weeks additional and great atrocities have been committed; hundreds of towns and villages have been destroyed. A statement from an American eye-witness of the most competent and most trustworthy character has been placed in the hands of the committee, showing that probably not less than 50 000 innocent people have already been put to death, and at least 350,000 homeless women and children are now entirely destitute and in danger of perishing from exposure as well as from starvation."

The Hon. David J. Brewer, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, is president of the Armenian Relief Committee; Brown Brothers and Company, treasurers; but all correspondence should be directed to Spencer Trask, Esq., as above-mentioned.

In order to more thoroughly carry out the work of raising funds, the committees request governors of States, Boards of Trade, mayors, and other prominent citizens, to take steps at once to organize strong representative committees in their respective localities throughout the country. Funds should be forwarded to the national treasurer from time to time without waiting till the work is all done and until all subscriptions are in. Further information will be furnished by Mr. Trask.

He who gives quickly gives twice.

Is the Living Present.

The Catholic News diabolically says, "That most pernicious of all sects, the Protestant Bible Society, is again at its murderous work." Recommends that colporters be tarred and feathered. All the same, the supporters of that paper dainsively call themselves Christians.

Archbishop Farrar has made more than $40,000 of his three books: "Life of Christ," "Life of St. Paul," and "Early Days of Christianity." But let this not be an inducement to rush into print with your manuscript. While one author derives pecuniary benefit from his publications, nine others lose money and love of—friends.

The Forum is justly severe on church festivals. Says a certain clergyman had recently opened a church bazaar with, 'You have come to be cheated a little, but I hope that you will be cheated a great deal.' Say what you will,

"'Tis an honorable kind of thievery."

Have often thought that churches which can not subsist without catering to the devil's good-will ought to suffer abolishment.

Joseph Cook, the intellectual giant of Boston, has returned from his trip around the world—a physical wreck. It will be a long time before the Monday lectures will again regale the reading public.

The Delaware whipping-post is a survival. The law forbids that the sheriff shall employ negroes in administering the lash. Women are exempt from the castigation. In the case of children criminals, it is optional with the court. The State has no penitentiary. Whippings are administered in cases of theft, perjury, incendiarism, embezzlement, etc. Would not such treatment of criminals work well in other States?

Queen Victoria has appointed as Tennyson's successor as poet laureate the Roman Catholic, Alfred Austin—a man vastly inferior to many literary contemporaries. English papers call him "a first class, all-around, commonplace man."

When, in 1861, the United States plenipotentiary, Dr. Marsh, crossed the boundary line of the Quadrilateral—at that time the Pope's territory—his Bible was confiscated. Now there are eleven Protestant Churches in Rome. But our great dailies continue to mislead public opinion by Jesuitically "doctored" dispatches from the land of Cicero.

Perambulating.

I have not been revivaling any since Conference, but have been moving around among the brethren looking after the financial interests of our Grenada Collegiate Institute. The preachers have been very kind to me. The fact is, I have never seen a grander set of men than those of the North Mississippi Conference as anywhere. Then, too, the brethren feel a little bad because they didn't give us the thousand-dollar assessment we asked for. However, we are not grieving over that, but are doing all we can to build up our Conference college.

I have spent the greater part of my time in the Greenville district, because Bro. Randolph voted a little louder than anybody else against that assessment for the college, and, therefore, I can collect money that he might get with less remorse of conscience. When I saw him the other day, and told him how much money I had collected from his district, he looked very much like he was sorry he voted such a long and loud "Ay." But with all this against him, he is doing a grand work for the church in the Delta. He says he is going to make the best report at the next Conference that has ever been made from Greenville district, and I believe he will do it. Dr. Randolph is somewhat of a general, and, it seems to me, that he has secured the right men for his district. I have been watching his work for several years, and I do not hesitate to say that he is one of the best presiding elders I know anything of. He looks carefully after all the interests of the church.

Meek, at Clarksdale, is taking the town by storm. He is laying plans to build that long-talked-of brick church. The people over there say he is the Apollos of the North Mississippi Conference.

Bradley and Lewis are among our most promising young men, and both are starting off well at Shaw and Lula.

I found Bell at Friar's Point, and he has made a fine impression on the people of the little city on the river. He is safe a case anywhere. He pulls as well in the mud as in the sand. By the way, Bell would make a fine presiding elder.

Now, just a word" about our work here at home. Of course, we are glad to have Lewis back in Grenada. He has a strong hold upon these people, and that, itself, puts him in a position to do a grand year's work.

Bro. Malone is doing a fine work at the college. He is building up a school of high grade, and he ought to have the support of the whole Conference. I do hope the Conference will not force him to take girls for less than cost, and thereby compel him to lower the present standard of the college work.

It is very gratifying to us to be able to say to the preachers of the Conference that we did not lose one of the old girls Christmas. All are back, and some new additions.

The health of the college is splendid. Send us the Methodist girls, and Sister Malone will see to it that they are well cared for. It will be worth a great deal to your daughter to have her come in contact with so good and so cultured a woman as Sister Malone.

But I have already written too much. I fear this will find its way to the waste-basket. Success to you, Doctor. I hope to secure more subscribers to the ADVOCATE this year than I did last. Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

P. S.—Have just heard from Bro. Honnoll, and he writes me that he has 49 boarders—good! There are enough Methodist girls in this Conference to fill both colleges to overflowing, and many to spare. Brethren, why do you let them go off to other denominational schools? Do you preach on the subject?

Arbitration Necessary.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate, of last week, quotes an editorial of Hugh Price Hughes in the London Times, and then comments upon it in the following fashion:

"The association of our President with the Sultan of Turkey in spoiling Christmas angelic songs reveals the Methodist Times' unfaltering persuasion that the English ministry is necessarily and unquestionably right, while our own government is all wrong, as a matter of course. The Sultan has recently despoiled and murdered from 40,000 to 60,000 Armenians; but his 'unspeakable atrocities are overshadowed by the incredible and appalling attempt of the President to precipitate' two nations 'into fratricidal strife'!

"It is asked what the Methodist Churches in the United States and our Bishops 'have to say to this awful proposal' of war 'over a petty frontier dispute.' We reply in terms which our churches and their Bishops will certainly accept: If the frontier dispute is 'petty,' let the Wesleyan and other churches in England advise Lord Salisbury to arbitrate it, as he has been asked to do. The very 'pettiness' of the dispute reveals the English want of chivalry in refusing to do justice toward a weak people like the Venezuelans, and the English stint of sensible fairness when asked to submit a 'petty dispute' to an impartial international commission.

"It compels wonder to hear our English Methodist contemporary speaking about our attempt 'to rule the South American portion of the British Empire,' and to 'determine by brute force what are the frontiers of the British Empire.' We suggest again that we deprecate all brute force, British brute force included. We prefer to determine frontiers by arbitration which Lord Salisbury declines to do. Moreover, our President has not proposed to 'determine' British frontiers. We are concerned alone about Venezuelan frontiers against which, it would appear, British brute force threatens to hurl itself. England is entitled to all the land she received from Holland, and Venezuela should retain all the land she derived from Spain. The lines are not defined, and they should be determined justly. We have proposed a determination of boundary lines through arbitration, but England refuses. In the absence of arbitration, and in the presence of a movement to occupy the disputed territory, brute force seems to be implied. By whom is it implied? Is British force never brutal? Arbitration is our American proposal. Refusal of arbitration is English in this instance. Who, therefore, threatens war, and all the horrors concerning which the Methodist Times waxes so earnestly eloquent? We suggest that the issue resides in England, where Wesleyan church papers, Wesleyan churchmen, and Wesleyan presidents and officials need to do some missionary work among their rulers in Downing street, London.

"Our friends of the London Methodist Times seem to have accepted the error which has misled even some Americans. They imagine that President Cleveland asked Congress to authorize a commission whose findings should govern Englishmen, with a war alternative. Not so. Our executive shows that the Venezuelan frontiers in dispute are undefined. England has shown a disposition to assume certain boundaries to the prejudice of Venezuelan interests; therefore, as a guide to our own executive alone, it was proposed to ascertain the historical facts, so that we may act within American rights. It has been said that the United States have no rights in peril with respect to Venezuelan boundaries. Perhaps we have not any imperiled rights, and—perhaps we have. In any event, we do not propose that any man or nation shall assume anything conclusively, to the prejudice of our possible rights. The commission now constituted and organized will ascertain all the facts and report them to the President. We propose simply to take an inventory of our diplomatic and political assets, and we shall not allow any dictation by anybody while we are 'taking stock.' England has been a 'land grabber' all the days of her life. Americans have not been guiltless in this respect, which we grant cheerfully, but not proudly. Repeated reading of the Methodist Times' article has not convinced us that there is no ground upon which the Monroe doctrine can stand. Some of the best of Englishmen believe there is such ground, and that England should aid to defend it. Our Methodist contemporaries in England may see that point one of these days."

Clara Barton, President of the American Red Cross Society.

The Red Cross managers are reported to be busily engaged in preparing for the work before them in Armenia. The Christian Herald gives the following biographical sketch of Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross Society, who will lead the expedition:

"Clara Barton's name, and the story of her life-long devotion to the cause of humanity, are known throughout the Union. Miss Barton was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1838. She had a thorough education in the public schools of that city, supplemented by a course of study at Clinton, N. Y. For some time she was a teacher in the public schools of Oxford, and subsequently was principal of the first public school at Bordentown, N. J. She was engaged in the Patent Office at Washington in 1861, when the war introduced her to the work that has made her name famous in all lands. Resigning her position in the Patent Office, she devoted herself exclusively to hospital work. As the need increased, she hired a vehicle and went to the scene of the slaughter—Culpepper Court-house being her first destination.

"Miss Barton was on the battlefields of Cedar Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Falmouth, and at the siege of Charleston. How many lives were saved in those scenes of slaughter through her prompt ministrations, none can estimate. With her band of trained nurses she did noble service, and continued in it to the end of the war.

"With a frame exhausted by continuous labor, she went, by the advice of her physicians, to Europe to recuperate. She was there when the Franco-Prussian war broke out, and she immediately offered her services. At Metz, in Paris, and in other scenes of the conflict, she ministered to the wounded and comforted the dying. The Emperor of Germany acknowledged her services by the presentation of the Order of the Iron Cross, and other distinguished personages gave her grateful proofs of tangible esteem. Since then, as president of the American Red Cross Society, she has rendered beneficent services in the Ohio floods, the Michigan fires, the Charleston earthquake, the Johnstown flood, and other calamities of national import."

Keep the altar of private prayer burning. This is the very life of all piety. The sanctuary and family altars borrow their fires here, therefore let this burn well. Secret devotion is the very essence and barometer of vital and experimental religion.

ALTRUISM.

BY REV. WILLIAM WOOD.

When a book is packed with truth,
Never leave it on the shelf;
Pass it onward to your friends,
Having mastered it yourself.

If you have a friend indeed,
And you love him as a brother,
Do not keep it to yourself
Tell it. He may bless another.

If you've heard a wise word spoken,
To a friend that word impart;
'Tis a seed-thought full of blessing,
Plant it in another's heart.

The book you lend will quicken thought;
The friend you praise another bless;
The word you speak may save a soul;
And all promote God's righteousness.

Not Saved. Who Is to Be Blamed?

Well, the Mississippi Annual Conference has come and gone, and, so far as I am able to comprehend, the great questions that are agitating the minds of Southern Methodists were in no wise vitally affected by the administration and decisions of the presiding Bishop.

Amid all the writings, pro and con, that have grown out of the conflict between the preacher in charge of the Whitlington charge and the presiding elder of the Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, I have stood quietly by and prayerfully listened, feeling that my battle was being fought by older and stronger soldiers; but as the real question involved in this conflict has been only circumstantially touched by all who have written, I have decided, after prayerful consideration, to state a few facts for myself. The question involved in this conflict is not, Has the presiding elder the right, when present, to control services (appointments) in a pastoral charge in his district? but rather, Has the presiding elder the right to come in—at the time appointed for the meeting to begin, or at any time after arrangements for meeting have been made—and tear up the arrangements of the preacher in charge, and conduct the meeting without the sympathy of the preacher in charge or the people? I have always recognized the right of the presiding elder to control services in my charge when he was present—i. e., when he was there; but I have never recognized his right to come in and tear up my arrangements, and to conduct my meeting without my sympathy or support. It has ever appeared to me that a preacher is made and retained a preacher in charge because he has the education, common sense and piety necessary to man a pastoral charge; and while he is thus in charge of a station (circuit or mission), it is his right and duty to form a plan, fix the time, and make arrangements for meetings. If the preacher in charge should act unwisely in discharging his duty in these relations, his presiding elder should admonish him of his error (such admonition never degenerating into sovereign, arbitrary power); and if he still persists in his ruinous course, he (the presiding elder) should bring his case, under proper charges, before the Annual Conference; but the right is nowhere given to the presiding elder to set at naught the rights of the preacher in charge to take meetings out of his hands, and to conduct the same contrary to his wishes.

In the conflict referred to above, I acted conscientiously on convictions herein expressed. Having made such arrangements for my meeting as my presiding elder did not approve, he admonished me of what he considered an error; but I, unable to see my error, and being doubly assured that my plan was a wise one, contended for my rights in carrying out the same, humbly suggesting to him that he prefer such charges as he saw fit against me in the Annual Conference (which, according to my conviction, was his only lawful course). But he persisted in taking the meeting out of my hands, and running it contrary to my wishes and the wishes of the people. The Holy Spirit, sought by many, largely melted down difficulties and overruled conflicting circumstances, so that some degree of success attended the meeting; but it is my unchanging opinion that many souls went away unsaved, perhaps never to be saved, who would have been saved during the meeting if my plan had been carried out.

A Revival Needed.

In the absence of a more competent advocate, I write to ask all our preachers and people to preach and work for a widespread revival of religion. If you want your heart stirred on the subject, get "The Revival and the Pastor," by J. O. Peck, or "Revivals of Religion," by T. S. Hubert, and it will set you on fire to have a revival.

For some reason many of our people have become discouraged about the use and abiding results of revival work; hence they do not willingly and enthusiastically co-operate in special work to save souls. It may be that the too ephemeral work done by some of the modern evangelists is the cause of this; but, however that may be, one thing is certain: we must awake to the necessity of revival work by the pastors themselves. I have no objection to the employment of suitable assistance, whether it be an evangelist, a layman, or a brother pastor from an adjoining charge; but the point is: too many of our pastors are disposed to defer revival work until they can secure suitable assistance, thereby discounting themselves and teaching their people to discount them. Why can't I hold a revival in my own church? Have I lost the evangelistic gift?—or, if I doubt whether I possess it, why don't I pray and study to have it? The reason may be: we look to man, and not to God. Of course, not altogether, but too much.

Now, the necessity of a revival is seen in two facts: First: Four-fifths of the Christian people of the world were converted in revivals, or were started to a better life by them. Second: The only way to build up a church successfully is to have revivals. There are three ways by which a church may prosper numerically for a time without having a revival itself: First, by the addition of disaffected members from other churches. Who wants them? Not I. Second, by the addition of members who were converted in revivals held in other churches. And that is a shame to any church to depend upon another to supply the material of its growth. Third, by the addition of persons who are not converted at all. Who wants to build up a church in that way? So that the only way to preserve our own life, and to build up the church in all lands, is to have revivals of religion. But we must not forget that there is no such thing as a spontaneous revival. It always comes down, is not to be worked up, and it will follow as an effect whenever we have the cause. God is always ready to send the revival whenever we get ready to receive it. Whenever the church is pervaded by a praying spirit, and a passion for souls takes hold upon us, the set time to favor Zion is at hand. Oh, my brethren, let us agonize in prayer until the power of the Holy Ghost comes upon us, and then the revival flame will burst out like forest fires on the mountain, and this year of our Lord will be signalized a great revival year.

May I hope that this poorly written article may serve as a trumpet-call to the members of the North Mississippi Conference to put forth their utmost endeavor to lead their people to more active revival work this year!

Brethren, let your people feel that they have something to do as well as yourself. Do you know that if all the professing Christians in Mississippi would each bring three souls to Christ this year, that all Mississippi would be converted by Dec. 31, 1896? What are the facts? It takes fifteen professing Christians one whole year to bring one soul to Christ. At that rate, and supposing that the population of the State will not increase, it will take us forty-five years to convert Mississippi! Awake, awake, O ye people, and prostrate yourself before God, and repent of your indifference! I suggest the first Sunday in February as a suitable day for a concert of prayer throughout our bounds for a gracious revival of religion. Please, brethren, let us pray on that day, that God may revive his work within our bounds.

T. W. LEWIS.

Bro. Ware and His Article.

Please allow me to correct Bro. Ware. It seems that it is hard for some brethren to understand plain English. My article, in the ADVOCATE of Jan. 2, is just as plain as it can be made, but Bro. Ware misunderstood me, or misrepresents me. He says: "Bro. Miller thinks a preacher or member of the church who differs from a Bishop or a presiding elder on a point of law ought to get out of the church." Bro. Ware, please let me know how you found that out, for I am sure it is news to me. I never knew it before, and I am sure I never wrote, spoke, or in any way gave expression to such an idea in my life; and did not know, until you informed me, that I had such a thought. I reckon you got it, Bro. Ware, from my late article; but how I do not know. You just failed to understand the difference between the words "subject" and "differ." I said, "When I get so I am not willing to be subject to the wisdom and direction of the Bishops and presiding elders, I am going to get out" of the church. I did not even refer to differing with them. I suppose I differ with them all on some point of law; and if you will ask my presiding elder, he will tell you I differ with him, but none of them will tell you that I ever failed to be subject to their wisdom and ruling. I also said: "We are all under law—Bishops, presiding elders, preachers in charge, lower officers, and laymen; all under law, and subject to the powers that be; every man subject to his superiors in office, and there is only one way to get out from under law, and that is to get out of the church." Is there anything wrong about that, Bro. Ware?

I am afraid Bro. Ware has not that charity which "thinketh no evil." And then read his article, (re-read): "From all that has been written in this case, it does seem as if it was not so much the unlicensed woman they object to as to her being an evangelist and a believer in sanctification."

"It does seem." To whom does it seem? To charity, which thinketh no evil? Have any of the brethren said anything about it? I am sure I have not. Am I a hypocrite? Would I cover up one thing under another to write about it? If I wanted to write against sanctification, would I take the subject of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpit? No. Is there a preacher in our church, or a community of Methodists, or a Bishop, that does not believe in sanctification? No, not in our church. What next?

Hermanville, Miss.

"The World Is My Parish."

Under the above heading is published and sent out to the mission-loving women of the country a beautiful, interesting, and instructive missionary calendar for 1896. Beginning the first day of the year with, "Search the Scriptures," and closing the last day with, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give," every day of the 366 is emphasized with some appropriate passage of Scripture, and valuable information for those who love the Methodists.

The price of this calendar is twenty cents, the proceeds of which will be used for the endowment of the Belle Bennett chair in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. We all know the object of this school, to give Christian women systematic training for efficient service in whatever branch of Christian work they may enter. We have done much for this school, and it has more than surpassed our expectations; but we need a larger endowment to meet its urgent demands.

Women of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, this enterprise, so nobly begun, wants our hearty, prayerful, and most vigorous support. God saw our need, and found a woman who conceived the idea and formulated the plan, and found a man who established the enterprise; and how he is calling on the thousands in the Methodist fold to rally around the revered names of Miss Belle Bennett and Dr. Nathan Scarritt, and push to completion the great work they have begun.

In sending your twenty cents and address to Miss M. L. Gibson, at the Kansas City Training-school, you will not only get value received in the beautiful calendar, but you will give material aid to a great cause.

"Let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." M. H. MORRISON.

A LOWLY TRIBUTE TO MRS. M. B. HILLYARD.

BY MARIA TAYLOR PIPKIN.

I am glad she hath passed the borderland
To the mansions of perfect rest,
Where her service of love, by labor untouched,
In her Savior's smiles will be blest.

Her songs that were hushed—pent up in her breast—
As she toiled 'mid the tares and wheat,
Pour free from her throat, in a rhapsody sweet,
As she sits at her Savior's feet.

No jangle of sweet bells out of tune there,
Not a discord sweeps over her harp,
Not a broken thread mars the web that she weaves,
No knot in the filling or warp.

Though earth mourns her loss, that this saintly one
Is withdrawn from her labors here,
I rejoice in the crown she carved from a cross,
And her eyes all undimmed by a tear.

I am glad that the clay which encrusted her soul
Will soon be but atoms of dust,
Whilst her spirit, unhamper'd, will bask in the joy
Of her happy, unwavering trust.

Hymn 718.

Subject: "Parsonages—The Need for Them, Their Improvement, Their Effect upon the Preachers, the Church, and Community;" "Wesley's Desire to Evangelize America, and the Labors of Our Pioneer Preachers."

(If there is a preacher, or member of the church, who can do so, ask them to talk of the early methods of the church, band meetings, house-to-house visitation, etc.)

Prayer that Christ may rule in America.

Golden text (to be repeated together): I. John iii, 17.

FEBRUARY 4.

I. John iii, 11-24.
Hymn 523.

Subjects: "Our Literature—Our Homes, Its History, How It Helps Me, How It Serves as a Bond of Union to the Society." (Read some extract from the paper, show sample copies, and secure subscriptions.) "Our Leaflets—How They Can Best Be Used; Which One Has Helped Me Most."

Prayer that God will protect the young from impure literature.

Golden text: Phil. iv, 8.

FEBRUARY 5.

James ii, 8-26.
Hymn 513.

Subjects: "City Missions—The Call for Them in Our Cities, the Need of Organized Labor among the Poor and the Sinful;" "The Work of the Visiting Committees—How They Can Aid in City Missions, and Do the Same Work in the Smaller Towns."

Prayer that all may heed the call to "rescue the perishing."

Golden text: James i, 27.

(Join in the prayer meeting at night, and ask your pastor to talk on city missions.)

FEBRUARY 6.

Eph. ii, 8-22.
Hymn 489.

Subject: "Cuban Work—The Need among the Cuban Children of Protestant Teaching, and a Pure Christianity; Our Opportunity to Give It to Them, Now That They Are Flocking to Our Shores."

Prayer that God will aid us to see our duty to these strangers.

Golden text: Heb. xiii, 2.

FEBRUARY 7.

Acts ii, 1-19.
Hymn 499.

By the action of the Woman's Board of Missions, in its last annual meeting, it was provided that at any time a vacancy occurring in the office of foreign secretary, the work should be taken in charge by the secretary of home affairs. Thus the death of our dear Mrs. McGavock leaves the work, so long and so highly done by her, to Mrs. Trueheart, who, with the aid of Mrs. McGavock's amanuensis, Miss Carrie Kennedy, will carry on this work for the present. Let earnest prayer be offered in our auxiliaries for her who so earnestly takes up the responsibilities and duties of another important office.

Mrs. Trueheart, in writing to the corresponding secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, says of Mrs. McGavock: "All know her manner of life, her devotion, her consecration. It remains with us to carry on the special work to which God called her, and to which she so nobly and successfully responded. For her sake, for the sake of the desolate and oppressed, for Christ's sake, who gave himself for us, we will not neglect the work of foreign missions. We will support the missions opened, and extend the work whenever possible."

The following extract from the same letter is of interest to us all, and will be responded to by every heart enlisted in this great work: "Our dear Miss Haygood was present with the Board at this last meeting (Jan. 1). Her report of work done among many of the Conference societies was very interesting. She will leave Georgia for China, Jan. 20, and sail on the twenty-eighth. I am sure your prayers go out to God for a safe voyage for her, for her continued good health, and for great success. We have no grander woman in the field. May she long be spared to the work!"

PLEDGE MONEY.

Just now all diligence should be used by our auxiliaries in collecting the money pledged at our last annual meeting for our going missionaries. This money should be sent to our Conference treasurer not later than the first of March. Let those auxiliaries which made no pledge collect something for this fund and send in at once. Every member of the Woman's Missionary Society should feel it as binding upon her to contribute something to the pledge money as to pay her monthly dues, for one is as necessary to the success of the work as the other. And, furthermore, let this offering for the pledge be as liberal as is possible. God has given wonderful prosperity to our section, and our foreign work should feel the force of this.

NEW MEMBERS.

Let a rally be made along the line of new members. How many members of your church are not members of the missionary society? In some communities less than one-third of the women of the Methodist Church belong to it. Many of these you may have invited repeatedly without accomplishing anything, but at this new year season let a persistent, earnest, prayerful effort be made to place the matter before them in such a light as to enlist their interest and sympathy. In one auxiliary the president set out to add to the membership, and in a short time the number of members was nearly doubled. Another president pledged herself to secure ten new members, which she has done. Let there be more of this work done, praying God to bless the efforts put forth, and the year can not fail to be one of signal growth and prosperity.

Selections.

Unconscious Goodness.

How refreshing it is to live in the same atmosphere with a thoroughly good person, who is all unconscious of his own goodness! Virtue seems never quite virtue unless it has this exquisite aroma of self-forgetfulness, this perfectly natural and spontaneous quality of being unaware of its own existence and happily indifferent to the recognition of itself.

It has been said that religion tends to make good people too conscious of themselves and their goodness, because it cultivates in them a subjective, contemplative piety, that by its very nature must be self-conscious. That there is a slight grain of truth in the assertion, we shall not deny; but we do deny that the assumption justifies the conclusion. Granted that religion makes a good man contemplative, that it makes him aware of the nature of goodness, and of his own approximation to the standard of righteousness set by his Master, it does not follow that the Christian's piety is self-conscious, or that in any sense, to himself or to others, he poses as an example of virtue and holiness. A Christian may be as unconscious of his own goodness, as modestly self-forgetful in his benevolences and kindnesses, as the most unconventional humanitarian who ever lived. Yes, more so, for the Christian has always that reverent sub-consciousness of the Divine will and power working in and through him, making him but the humble human instrument of God's omnipotence and righteousness.

Indeed, it is very doubtful if any of us ever saw an example of perfectly unconscious goodness, save in the person of some thorough-going, pure, and earnest Christian. There is always something about such saints that makes one feel as if they had been caught up out of their own personalities, and merged into that greater Personality, that divine embodiment of love and righteousness, whose name they bear. The spontaneity of their goodness is not the abandon of one who is virtuous and helpful from sheer soundness and health of moral constitution and generosity of disposition; it is the calm, even, unvarying righteousness which has its source in the Divine love, works by perpetual law like the sunshine, and never prefers nor discriminates, but yields to all alike the loving kindness and tender mercy of him whose perfect goodness it declares.

Blessed is the community or the church which has even one such Christian in its bounds—a man or a woman whose every act and look and word proclaim their absorption in the life of Christ, their forgetfulness of self, their utter unconsciousness of the reflected halo of sainthood! It is the complete extinction of the Pharisee in the humble, self-forgetful, benevolent, radiantly happy disciple. May the time hasten when all Christian virtue shall be so sincere and free from self-consciousness that the term "pietific" shall disappear from the vocabulary of the scoffer!—Exchange.

Dishonest Church Members.

It is often said that Christians are no more honest than other people. Whatever of truth there is in that requires the substitution of the phrase, "church members," for "Christians." There is not a dishonest Christian in the world, and never was. A dishonest man is not a Christian. He may bow his head, cross himself, or weep at the name of Jesus, soar on wings of ecstasy when he hears descriptions of heaven, and recount with unction the date, the hour, and the minute of his conversion; but if he is dishonest he is not a Christian. The fundamental maxim of Christianity is: "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." It is an awful day for any man when he says within himself: "I know that this is dishonest, but it is the custom of the trade, and I must do it or sink." He is at least the half brother of a man who commits a forgery, robs mails, or makes false entries.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

In the Use.

The gifts, grace and help of God avail us only in the use. In the midst of abundance we perish if the hand is not put forth to appropriate. The money of a millionaire will not save him from starvation so long as he retains it in the bank or in his pocket. The lepers, noticed in the gospel, were cleansed only as they went. Had they remained in the sitting posture, the divine help proffered would have availed them nothing; but as they rose up and obeyed the divine command they were healed of their leprosy. The paralytic realized that divine power had come into him only when he attempted to use his limbs in walking. The attempt tested his strength and evidenced to himself as well as to others his potential endowment.

What is true, in this matter, in the physical, is equally true in the spiritual sphere. The grace of God becomes available as we use it. Every Christian man has unused resources, whose presence and efficacy can be realized only as he brings them into exercise. Men often pray for gifts and power, when the prayer has been answered without their knowing it. The desired help has been given in a manner so silent and informal that they can find it out only by moving out on the promise. Whether the cable is strong enough to endure the strain and burden can be best known by letting down the weight. There were many subordinate tests of the cable-work in the Brooklyn bridge; the final and severest one was when the commerce and travel of a great city passed over it. You may do marvels for God if you only try. Without the trials you can never know what divine power had come into you.

Rest.

It is only when we see what it was in Jesus that we can know what the word "rest" means. It lies not in emotions, nor in the absence of emotions. It is not a hallowed feeling that comes over us in church. It is not something that the preacher has in his voice. It is not in nature, or in poetry, or in music—though in all these there is soothing. It is the mind at leisure from itself. It is the perfect poise of the soul, the absolute adjustment of the inward man to the stress of all outward things, the preparedness against every emergency, the stability of assured convictions, the eternal calm of an invulnerable faith, the repose of a heart set deep in God. It is the mood of the man who says, with Browning, "God's in his heaven, all's well with the world."—Professor Drummond.

The Heart a Temple.

When the Holy Spirit enters the soul, heaven enters with him. The heart is compared to a temple. God never enters without his attendants. Repentance cleanses the house, faith provides for the house; watchfulness, like the porter, takes care of it; prayer is a lively messenger, learns what is wanted, and then goes for it; faith tells him where to go, and he never goes in vain; joy is the musician of this temple, turning to the praises of God and the Lamb.—Rowland Hill.

Blessed also are they that mourn; for he who never mourns, never mends. Compunction of a godly sort, dissatisfaction with all past attainments, and honest grief at falling short of Christ's high standard of holiness, all tend to growth in grace. There are too many dry-eyed Christians in this world. Gloomy, God-distrusting unbelief we have no apologies for; but there ought to be more tears of penitence over neglect of duty and woundings of Christ, more tears of sympathy with the wronged and suffering, and then we would have more gracious bursts of sunshine from Christ's countenance. Rainbows are never painted except upon rain-drops. They that sow in the tears of contrition, reap in the joys of pardon and peace. Such tears water the roots of grace. Blessed are they that mourn and mend. The ladder to the higher Christian life starts from the dust of self-abasement; but for every round we need a fresh grasp on Jesus, and a new lift by his loving hand.—Guyler.

Giving money that you have taken out of your neighbor's pocket is never entered to your credit in the books of heaven.

It is the fault of the egotist that he both thinks too well of himself and not well enough of his fellows.

The highest-priced property on earth is that which costs a man his soul to get.—Ram's Horn.

"A man who is generous with other people's money is a thief." That is a plain-spoken fact.

The man God uses is not the one who spends most of his time in looking for an easy place.

A good man's reputation is in the keeping of Almighty God.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. A. J. Nolestine, New Iberia, La., Jan. 15, 1896: "I was transferred from the Western Conference, and stationed at this place. Have been cordially welcomed and received much encouragement, verbal, material, and spiritual. I find a field white unto the harvest, and we are beginning to expect large things from the Lord, and are planning to attempt large things for him. I feel quite at home—thanks to our Methodist connectionalism! Surely we are all baptised by one spirit, unto one body."

Rev. I. T. Reames: "The first Sunday in January, '96, finds me endeavoring to preach the gospel to the dear people of Lafayette Church. Had a warm reception by some of the devout members. My first Quarterly Conference has been held, and the people promise me a liberal support. The people have manifested great interest in our welfare, and we are hoping and praying for a glorious year. We are delighted with the work, and mean to do our best for the Lord and this dear people. Hope a little later to report considerable progress in the church-building feature of the work. Asking the prayers of God's people who may chance to read these lines, I close."

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, Patterson, La., Jan. 13, 1896: "I reached here on the day after the adjournment of our Conference, and entered at once upon my duties for the year of 1896. Although I was not able to get into the parsonage until Jan. 2, on account of the inability of my predecessor to move out sooner, the people of the place gave us a cordial reception at the home of Sister Katherine Moggah, and on the night of Jan. 2 pounded us vigorously. They have continued to manifest their friendship in the same substantial way every day since. The ladies have made the parsonage very comfortable for us. I found the church well organized, with a live Sunday-school and Epworth League. We are working and praying for a year of glorious ingathering of souls for the Master."

Rev. C. F. Emery, Columbia, Miss.: "The pastor and family were most hospitably received by the good people of Columbia, whose kindness was evidenced in many substantial ways. This place was made a station by the last Conference, and now with preaching every Sunday, together with the use of other means of grace, it is confidently hoped that the Lord will do great things for this part of his vineyard. The pastor is sure that if every family within the bounds of his work will subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, they will have the pleasure of reading some very encouraging reports from 'Columbia station.' But this is one of the least benefits they may expect to derive from reading their church paper. Columbia is pleasantly situated, far from 'the demoralizing influence of the railroads,' and the people are delightful."

Rev. T. G. Freeman, Sallis, Miss., Jan. 13, 1896: "I have begun my second year on this work. Have been well received. The good people on this work have treated us royally ever since we first came to them, especially since the last Conference. The substantial tokens of their appreciation have been coming in the way of provisions and presents. These are the best people I ever served in looking after the preacher's family's wants. I can't express my gratitude for their kindness. Our losses at Sallis have been great recently, owing to removals. We have dismissed by letter and lost by death some of our very best members, which weakens our church very much. Mr. George McMillon, of Kosciusko, and Miss Edna Brown, of Sallis, were married at the Methodist Church in Sallis the twelfth instant. Miss Edna was one of the most charming Christian characters I ever knew. May the blessings of God be with them! Our first quarterly meeting has not come, yet I am sure that Bro. J. H. Mitchell is doing well on the district, as he always does. Pray for us, and come to the District Conference of the Durant district, which is to meet at Sallis this year. The Lord bless you in your work. I am sure the ADVOCATE is worthy of the prayers and efforts of all you brethren in Christ."

The Religious Forces of the United States.

The great and absorbing purpose of evangelical Christianity seems to me to be the spread of the gospel. There are those living who can remember when a far less exalted idea possessed the church, when it seemed to think its sphere was not in the world, and its main duty not to the world, but to those within its own pale. Now it knows that it is in the world to save the world; that while God loves the saint, he also loves the sinner; that while he has "more graces for the good," he has messages of love for the bad. It considers itself as commissioned to carry these messages to every heathen land, to every destitute community, to every godless home, and to every unconverted person. Evangelical churches are like bustling camps of spiritual soldiers, who are being told off to go to this country and that, with the gospel of peace to conquer the whole world for Christ. So thoroughly has this missionary spirit possessed the body of evangelical Christians that the smallest and most obscure divisions feel constrained, not only to evangelize home communities, but to have their representatives abroad.

This dominant purpose has made agencies and organizations and financial methods necessary. The business of saving the world requires organization, complete and extensive; it requires administrators, agents, means, machinery, enterprise. All these the church has provided, and a great system has been worked out, rivaling in its universal operations and the volume of its transactions that of any commercial project of which we have knowledge. Any kingdom, country, province, island, settlement, with hardly an exception, can be reached directly and quickly through the numerous channels of communication established by gospel enterprise. If a devoted man or woman wants to enter a field of work abroad, the widest range of choice is presented. Any country between Greenland and New Zealand, in the Western or Eastern circuit of the globe, may be selected, and there is a gospel society to commission him and send and support him. If anyone has a sum of money to be applied to the proclamation of the gospel, he may have it expended in any presidency of India, in any division in Japan, in any kingdom in Africa, or in any island of the sea. The machinery exists to place it wherever he wants it to go.

We have the same appliances for work at home. Here are Indians, Chinese, and Negroes; ignorant and vicious populations; groups of foreigners; the foreigners of civilization and the centers of cities; the prairies and the slums; the jails, asylums, and workhouses. Here is book and Bible work, evangelistic work, reformatory work, educational work, missionary work, and many other forms of gospel benevolence, with abundance of machinery for all the exigencies of service. Places are ready for the men and women, and societies exist to commission and direct them, and to collect and administer the necessary funds.—H. K. Carroll, LL.D.

The Divine Ordering.

Very truly does one of the greatest minds of the last generation say: "The life of most men is ordered for them in a way of which they themselves would never have dreamed." Many conspicuous examples in confirmation of this statement readily occur to the mind of one who is conversant with history. Illustrations of it abound in the Bible. Take the case of Joseph. Little did he dream, when he left his father to see after the welfare of his brothers, that he was about entering upon one of the most remarkable careers in human history. Could he have seen, at the time of his leaving his parental home, what he would be called upon to endure during the next five years, knowing of nothing beyond that, he doubtless would have done all he could to avoid such an experience. And no doubt but that his father would have kept him closely at home. How often, during the first few years after Joseph's departure, must Jacob have deeply regretted that he sent the lad to look after the other sons? But God was all the while unerringly and lovingly ordering the life of Joseph, putting him through a magnificent and beneficent course of trial, which finally fitted him for a position of greatest responsibility, and for wearing a crown of unfading honor.

See also how differently the life of John Bunyan was ordered by God from what he himself would have ordered it. Could he have had his own way he would not have lain those weary years in Bedford jail. He undoubtedly preferred to be free among men, preaching his loving gospel to them. But this was not God's way. His ordering led through a dozen years of prison life, and, in that, the production of a book which should do vastly more good than Bunyan could have accomplished by preaching.

And how differently many of us would have ordered our past lives, had it been in our power! Even now, some of us are occupying places which we naturally would not have chosen, and from which, probably, we at first shrank; but, in the belief that God has ordered the way and the work, let us strive to fill our places with all fidelity and without murmuring.—Rev. C. H. Wetherbe.

Anarchism and the Saloon.

In Chicago we know what bombs mean. I never knew a nest of anarchists that wasn't under a saloon, over a saloon, or in a saloon. Anarchy is impossible away from the saloon. The bomb we need most to fear is not such a one as was exploded in the Haymarket. There are rows of bombs in every saloon, and they are exploding every day and destroying families. The real anarchist is the saloonist; but instead of hanging him, we license him and make him alderman. If the Republic ever goes down, it will go down like Samson, that giant of old, bringing down its own destruction. The infant Hercules strangled the serpents that would have strangled him. So must this young giant.

Some say, use moral suasion only. In the confidence. Moral suasion is good, but not for this kind of a reptile. Some favor what they call the restraints of high license.

I swallowed the high-license argument for a long time, but then it stuck in my throat, and I have thrown it up. For myself I can not countenance the monster at all.—P. S. Henson, D D

It is because persons who once try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup always buy it again, that its sales have become so enormous. The success of this great remedy in curing cold, cough, croup and sore throat is simply marvelous.

Striking Bottom.

A man living in Clay, who owes us over two years' subscription, puts his paper back in the post office last week marked "refused." We have heard of many mean men. There is the man who used the wart on his neck for a collar button, . . . the one who got rich by giving his five children a nickel each to go to bed without supper, and then stealing the nickel after the children were asleep; but for pure, downright meanness, the man who will take the paper for years, mark it "refused," and then stick it back in the post office is entitled to the first premium.—Mid-Continent.

Brother, you are right. We know him well, to our sorrow. But one of the meanest things about the man is his abundance. He is a very numerous man.—Southwestern Methodist.

We also have the misfortune of a slight acquaintance with the party.—St. Louis Advocate.

A Great Chance to Make Money.

I want to tell you of my wonderful success. Being a poor girl and needing money badly, I tried the Dish Washer business and have cleared $200 every month. It is more money than I ever had before and I can't help telling you about, for I believe any person can do as I have if they only try. Dish Washers sell on sight; every lady wants one. The Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo., will give you all necessary instructions, so you can begin work at once. The Dish Washer does splendid work; you can wash and dry the dishes in two or three minutes without putting your hands in the water at all. Try this business and let us know how you succeed.

ELIZABETH C.

Bishop Mallalieu attests his appreciation of Methodist journalism by writing the following urgent words:

"Every Methodist household ought to have a Methodist paper. It is clear that we have some of the very best religious papers that are published, and they are growing better year by year. In the columns of each of them there is an abundance of excellent reading for the fireside, the home circle and for the devotional hour. If our people would keep in touch with the church to which they belong, they must read our papers. If they want to know what the religious world is thinking about and what it is doing they will find out if they read our papers.

"It is almost, if not quite, a criminal neglect to have a family of children growing up in one of our homes and no Methodist paper for them to read. If they ever become worthy, strong and loyal Methodists, they must be intelligent; and how can they become Methodistically intelligent unless they take a good Methodist paper?"—Zion's Herald.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

Our Premium Offer.

Rev. W. C. Black, New Orleans—

DEAR BROTHER: The Bible received yesterday. I am delighted with it. Think it is very cheap. Every Sunday-school teacher ought to have one.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN A. GUICE.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 14, 1895.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to January, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, lyphoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both over 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

Marvelous Results!

A LITTLE GIRL PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Bishop A. G. Haygood, D. D., LL.D.

At two o'clock, on the morning of the nineteenth instant, Bishop A. G. Haygood died at his home, in Oxford, Ga. His death was not altogether unexpected, as he was known to have experienced a stroke of paralysis some six weeks ago. From this stroke he rallied sufficiently to hold the resent sessions of the Arkansas Conferences. Newspaper reports of those Conferences declared that he spoke and preached with marked power.

From these reports his friends at a distance trusted that he was on the highway to complete recovery. But this was not to be. To-day the telegraph wires flashed the news that the brave and loving heart was stilled, the brain of large calibre and extraordinary fruitfulness was eclipsed in death. There will be sorrow throughout the bounds of our church, for a prince and mighty man in our Israel is fallen.

Bishop Haygood was born in Watkinsville, Ga., Nov. 19, 1839. He graduated at Emory College, Oxford, Ga., in 1859, and was licensed to preach in the same year. He was recognized as a man of mark from the first. This early promise was fulfilled in his subsequent career. He was called to almost every place within the gift of his church.

As pastor, presiding elder, editor, college president, Bishop, he was eminently capable. In these varied positions he weighed heavy. It was understood that every wheel to which he put his shoulder would move. In 1883 he was appointed general agent of the Slater Fund for the education of the colored youths of the Southern States. Throughout life he was the wise and consistent friend of this race. Their ignorance and comparative helplessness appealed powerfully to his sympathies.

The Bishop was a prolific writer, and could command his audience on any theme he chose to discuss. His essay, "Go or Send: An Essay on Missions," was awarded the prize, and is one of the most powerful and luminous presentations of that vital theme within the entire range of the literature of the subject. "Our Children" deals in a captivating and edifying vein with the delicate problem of child-life and training. "Our Brother in Black" created a stir on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line. "Close the Saloons" is a trenchant arraignment of the liquor traffic. His volume of "Speeches and Sermons," delivered on widely-varying occasions, have been read and enjoyed by a large number.

Of late years, under the homely title of "Jack-knife and Brambles," he put forth a trenchant volume, dealing with the materialistic tendencies of the times. Later still, "The Monk and the Prince," while a study of Florentine life, was used as the peg on which to hang a withering satire of some reprehensible practices in modern ecclesiastical circles.

One of the least known, yet most valuable publications of his pen is a pamphlet entitled "Growth in Grace," in which the true laws of spiritual development are set forth with great clearness and force.

The church press and periodicals have teemed with articles from his pen, familiarizing the reading public with his sententious and vivid style of expression.

This is not the time to enter upon a critical estimate of the Bishop's work; but so much is obvious, that whether as preacher, editor, educator, author, Bishop he was a master-workman.

It is clear, too, that this man was brave as brainy. If a door of opportunity opened before him, he entered, no matter what foe was behind it. The church will continue to cherish his memory as one of her most gifted and valued leaders, the world will admire him as a brilliant and all-accomplished man; but this writer cherishes him, most of all, in that through the Bishop's agency he was led to Christ. We cherish the hope of seeing him again and honoring him forever.

"Where Fools Rush In."

The raciest literary production that has found its way to our table recently is Bishop Haygood's article in the last Review entitled, "Where Fools Rush In." It is a philippic against a certain class of secular newspapers for their utterances concerning foreign missions. After mentioning several papers by name and making quotations from them, he adds: "If the few papers alluded to above were alone in their ignorance, this writing would not be worth the paper and ink used up in it. If it would serve a useful purpose, the writer would engage to furnish in one month from the secular press quotations that would more than fill this Review, equally abject and absurd in ignorance and hostility to the Christian religion."

We give below a few extracts, regretting that want of space prevents larger quotations. The article is severe, but not more so than the occasion demands. We have scriptural authority for answering a fool according to his folly.

So prominent a paper as the Philadelphia Record, late in August, published, and so respectable and intelligent a paper as the Atlanta Journal copied, the following paragraph, unmatched for falsehood and ignorance:

CONVERSION IN CHINA.

It has been estimated by well-informed authorities that it takes an average of over $2,000,000 to convert one Chinaman; and the worst of it is that for every Chinaman converted to Christianity at least a thousand Christians have been converted into corpses.

On Judge's front page, for Aug. 31, we have a burlesque picture of an idiotic-looking preacher, looking with an anguished countenance upon Africa and China. A little sea divides him from these countries; he gazes at their people through a field glass. Behind him is a huge bag of gold, labeled, "For Foreign Missions;" to his right stands a very ugly old woman—whose dress, pose, expression declare her habitat "down East" somewhere; probably Massachusetts. In front of this idiotic-looking preacher, all spread upon the ground, are starving people, holding up their hands and praying at his deaf ear for help. Concerning the designer of this cartoon, one of two things is true: he is a conscious liar or an innocent fool. Most probably he is simply ignorant; possibly he is "six of one and half a dozen of the other." Under the picture—silly as coarse—are these words:

Overlooked—or the Folly of Foreign Missions. Our Church Charities Can Not See the Misery under Their Own Noses at Home.

Judge is published in New York City, whose organized charities are not surpassed in any city in the world. The editor's ignorance is fathomless; among the commonplaces of vital statistics is this: in so called Christian countries that do little or nothing for the conversion of the heathen, pauperism reaches its lowest depths. And this is known to informed Christian people: those who give most to help the poor at home are those who give most to save the heathen abroad. This writer—having some experience in these matters—never met any anti-foreign-mission churchmen of any sort who were known to be charitable to the poor at their door. But they were always quoting John Randolph, the all-round crank: "The Greeks are at your door." And this is all they know about the genius of Roanoke.

It may be affirmed without risk of misstatement that of the editors above quoted neither one knows the history of foreign missions—particularly in this century. They do not so much as know the names of the leading missionary societies of the Christian world. They do not know enough to begin without help a study of the subject. They do not so much as know from what person they may gain information. Not one in ten of these secular editors can tell whether William Carey went to Hindostan from America, or Adoniram Judson went from England. Yet they make free to sneer at the best people in the world, and to pronounce judgments upon great subjects about which they are absolutely ignorant. But let us, if possible, be just: they are not brazen in impudence, they do not know enough to know they are ignorant; they "are naked, and not ashamed."

For instance: a million more dollars in this country goes to home than to foreign missions; that is, the church at home gives more than six millions of dollars per annum to sustain churches for our own poor. These official figures do not nearly represent the facts; no church is built by or for the poor that does not receive liberal aid from well-to-do church people whose contributions do not get into official reports. Did Judge ever hear of the American Bible Society, and of other institutions like it? Does it know how many millions have been expended through these great benevolences? It can not, without special study for the task, so much as make out a list of them. But, from the cartoon under review, one would conclude that Judge refers to the bodily wants of the sufferers at home, overlooked by the church whose telescopic vision of the heathen in China and Africa absorbs all its attention. Is there a country under the sun where good people give so much money to feed, clothe, and relieve the poor as in America? Outside the great organized charities there is hardly a village church in the United States that does not "take up" its regular monthly "collection for the poor." And millions are bestowed in the private charities of Christian people. Does Judge know anything of the great hospitals in the cities that are unquestionably the product of our Christian civilization? Does it know anything of the gifts of many millions to better and cheapen education? Did it ever hear of hundreds of orphanages, founded and maintained by Christian benevolence? What does it know? The asinine assertion that "well-informed authorities estimate that it takes an average of over $2,000,000 to convert one Chinaman" is as contemptibly and absurdly false as its other statement that "for every Chinaman converted to Christianity at least a thousand Coristians have been converted into corpses."

Did the Record ever hear of the Baptists in Burmah? Of Methodist Conferences in India? Of the work of missionaries in the Sandwich Islands, in Madagascar, in Fiji, in China, in Japan, and in nearly every heathen country in the world? Were its silly assertion true, the work of missions would have used more money than ever was in the world, and more "Christians would have been turned into corpses" than the entire population of the globe! Yet men, holding responsible editorial positions, write such silly lies and resent reproof.

That such men hate Christianity goes without saying. But they might have decent respect for history. The annual profit on the trade of the United States with the Sandwich Islands, as far back as 1870, surpassed the whole amount expended in giving the gospel to these people by the American Board of Foreign Missions for the entire fifty years of the board's relation to these islands.

Political economy should teach these editors some respect for the truth. Wherever a mission station has been established the increased trade with the natives near to it is largely more than the outlay in establishing it. This is true of every foreign mission in existence. Civilized men have more wants than savages and more productive power to meet them. And Christianity has led the vanguard of civilization since Paul preached the gospel to the heathen of the first century.

It is morally certain that no editor of any religious paper in America is as ignorant of any phase of politics, or general business, as the class of editors under consideration in this article are ignorant of the work of the church of God and of the history of Christianity. Yet they make free on all possible occasions to void their impudent ignorance.

The pity is, many of their readers read only such papers and are led into hurtful errors about the most important and world-moving work now going on among men. Would it not be well for pastors to post themselves, and so be prepared to show to their congregations at least how little certain editors know and how unreliable certain papers are?

Paine and Lane Institutes.

Let our readers not forget the proposition of Dr. Hunnicutt, published in our issue of last week, viz.: to be one of a thousand to give $30 each for Paine and Lane Institutes. This would be an easy way of raising the funds needed to put these institutions on a solid foundation. Our church sustains a relation to the colored race that no other church does; and this relation imposes upon us strong obligations. No better way of helping these people can be devised than the plan already adopted, viz.: to found and sustain schools for the education of preachers and teachers. The great need of that race is preachers and teachers properly equipped, mentally and morally, for their calling. This is a fact that will not be disputed by any Southern man of ordinary intelligence.

Talmage in New Orleans.

Talmage lectured in Washington Artillery Hall, in this city, on the night of the sixteenth. The immense hall was filled to its utmost capacity. The speaker was felicitously introduced by Rev. R. Q. Mallard, editor of the Southwestern Presbyterian. Though we had met him before, we had never heard him make a public address. His subject, "The School of Scandal," gave him an opportunity to make heavy thrusts at scandal mongers of all grades, and he made good use of it. Some of his hits were terrific. He did not, however, confine himself strictly to his subject, but branched out in many directions. Many wise lessons were inculcated. We might say several good sermons were preached, for he is one of those men who preach and lecture at the same time. Some very wholesome gospel truths were presented—truths, too, which need to be emphasized at the present day. But the lecture was not all sermon. There was wordly wisdom in it, and there were many anecdotes and frequent coruscations of wit. He held his audience bound as if by a spell of enchantment for nearly two hours.

A Chance to Do Good.

In our issue of this week we give notice of the burning of the parsonage at Estabutchie, Miss. Not only was the building burned, but almost its entire contents. Books, household and kitchen furniture, the accumulations of many years, went up in smoke. This would be less serious if Bro. Ellis were able to replace the things lost; but he is not. We know whereof we speak when we say this. We invite especial attention to the loss of his library. The loss of a library is a very serious matter to any preacher; but it is especially so to a man like Bro. Ellis. There is scarcely a man among us who has a greater fondness for books. He is a diligent, systematic, painstaking student. To such a man the loss of the library which he has accumulated during the course of a long ministry is an unspeakable calamity.

There are superannuated preachers and preachers' widows and others who have books that they do not need. Let such books be forwarded to Bro. Ellis. And let our preachers in the active, effective ranks even at a sacrifice pick out some good books from their libraries and send them freight prepaid.

But books are not the only need. He needs almost everything in the way of household and kitchen furniture; and it takes money to buy them. Here, then, is a chance for the exercise of the grace of generosity. We appeal to our readers to help this worthy brother in his time of need. Send your contributions to Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, Estabuchie, Miss.

BOOKS.

INITIAL STUDIES IN AMERICAN LETTERS. By Henry A. Beers, Professor of English Literature in Yale University. 12 mo, cloth, with twenty-nine portraits, $1.

The work of Prof. Beers is a rare combination of accurate critical treatment and popular presentation. His works on literature are not mere catalogues of books, dates, and authors; he describes epochs, schools, and tendencies, with enough biography and bibliography to give clear ideas and a reasonable knowledge of facts. The narrative chapters are followed by a brief anthology of American works, designed to stimulate a wide reading of American authors. The addition of the portraits of twenty-nine famous American men of letters makes this work of Prof. Beers a notable one from every point of view.

SOME FIRST STEPS IN HUMAN PROGRESS. By Prof. Frederick Starr, of the University of Chicago. 12 mo, cloth, Illustrated, $1.

In this book, which deals with the beginnings of civilization, Prof. Starr writes of primitive men and their ways of building houses, domesticating animals, weaving, making pottery, ornamenting and clothing themselves, etc. Prof. Starr has for many years been connected with Chautauqua Summer work and the correspondence department, is well known to Chautauquans as a most intelligent lecturer, and this book will be received with eagerness and read with great interest.

NOTES.

Parker Chapel, H. H. Ahrens, pastor, has had eight accessions since Conference—a good beginning.

Do good constantly, patiently, and wisely, and you will never have cause to say that life was not worth living.—George W. Childs.

The government of Canada has prohibited the sale of intoxicants among the Indians of Hudson Bay Territory, and punishes severely any violation of the law.—Christian Advocate.

The Canadian Pacific railroad, for years past, has refused to sell its lands immediately joining its stations except upon conditions which preclude the sale of intoxicating liquors thereon.

Mrs. Helen D. Bell, of Jackson, Miss., has been elected State librarian. She is the second woman ever elected to a public office in Mississippi, her predecessor, Miss Tucker, being the first.

Rev. J. H. Scruggs writes:

We are moving along in Savannah with a hopeful outlook for our Methodism. I am adjusting myself to the work in Trinity Church as rapidly as possible, and I hope we will have a good year.

The Wesleyan Advocate, of last week, reports the death of Rev. W. C. Dunlap, of the North Georgia Conference. Bro. Dunlap was widely known, he having been for several years financial agent for Paine Institute, in the interest of which he visited the Conferences throughout the connection. He was a man of fine Christian character.

Bob Ingersoll went to Kalamazoo, Michigan, not long since to lecture. While there he attended a service at the People's Church. In his lecture the next night he said that if there was a church like that in his town, he would not only attend its services, but would join it. He also repeated the statement privately. Will wonders never cease? Maybe Ingersoll will be a preacher yet; who knows?

The re-assignment of Rev. H. S. Johns to the Plaquemine and Donaldsonville circuit by the Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was a source of much gratification, not only to the members of that sect, but to his friends generally. He is an able and zealous worker in the vineyard, and we are all glad that he is to be with us another year. Services will be held at the Methodist Church in Donaldsonville on the second and fourth Sundays of the month, as heretofore.—Donaldsonville Chief.

According to previous announcement, Dr. Board's paper, the Pentecostal Age, made its appearance last week. It is a neatly printed sheet of twelve small-sized pages, and is well filled with a variety of reading matter of a religious type. It is non-denominational, and advocates the second-blessing theory of sanctification. Rev. A. C. Bart is announced as a correspondent from Mississippi. Of Dr. Board as an editor it is unnecessary that we should speak, our readers being entirely familiar with the quality of work done by his facile pen.

Mr. Gladstone's opinion of England's duty toward Armenia is very clear. To a great pro-Armenian meeting held in London recently he wrote: The six great powers, which between them spend more than £100,000,000 yearly upon what is termed their defenses, lie prostrate at the feet of an impotent Sultan, who, with their cognizance, appears to prosecute massacres at his will, day by day. Which power, or powers, is to blame? I know not. Our country is quite able to cope with five or six Turkeys, and she is under peculiar obligations, but she is not omnipotent. I sincerely hope that Her Majesty's government has not been in any degree answerable for bringing about an almost incredible situation.

The Pentecostal Age.

The first number of the Pentecostal Age, an undenominational gospel weekly, 3 column, 16 page in size, with J. M. Beard as editor, will be issued from New Orleans, La., about Jan. 15, 1896. Canvass your neighborhood, and send in subscriptions for the first number. Price, one dollar in advance. All communications should be addressed to The Pentecostal Age, New Orleans, La.

Clarke's Commentaries Free.

We will give a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions, in six volumes, to any preacher who will send us fifteen new cash subscribers at the regular rate. Every new subscriber so obtained will be entitled to our Bibles at premium rates. Here's your chance. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

To the Preachers of the Patronizing Conferences.

In keeping with our motto, "Better and better," we make the following offers: (1) To the preacher who sends us the largest number of new cash subscribers at the regular rate between now and the first of July we will present a handsome parlor organ catalogued at $225. (2). To the preacher sending us the second largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present either a handsome gold-filled watch, guaranteed to be a perfect time-keeper, and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, or an Arlington Sewing Machine, whichever may be preferred. (3) To the preacher sending the third largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, the same described in our offer elsewhere.

Notice that these are to be cash subscriptions at the regular rate. No commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Then, every unsuccessful competitor will have the commissions returned to him in cash.

Brethren, here is a chance to help yourselves at the same time that you help your Conference organ, and also render a service of incalculable value to the people among whom you serve. If any brother does not need an organ, that need not prevent his entering the list, as the organ can be sold. Should the successful competitor wish to convert his organ into money, we will advertise it for him two months, free of charge. Those who wish to compete for this premium should notify us at once.

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

Don't Skip This.

Let our subscribers take note of the fact that we are now offering the Holman Bible in three sizes at $1.50, $1.65 and $2.45. The Bible heretofore sold at $2.25 is now sold at $1.75; but we handle another in smaller size at $1.50. Read our offer.

See Here.

The label on your paper indicates the date of expiration of your subscription. If the date is Dec., '95, or any time earlier than that, then you are in arrears. Don't wait for us to send you a dun, but send us the money at once. If you wish to discontinue your subscription, you have only to say so, after paying up to date.

Henry M. Stanley, in an article on the "Development of Africa," which is to appear in the February Century, recalls the fact that troubles with the Boers in Southern Africa first induced David Livingstone to travel to the north, and so led the way to the opening of Equatorial Africa. Livingstone, who was a missionary at Kolobeng, accused his Boer neighbors of cruelty to the natives. They resented his interference, and threatened to drive him from the country. He published their misdeeds in the Cape newspapers, and his house was burned in revenge. This led to his leaving Southern Africa and going to a region where he could follow in peace his vocation as a missionary, unmolested by the Boer farmers.

Marry This Girl—Somebody.

MR. EDITOR:—

I stained a blue silk dress with lemon juice: what will restore the color? I am making lots of money selling the Climax Dish Washer. Have not made less than $10 any day I worked. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and buy quickly when they see the dishes washed and dried perfectly in ONE MINUTE. I generally sell at every house. It is easy selling what every family wants to buy. I sell as many washers as my brother, and he is an old salesman. I will clear $2,000 this year. By addressing J. H. Nolen, 60 W. Third Ave., Columbus, Ohio, any one can get particulars about the Dish Washer and can do as well as I am doing. All you have to do is to send for sample Dish Washer. This company does not ask any pay until you have them sold. Talk about hard times; you can soon pay off a mortgage, when making $10 a day, if you will ONLY WORK; and why won't people try, when they have such good opportunities.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE INTERCESSORY PRAYER.

(John xvii.)

(Day of Prayer for Colleges.)

Christ's sacerdotal prayer, apart from proper self-gratulations, is intercessory from beginning to end.

1. To a child of God intercessory prayer is more a privilege than a duty.

(1) We love Christ, for he saved us. But he desires that all men be saved. Hence we pray for our fellow-men.

(2) For Christ's sake we love the sinners. Not their sins, but the sinners. Hence we pray for their conversion.

(3) The world lies in darkness. Not only moral, but also intellectual darkness. Ignorance vast. Even found in the mansions of the opulent. Pray for prosperity of schools and colleges.

(4) Men can not be happy without Christ. A yearning void. A detached branch. A house without foundation. A world without a sun. Pray for the unhappy ones!

(5) Our fellow-Christians, with us, are exposed to the assaults of the diabolical trinity, Satan, the world, and the flesh. Oh, that they would come out victorious! We pray for them.

(6) Children of God are not exempt from life's tribulations. Are sifted like wheat. Often verging on the brink of despair. Pray for them.

2. Christ's intercessory prayer, as contained in our lesson, embraces many important subjects. We can here only touch on a few.

(1) That God should keep the converted from evil. From evil, sin. Sin, a moral poison. Sin, the cause of mankind's moral wreckage. Sin, whose elimination necessitated Christ's incarnation and subsequent suffering.

(2) That his followers be sanctified—made holy—through the truth. Not indulge in fanaticism, but seek a holiness founded in God's eternal truth. "Thy word is truth."

(3) Christ prays for the believers of all ages. Our fathers and children included. That all should be one in him. All tend to union, not disintegration.

(4) He prays that all his followers ultimately be associated with him. "Be with me, where I am." To be in, for, and with him here, secures association with him evermore.

(5) He prays that divine love—yea, he himself—might dwell in all his disciples. "And I in them." Christ and love are identical. If Christ lives in us—Christ, the hope of glory—then love transfuses our being, inspires, impels, actuates.

We adore our Savior for his intercession. We learn from him, as our Exemplar, to intercede for others.

Connecticut is trying a new thing in the way of legislation against the sale of liquor on Sunday. Hitherto the penalties have always been inflicted solely upon the seller. A law which went into effect at the beginning of last August subjects the buyer also to punishment. The result is that, when the police make a raid upon a saloon that is breaking the Sunday law, they take into custody not only the bar keeper, but also the patrons whom he is serving. The penalty imposed upon the drinker in most cases is a fine of a few dollars and costs.—Exchange.

SAM JONES' NEW BOOK.

In order to protect the public from imposition, we state that an old book by Sam Jones, gotten out some ten years ago under the title of "Sermons and Sayings of Sam Jones," is now being sold under a new name. This old book, now re-named "HOT SHOTS," is being advertised and sold by the Southwestern Publishing House and by one R. S. McCallen as though it were Sam Jones' new and latest book. Whereas, Bro. Jones' new book is called and is a much larger, handsomer and better book, containing 122 illustrations and 588 pages, and is filled with new matter never before published in any of his books.

The card below from Bro. Jones fully explains the matter.

B. F. HAYNES.

To Whom it May Concern:

"THUNDERBOLTS," the new book just out of press, by myself, is the only book of mine which has been published in the last nine or ten years. This is the newest, the latest and the best book I have ever gotten out. All others purporting to be new books are frauds. I understand the Southwestern Publishing House is getting out a book called "Hot Shots," which is but a reproduction of the "Sermons and Sayings" of Sam Jones which has been sold over this country for ten years at $1 per copy.

Very truly,
SAM P. JONES.

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE ARM is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish, has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

HOME CIRCLE.

AWAY FROM HOME.

Standing forth on life's rough way,
Father, guide them;
Oh, we know not what of harm
May betide them;
'Neath the shadow of thy wing,
Father, hide them;
Walking, sleeping, Lord, we pray,
Go beside them.

When I prayer they cry to thee,
Thou wilt hear them;
From the stains of sin and shame
Thou wilt clear them;
'Mid the quicksands and the rocks
Thou wilt steer them;
In temptation, trial, grief,
Be thou near them.

Unto thee we give them up—
Lord, receive them;
In the world we know must be
Much to grieve them;
Many striving oft and strong
To deceive them;
Trusting in thy hands of love
We must leave them.

Anon.

Conquerors.

Life is made up of little things. The every-day trials are the ones that press us most. The way we meet them goes very far toward making up character. The conflict and the conquest are not so much outside as within ourselves, in the hidden realms of the soul. Victory here means victory everywhere. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." If our own spirit is conquered, we are truly enriched with great spoil. "We glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope." What graces of character are these, inwrought and brought to perfection through tribulation, which means "pressure," "squeezing," "a harrow." The blessed Book does not say he that has an easy time and gets through life with the least trouble shall inherit all things. But it does say he that "overcometh" shall be such an heir; it says, he that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and shall be made a pillar in the temple of God, and shall sit down with the conquering Christ upon his throne. Only those whose moral and spiritual fiber has been developed through successive conflicts and victories will be fitted to sit upon a throne. Places of power are won by merit; they are not given by favoritism. The two sons of Zebedee were told that it was not in the power of the Lord himself to "give" the position they desired; such distinction would be awarded only to those who proved themselves able to suffer and to overcome even as he suffered and overcame.

If we could see the inner lives of others, what surprises we would meet! How ashamed we would be of our misjudgements and of our murmurings against the conditions of our own life. We would see how some, who have reached a place of quiet, victorious faith, have climbed to it through many a thorn and over many a threatening precipice. We would see that those who seem so strong and steady now have come through many devious ways with faltering feet, stumbling at many points. We would see that hearts the most at rest have come to it through the stormiest experiences. We would see struggles going on in hearts where we least suspect it, and, more than all, we would see that those who seem the strongest in faith and Christian principle are most conscious of their own weakness, and are leaning hard upon the divine strength. Let us be of good courage. The same afflictions are accomplished in others, the same almighty grace is given to all who need; the same reward of a perfected character is assured to all who overcome. "In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."—New York Advocate.

Definitions of Home.

A prize was recently offered by London Tit-Bits for the best answer to the question: "What is home?" Here are a few of the answers which were received:

The golden setting, in which the brightest jewel is "mother."

A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in.

Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

The only spot on earth where the faults and feelings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

The place where the great are sometimes small and the small ones great.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

The jewel casket, containing the most precious of all jewels—domestic happiness.

Where you are treated best and grumble the most.

Home is the central telegraph office of human love, into which run innnmerable wires of affection; many of which, through extending thousands of miles, are never disconnected from the one great terminus.

The center of our affections, around which our heart's best wishes twine.

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world, where we can be sheltered from its cares and annoyances.—Exchange.

No Failure.

Marriage is not a failure! But husband or wife, one or both, may be failures; and the blame which then belongs to them is often laid to marriage. It "was ordained of God for the welfare of his creatures," and should be as the beginning of heaven on earth; but when the laws of God in respect to marriage are scorned and disregarded, it will be a miserable and inevitable failure. If an engine were to be built with a similar disregard, it would be a failure. If the best of iron and steel were put into the outside of the boiler, and its tubes made of pasteboard, and the piston rod of glass, and the grate bars of lead, that engine would be a complete failure. So if man or woman brings into the marriage relation personal unbelief and ungodliness (self-will, captiousness, irritability, vanity, worldly ambitions, etc.), it will be a failure every time. No two people by any art, device or earnestness can take such elements of sin and death and secure their own welfare in marriage, nor anywhere else. "Be ye not unequally yoked with unbelievers."—Presbyterian.

His Talent.

A man was once asked why he took so much pains to oblige others in trifles. His answer was in substance: I have neither the wealth, nor the intellect, nor the learning, nor the position to do big things for God or man, and so I take delight in doing any little thing to promote another's interest or enjoyment. In this way I may add to the sum of human happiness, and also recommend my Savior to the attention of those who know him not.—Christian Intelligencer.

Forgiveness.

A little boy and girl were playing by the roadside. The boy became angry and struck his playmate a sharp blow on the cheek, whereupon she sat down and began to cry. The boy stood looking on, and presently said:

"I didn't mean to hurt you, Katie; I am sorry."

The little girl's face brightened instantly. The sobs were hushed, and she said:

"Well, if you are sorry, it doesn't hurt me."

The Broken Buckle.

You have read in your own history of that hero who, when an overwhelming force was in full pursuit, and all his followers were urging him to more rapid flight, coolly dismounted, in order to repair a flaw in the horse's harness. Whilst busied with the broken buckle the distant cloud swept down in nearer thunder, but just as the prancing hoofs and eager spears were ready to dash down upon him the flaw was mended, the clasp was fastened, the steed was mounted, and like a swooping falcon he had vanished from their view. The broken buckle would have left him on the field a dismounted and inglorious prisoner; the timely delay sent him in safety back to his bustling comrades. There is in daily life the same luckless precipitancy and the same profitable delay. The man who, from his prayerless awakening, bounces into the business of the day, however good his talents and great his diligence, is only galloping on a steed harnessed with a broken buckle, and must not marvel if, in his hottest haste or more hazardous leap, he be left inglorious in the dust; and though it may occasion some little delay beforehand, his neighbor is wiser who sets all in order before the march begins.—Rev. James Hamilton.

A Shining Example.

"Have your shoes shined?" sang out a small boy near the Union station, among the throng of rural passengers just from the train. A young man who heard the cry stayed his steps, hesitating, for he had not much more money in his pocket than he had blacking on his shoes. But to hesitate meant to fall into the shoe black's hands and the brushes were soon wrestling with splashes of rural clay.

When the shine was complete the young man handed the boy a dime, and felt that he had marked his way into the great city with an act of charity—for at heart he did not care how his boots looked. But as he was pulling himself together for a new start he saw the boy who had cleaned his shoes approach the blind beggar who sits behind the railroad fence, and drop a dime into his cup.

"What did you do that for?" asked the young man.

"Yer see," said the boy, "that wuz me tenth dime ter-day, an' me teacher at Sunday-school, she told me I oughter give a tenth of all I makes to the Lord, see? An' I guess that ol' blind man wants a dime more than the Lord, so I give it to him, see?"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

An Unbeliever Abashed.

On one occasion, while Sir Isaac Newton was examining a new and particularly fine globe, a visitor entered his study. This caller, as Sir Isaac knew, had often expressed his disbelief in the existence of a God, and his conviction that the world and its surroundings were the result of evolution or chance. He was greatly pleased with the handsome globe, and asked, "Who made it?" "Nobody," answered Sir Isaac; "it just happened here." The man looked up in amazement at the answer, but he soon understood what it meant. Who can say that this beautiful and wonderful world came by chance, when he knows that there is not a house, or ship, or picture, or anything in it but has had a maker? The logic of the great philosopher was conclusive, and the infidel was completely silenced.—Selected.

HYGIENE.

Higher Education and Health.

A writer in Harper's Bazar very sensibly says in regard to the health of girls:

In an age when the higher education of women is so much considered, and when so many sacrifices are made by parents and guardians that the girl's mental training should be quite up to the standard of that accorded her brothers, it is well to voice the caution that her physical health should be more thoroughly looked after. Educators who are also observers of the relative characteristics of men and women say that it is the girl always who is most painfully conscientious to make all possible use of her opportunities. The boy, they tell us, will, without urging, take to exercise and healthy bodily training, even if school tasks are neglected. The girl, being morbidly careful to fulfill her whole duty, has to be sent to the sports to which her brother betakes himself naturally.

When mothers complain of their daughters' immature figures the hygienist retorts, "What gymnastics do you require of them?" It is the age for exercise of the body as well as of the mind. Boys' spines are straight and girl's backs crooked because the former use all their muscles and the latter do not. When the body is making its most rapid growth the evil of improperly used muscles is particularly baneful. Sitting overlooking in a slouching attitude will tend to contract the chest, as carrying too heavy weights over the back will spoil the normal spinal curves. Leaning too much on one side, standing too long upon one foot, even carrying constantly a pocketful of weighty articles on one side of the dress, might suffice at the developing age to induce spinal curvatures.

The daily use of the trapeze, the swing, or other appendage of a gymnasium, the playing of a lively game in which arms and legs are employed, and every muscle brought into due action, are essential to the development of the thorax and the muscles of the trunk. Girls should run, row and ride and swim and skate no less than lads do. Only so can they best fulfill in the future the natural duties of life.

What We Need.

What the man of to-day needs most is not athletics in a gymnasium, but plenty of fresh air in his lungs. Instead of a quantity of violent exercise that leaves him weak for several hours afterward he needs to learn to breathe right, stand right, and sit right. The young man or young woman who starts on a career of training, and keeps it up year after year, just at the time when the body has a great deal of its own natural work to do and wants to do it, may make up his or her mind that beyond a showy and superficial development of muscle and strength, all this training, in after life, is going to count against them.—Annals of Hygiene.

It is our observation that beer-drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers.—Scientific American.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CHEESE FINGERS.—Take one-quarter of a pound of a puff paste and roll it out thin; then take two ounces of Parmesan cheese, half a teaspoonful of cayenne, and a pinch of salt. Mix these, and sprinkle the cheese over half the paste, turn the other half over it, and cut it with a sharp knife, half an inch wide, and any length you please. Bake in a quick oven, and serve hot, shaking a little grated cheese over them. The fingers must be piled in a dish, crossing each other at right angles.—Selected.

OMELET PLAIN, OR WITH JELLY, HAM OR CHEESE.—For a plain omelet take four eggs, one teacupful of butter, and four tablespoonfuls water, with seasoning to taste. Allow the butter to get very hot in the chafing dish and then pour in the eggs, thoroughly beaten, the whites and yelks separately, and well whipped up with the milk. When done, roll the edge quickly over until all rolled up. If a fancy omelet be desired, before folding spread it with grape or current jelly, with finely chopped ham or with grated cheese.—Selected.

OBITUARIES.

ROBINSON C. E. M. ROBINSON was born in Fairfield district, S. C., Nov. 15, 1804, and died in Rankin county, Miss., Oct. 26, 1895. He was converted at a camp meeting in 1827, under the preaching of Wm. Capers, afterward Bishop Capers.

In 1829 he married Miss Sarah J. Love, a young woman then and ever afterward noted for her piety. Her strong Christian character had a telling influence over the life of her husband, and in after years he prized this very highly. Among the earliest recollections of the oldest living member of the family is a daily religious service in the home. The mother read the Scriptures and the father offered prayers.

He believed strongly in the gospel, and was a great lover of Methodism. He was the itinerant preacher's constant friend, and for fifty-eight years his house was the preacher's home. He dignified the office of steward, and took pleasure in the class meetings. He was a great lover of camp meetings, and regarded them as a most valuable part of Methodist economy. Two camp grounds in Mississippi were erected mainly by his influence. He attended the Shiloh Camp Meeting in October, and for the last time took part in its services, which was only a few weeks before his release.

I first met him when he was almost ninety years old. His form was feeble and his voice was weak, yet his character was beautiful and impressed me profoundly with the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost. In a private conversation he said to me, in a pleasant way, and with the kindest feeling: "They are making a good deal of fuss now in the papers over the doctrine of sanctification. I don't understand it all. One thing I know. I can not conceive of a higher state on earth than to have peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. That is good enough for me." The religion of his life had not failed to give assurance, and when the storm was nearly passed peace and joy more than ever were his blessed inheritance.

His faith was unwavering, his joy overflowing, his zeal unabated even when his last sufferings were most severe. About the last thing spoken to me, he exclaimed: "How strange that men neglect to prepare for death!" Loyal to the church in his life, he proclaimed her worth in his death.

He lived nearly through the most eventful century in the history of the world's progress. He filled his mission well, and now has a place "among all them which are sanctified."

W. J. ROBERTS.

PATTON—ALVAH PATTON was born in the State of Georgia, Sept. 28, 1813, and moved to Lafayette county, Miss., in 1838, in which he lived until removed by death, Jan. 10, 1896. He embraced religion in 1835, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he lived a consistent member for more than sixty-one years of faithful labor, and went to his reward. He was married to Miss E. H. Ferrell in 1836, which union was broken by her death, July 30, 1892, and to this union was given them six children—three sons and three daughters—all of which are happily married, and on their way to heaven in the church of their parents. He did his part well in all the duties of life, and God honored him with a long life, a religious family, and a host of friends, for the high esteem in which he was held in the community he had lived for fifty-eight years was shown by the large congregation of weeping friends and relatives who attended the funeral services, conducted by the writer at Liberty Hill Church, where his mortal remains were laid away to await the resurrection of the just.

I also want to say for one who knew him so long, that his daily life was a sweet benediction to all who came within its influence. His religion was not spasmodic, but an even, peaceful flow of love to God and man, a steady reliance on God, and a constant trusting in him during his long and useful life. He loved his church and her doctrines. Oh, let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his! Oh, may God bless and console the children and relatives, and may all meet him in the sweet by and by!

C. C. GRISHAM.

ROGERS—THOMAS A. ROGERS was born in Lauderdale county, Miss., Jan. 28, 1873, and died in Meridian, Nov. 22, 1895. This young brother was converted and joined the church, at the age of fifteen, under the ministry of Rev. D. F. Guice, from which time he lived a consistent Christian life. Tom (as he was familiarly known) was always a good boy, and had united in him those virtues which go to make up a beautiful, consistent Christian life.

He did not seem to realize the almost uncontrollable nature of the fever which had claimed him for its victim; but when told of the serious nature of his case that same spirit which characterized his perfect trust in God seemed to keep him in perfect peace. A short time before he died he told his mother that God had revealed his will to him, and that he was meekly waiting his summons; and as his soul neared the river's brink, and feeling that his mother was sweetly holding, he hurled back, as it were, from the spirit-land one verse of the grand old hymn,

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly;"

and soon his pure spirit winged its way back to God who gave it.

May the God of all peace bless the bereaved family!

C. M. CAMPBELL, P. C.
Lauderdale, Miss.

HOWELL—WILLIAM FLETCHER HOWELL, son of Rev. H. D. Howell and wife, was born in Tishomingo county, Miss., Nov. 27, 1853. He professed saving faith in Christ at thirteen years of age, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he lived until death, which occurred Sept 17, 1895, at his home, Jackson, Tenn.

He was sick only a short time, and many friends were deeply grieved when he fell on sleep. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss, which is great, for he was one of the kindest men. His interest in his family was truly beautiful. He was an alderman of the city at the time of his death. The funeral was preached in the First Methodist Church by the pastor, and was attended by a large number of friends, after which the Elks took charge, and buried the body, according to their ritual, in beautiful Riverside.

May God continue his good providence over all the friends and dear ones, and bring them at last to himself in peace!

H. B. JOHNSTON.

SINGLETARY—Whereas, It has pleased God, in the wisdom of his providence, to remove Rev. E. L. SINGLETARY from the pains and sorrows of this world to the pleasures and eternal bliss of the world to come; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, while we deplore his death in his early life and ministry, we meekly bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father, "who doeth all things well," feeling that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That at our annual meetings we shall ever feel that one of the purest, most heavenly-minded, truest and best of our class has been taken from our midst, having left a bright example of sacrifice and consecration.

Mr. Harrison's Book.

"Many able pens have essayed the task undertaken in this volume; but in all candor it must be said none have succeeded so well as Mr. Harrison. He brings to the work a lifelong association and sympathy with the people and scenes described, a mind and spirit responsive to all that is brightest and truest in thought and feeling, a literary aptitude and culture strikingly rare, a wit of undeniable Attic flavor, and withal a style of narration at once vivid, graceful, and impressive. Just these attributes seem to have been demanded by the nature and scope of the story; and the result is decidedly the most charming and faithful picture of Southern life ever written. It has a uniqueness all its own, for example, in showing the characteristic traits and the dialects of blacks and whites on the plantation and elsewhere, and in exhibiting the different phases of society and the many vicissitudes seen and felt in the South before and during the war. All these are admirably idealized. Nothing could be more interesting than to follow Mr. Harrison from his starting-point as a small boy reveling in the delights of the old plantation, with 'black mammy' as his good angel, on through his school and college days, into the ups and downs of soldier life until Appomattox, and then to the glad renascence of our sunny land, which he bravely helped to inaugurate. 'No refined home in our country should be without this book; especially should it be read by every Southern man, woman, boy, and girl.'"

God reads our characters in our prayers. What we love best, what we covet most, that gives the key to our hearts. "What wilt thou?" The answer to this is often seen in the anxious face bent over the ledger or the stock list, in the complete absorption of time and thought and toil in the single purpose to be rich. That is a sinful idolatry if the man's only trinity of worship is the gold eagle, the silver dollar, and the copper cent. Yet it is no sin to strive after money, provided that we honestly get the money, and the money does not get us. Would to God that more of our successful business men would learn that it is not what they take up for themselves, but what they give up for the good of others, that makes them truly rich. Very few Christians even can be trusted with great wealth. When Christ holds the purse-strings, all right.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Cod-liver oil is something more than a fat. Its peculiar action depends on a number of substances, among which might be mentioned iodine and phosphorus. There can be no substitute for cod-liver oil, because there is no other oil known which has in natural combination with it such a large number of valuable medicinal agents.

of Cod-liver Oil, with the hypophosphites contains the whole oil, with its natural properties, and in a thoroughly emulsified or digested condition. The hypophosphites increase the appetite and impart strength to the nervous system. This combination has marked curative properties in a number of diseases of the skin and scalp, to which scrofulous persons are peculiarly liable. Such diseases as chronic eczema, ringworm, and other skin affections, are often quickly cured by the constitutional effects following the use of Scott's Emulsion.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to January, '97. (A little later it will be February, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2.45.

DOMESTIC.

Hon. A J. McLaurin was inaugurated governor of Mississippi on Jan. 21.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in Chicago on July 7

J. C. Clark, a Georgian mineralogist, declares that the richest gold fields in the world are awaiting development in northern Georgia.

The United States spends $900,000 a year on its weather bureau; Great Britain pays $80,000, France $70,000 Russia $65,000, and Germany $56,000.

St Louis has given the electric companies four years to put their wires underground and notified them that all the poles will be cleaned out by the city in January, 1900.

The negroes of Pittsburg claim the right to amuse themselves at the skating rink, but it is not allowed; and they say that they have a good case against the city, as the police enforced the proprietor's prohibition.

The sugar planters have declined the assistance that has not yet been offered them by the populists, and have determined to go it alone. This determination was reached at an executive session of the State Central Committee.

Col. Ingersoll has been invited by a Chicago church to address it and tell it what it ought to do for the betterment of mankind. He says that he will be glad to do it, when he gets a convenient opportunity.

A memorial of the commercial bodies of New Orleans has been presented to Congress, asking an appropriation of $500,000 for the improvement of the New Orleans harbor, and requesting that it be made a continuing appropriation to the amount of $2,000,000.

The Venezuelan commission has invited the governments of Great Britain and Venezuela to submit to it all the evidence in their possession to further the work of the commission to be presented before it by attorneys, and all of this with the reservation that such representation and appearance shall not be deemed an abandonment of any rights or position heretofore assumed.

The South produced an unusually heavy corn crop during 1895, so heavy, in fact, that there was more than enough for home consumption. This large production of corn in a section of the country which has heretofore been dependent upon the West for a good portion of its grain supply, has had a very important influence upon the price of corn and upon the sale of the Western crop.

There is now not the least doubt but that the question of recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans will shortly be considered by Congress, with every prospect that such recognition will be accorded. It is even predicted from Washington that President Cleveland will not wait for Congress to act, but will issue a proclamation declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba, recognizing the belligerent rights of the Cuban insurgents, and announcing an attitude of strict neutrality towards both combatants.

FOREIGN.

The mayor of San Miguel, Peru, seized and caused to be burned in the public square of the city all of the stock of the local agent of the American Bible Society.

The London Graphic editorially asks: "Why not make the Monroe doctrine the subject of a formal treaty between England and America? Such a treaty would facilitate the settlement of future disputes."

Gen. Campos, the Spanish commander in Cuba, has resigned his command, owing to the criticisms and attacks of Spaniards. Gen. Polavieja has been appointed to supersede him as captain-general in Cuba.

An imperial decree has been issued announcing that the coronation of the Czar will take place at Moscow in May next, and ordering that the municipal and other representative bodies of the Russian Empire be invited to attend.

The Pope, through Cardinal Satolli, has made a semi-official proposal to President Cleveland to arbitrate the Venezuelan question. The Pope was much hurt by England's refusal last year, when Venezuela proposed the Pope as an arbitrator.

The prospect of a total failure of the Cuban sugar crop is just beginning to be appreciated in Europe. Although reports of extensive damage to the cane fields by the insurgents have been current for some time, Europe has heretofore placed but little reliance upon the accuracy of the dispatches.

The admiralty department informs the Associated Press that the destination of the flying squadron of British warships now off Spithead has not yet been determined upon, even by the admiralty, and that certainly the warships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere in American waters at present.

Affairs have assumed a very critical position for the Spanish government in Cuba, and, unless the representatives there succeed in retrieving some of the ground recently lost, all hope of crushing out the rebellion will have to be abandoned. The insurgents have apparently traversed the island from end to end without serious hindrance. And, although Spain has 100,000 troops on the scene, and the insurgents number not more than 12 000 to 15,000 available men, the latter have received no serious check, nor suffered no important reverses.

Advice to Boys.

Horace Mann gives a bit of advice to boys: "You are made to be kind, boys—generous, magnanimous. If there is a boy in school who has a club foot, don't let him know you ever saw it. If there is a boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him to some part of the game that doesn't require running. If there is a hungry one, give him part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lessons. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him, for, if one boy is proud of his talents and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs and more talent than before. If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show by their countenances how much better it is than to have a great fuss. And remember who said, 'Love your enemies,' and, 'Bless them which curse you.'"

A SHAMPOO WITH CUTICURA SOAP

A warm shampoo with CUTICURA SOAP, followed by gentle applications of CUTICURA, the great skin cure, will clear the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, allay itching, soothe irritation, stimulate the hair follicles, and produce a clean, healthy scalp and luxuriant hair, when all else fails.

LADIES ARE ASSURED that to cleanse, purify, and beautify the skin, to allay itching and irritation, to heal chafings, excoriations, and ulcerative weaknesses, to speedily cure the first symptoms of torturing, disfiguring skin humors, nothing so pure, so sweet, so wholesome, so speedily effective as warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, followed, when necessary, by mild applications of CUTICURA (ointment), the great skin cure.

A PRAYER.

Pardon, Lord, the lips that dare
Shape in words a mortal's prayer!
Prayer that, when my day is done,
And I see its setting sun,
Shorn and beamless, cold and dim,
Sink beneath the horizon's rim—
When this ball of rock and clay
Crumbles from my feet away,
And the solid shores of sense
Melt into the vague immense,
Father! I may come to thee,
Even with the beggar's plea,
With my needs, and nothing more,
—Whittier.

Communications.

Mansfield Female College.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of Mansfield Female College, which was held last June, Rev. Dr. A. D. McVoy was elected president, with the distinct understanding that he should have the privilege of retiring from the school at the next session of the Louisiana Conference (of which he is an honorable and useful member), or that the Board should have the privilege of electing his successor, if it thought best to do so.

The reason for this agreement is obvious. First, the Board thought a change necessary. Secondly, a change effected at that time would put Dr. McVoy in the hands of the Bishop and cabinet, which would insure his employment for the ensuing year.

As president of the Board, I had correspondence with several persons, with a view to the proposed change, which led me to the conclusion that the change could be effected at the time indicated. But before submitting the matter to the Board, I had an interview with Dr. McVoy, in which I laid the whole matter before him, telling him not to give me an immediate answer, but to give the matter prayerful consideration, and to advise with his friends in regard to it; and assuring him that if, after due consideration, he thought that it would be detrimental to his interest to make the change at that time, that I would take no further action in regard to it. While the cabinet was in session on Friday evening he sought an interview with me, in which he said he had decided to resign the presidency of the college, and accept an appointment at the hands of the Bishop. I immediately returned to the room in which the cabinet were at work, and stated the result of the interview with Dr. McVoy, whereupon his appointment was made.

I make this statement to the public for the reason that the motives of the Board in regard to their action in this matter has been impeached, and no little feeling has been engendered, growing out of a misunderstanding of the true status of the affairs of the college. I will state that heretofore the president of the college owned the furniture and instruments necessary to operate the school, and the annual rents on the buildings have been $300, the rents being applied to insurance and repairs. The rents have not been paid in full for several years past. Some time before my connection with it the Board agreed to take furniture, etc., in liquidation of the rent debt. At the meeting of the Board, held last June, I was elected as a committee, together with Dr. McVoy, to make an inventory of his belongings in the college, with instructions to the effect that a disagreement between us on values should be arbitrated. That duty was faithfully discharged, and the appraised value of instruments, furniture, etc., footed up near $1,600, an amount approximately double the rent debt. I immediately conceived the idea of raising $1,500, to be applied to the payment of this debt and the repairs of the buildings and improvement of the grounds. I began at once in Mansfield, and succeeded in a partial canvass of the town, getting near $500 subscribed, and other amounts promised on demand. Being pressed for time, with my District Conference at hand, I had to leave the work, even in Mansfield, unfinished, feeling confident, however, of my ability to raise the $1,500. I left Mansfield sick; reached Keachie, the seat of our District Conference, sick; occupied my seat in the Conference one day, took my bed, and was never able to resume work until September, from which time until now I have had head, hands, and heart full, and then have failed to measure up to the demands upon me. I will further state that every dollar collected on the subscription so far has been paid on the furniture, so that on the fourteenth of January we paid Dr. McVoy the last dollar due him, borrowing $300 of the amount. The Board, notwithstanding my protest, elected me as their agent to raise that amount, and more, if possible. And I hereby appeal to the friends of Mansfield Female College to render this duty pleasant by forwarding large and small amounts to the treasurer of the Board, A. F. Jackson, Mansfield, La., who will promptly receipt for all amounts sent. I would that some one whom the Lord has blessed with ample means would relieve us of the debt, that small amounts contributed might be applied to the repairs and improvement of the buildings. The college is in great need of repairs, and if the church will generously aid the good people of Mansfield who are deeply concerned in the welfare of the college, and who are willing to aid in the good work to the extent of their ability, we will make Mansfield College what it has been in the past—one of the prettiest buildings on the most beautiful site in the State, and an institution of which we may justly be proud.

The Board have elected as president and vice-president Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Sligh, who are well known throughout Louisiana as popular educators and Christians of the highest type, who, with a competent and sufficient number of teachers for all demands, will train your girls for useful and honorable lives here, and for the kingdom of glory hereafter. Send your girls on at once without fear, and we will take care of them physically, intellectually, and morally. J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Sound Doctrine the Basis of Strong Character.

Somehow, of late years, there is a great hue and cry against doctrinal preaching, and yet that is the very kind of preaching the church and the world most needs. The revolt in the public mind is really against the controversial or polemic style of preaching. This style was greatly in vogue half a century ago. Whatever may be said against it, this much can be said for it: It developed a large class of wonderfully strong preachers and strong laymen and laywomen. It was not an unmitigated evil. Men and women were found in every community, and in all the churches, who knew what they believed and why they believed it. They could give a good, scriptural reason for the faith that was in them. It seems to be impossible for men, even good men, to differ and to discuss their differences without more or less feeling. This is true of men in both politics and religion. Except on a few points, the Christian people of this country are practically agreed on the great, fundamental doctrines of God's Holy Word. We differ mainly now about the best form of words to express a common faith. It may safely be assumed that sound doctrine is the basis of strong character. This is true in any and every department of life. A man or woman, to be worth much anywhere or to any worthy cause, must be strong in the faith, whatever the cause may be. This is specially true in all religious matters. No half-hearted man or woman can be an active or an efficient worker in the kingdom of God. For this reason men and women need to be fully instructed and well grounded in the Word and doctrine of God. That this may be, it is needful that we have strong doctrinal and expository preaching—a teaching preacher and a preaching teacher. A great part of his work is to edify, to build up, the church. The people need to know, to understand, the Word of God. This kind of preaching requires time and hard study. The effect of it may not be seen immediately, but it will be manifest in the end. Teaching is hard work, and generally slow work. The pupils, disciples, are not equally apt and anxious to learn. If they gain a little week by week, they will soon grow strong. A sermon is good just in proportion to the amount of scriptural truth there is in it. Of course, this truth ought to be expressed in an apt and striking way, and in language of unmistakable purity, clearness, and strength. The Billingsgate of the world is out of place in the pulpit, and is never suitable to express divine truth. Such language disgraces the pulpit, degrades the message, dishonors God, and is a sin to him who indulges in it.

The preacher is liable to be misled and deceived by the apparent, present effect of his sermon. It is no sign that good has been accomplished when the people laugh. The main object of preaching is not to raise a laugh. A clown could do this more readily than almost any preacher in the land, though some preachers are wonderfully gifted in this.

The good done by a sermon is not to be fairly estimated by the tears shed in the congregation. Some voices are wonderfully pathetic and tender, specially so when they are tremulous. Comparatively few people can refrain from tears when a tender scene is depicted or a pathetic anecdote is well told. Some preachers are gifted in telling anecdotes. These make up the great body of their sermons. When tears are once started they come easily, and often do not mean much.

In some congregations it is an easy matter to raise a shout. They have gotten in the habit of it. It is the fashion and the fad. Touch a certain string, and in a certain strain, and it is sure to come. The average colored congregation can beat the white people shouting, and not half try. Indeed, there is no meeting if there is no shouting. This is the main thing.

If a sermon is instructive and edifying, it is a good sermon. If it comforts the people, if it convinces them of sin, if it stirs good resolutions, if it begets in them higher and holier views of God, if it leads them to better and larger views of Christ, if it makes them better men and women, and leads to holier living, it is all that a sermon ought to be. These are some of the prime objects of preaching. Other things are incidental; these are fundamental. GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

We agree with the British Weekly in saying that the greatest literary desideratum is a really great commentary on Christ's Sermon on the Mount. Dr. Dale had agreed to prepare such work, but death prevented. Assuredly said sermon contains the gospel in epitome.

All things come to them that wait. It is two thousand five hundred years that Babylon captured and sorely oppressed Israel. Long since Babylon has fallen, and what remained of its former splendor has been purchased by wealthy Jews of Bagdad.

Mediocrity frequently calls genius a touch of madness. Ostensibly hiding, but really exposing its inferiority. Though insanity may at times show streaks of genius, the relation between the two is only accidental, not essential.

The Lei, of Santiago, tearfully confesses that the Latin races are a colossus, resting beneath the shadows of crumbling walls. The seeming prosperity of France is attributed to the fact that it is only semi-Latin. The Anglo-Saxon race, it continues, with its essentially civilizing tendencies and practical views of life, stands to-day at the head of the world.

Archbishop Kane said on the occasion of Satolli's recent investiture of the cardinalship: "We are justly proud of the fact that between the Constitution of our church and that of the United States exists such marked resemblance." And the speaker did not blush while he uttered this monstrous untruth. Think of it!—a Constitution which authorized the burning of Huss and Cranmer, and the iniquities of the Inquisition, like that of our country! Oh, yes; we see. The Roman Catholics are in our country not in the majority.

Murder and suicide caused the loss of 16,562 lives in our country during the past year. The number of lynchings was sadly large. No wonder that the new novels of our day are frightfully realistic. No need for imaginative production.

Bloomerites and female suffragists are very numerous in Maine. But a prominent lady of that "hundred-harbored State" now lectures her sisters: "When, under the present system, a woman has not sufficient influence as to control the vote of husband, father, son, brother, or lover, then she is devoid of the elements which entitle to cast a vote." JOB DIRN.

The best service any man can render to Christianity is to see that the work of his own denomination is well organized and effectively carried out. Such a man will, moreover, look with the utmost kindliness upon the Christian efforts of denominations other than his own.—Presbyterian.

Correspondence.

Belle Kearney in Ireland.

After my friends, with whom I had been traveling on the continent, left for America, I decided to take a trip through Ireland and Scotland alone. The railway journey from London to Holyhead consumed nearly a whole day, but the hours flew most delightfully as I was whirled across England and along the beautiful coast of Wales. My fellow-travelers were agreeable Irish people of the higher class. In the course of conversation with a very intelligent lady of the party, she said: "If you remain any length of time in Ireland, you will notice how particularly moral the Irish are. The whole social atmosphere is pure. Our girls are allowed the greatest freedom, and are growing very independent in thought and life, but are highly respected by the young men. When the fashionable matrimonial set in Dublin, or in the other cities, desire to indulge in questionable dissipations, they go over to London. The Prince of Wales has established a notoriously bad standard of morals, and the young men of England have copied them to such an extent that a license is allowed there which would not be tolerated in Ireland. Irish young men, having no such precedent in their country, have to seek a foreign shore when 'in for a lark.'"

The passage across the Irish Sea was exceedingly rough. I sternly concluded to stay on deck to the end of the short voyage; but when the wind turned my umbrella inside out, and the waves dashed over the bulwarks, covering me with spray and wetting my steamer rug, and my chair was tempestuously upset by the plunging of the boat, I wisely concluded to go below, and there, for three hours, with many "companions in distress," I lay convulsed with the most intense seasickness that I ever endured. By ten o'clock that night, however, my troubles had passed away, and I was safely sleeping in a comfortable hotel in Dublin.

Early next day, as soon as my breakfast was dispatched, I sallied forth to see the metropolis of Ireland. For four hours I walked continuously, visiting every place of importance within its limits. Beginning at Sackville street, which is the second widest street in Europe, with its elegant monuments to Nelson, O'Connell, Sir John Gray, and Father Matthew, and crossing one of the handsome bridges that span the Liffey, I went to the old Parliament Building, now used as the Bank of Ireland, Trinity College, the alma mater of Burke and Grattan, Moore and Goldsmith, the National Gallery and Library, the Royal Irish Academy, Dublin Castle, and the beautiful parks for which the old capital city of Ireland is so justly noted. The spots fraught with peculiar interest for me were the space in front of the church where Robert Emmet was executed, the Cathedral of St. Patrick, where Dean Swift is buried, and the church upon whose walls a tablet has been placed to the memory of Felicia Ann Hemans, whose body rests in the cemetery outside. In going to these places, I had to pass through the best parts of Dublin, its finest streets and most extensive buildings, members of which, like the customhouse and Four Courts, are of great architectural beauty. I also passed through some of its lowest, dirtiest parts, where the streets were carpeted with garbage, enlivened by ragged children and scolding old women, and the air made noxious by villainous odors. The contrast between the habits of the English and Irish is very striking. In England the fields are in a perfect state of cultivation, every sprig of grass looks trim and in its proper place, each little town is exquisitely clean and dainty; even great old London's streets look as if they had been newly "swept and garnished." The people are industrious and contented.

In Ireland it is the reverse in every respect. There is a wild, neglected look about the country districts, except the estates of a few rich noblemen. The villages are marvels of uncleanness, and the cities are not much better. The thing that struck me most forcibly on arriving at Dublin was the poverty of the working classes and their indolence. Groups of idle men, at all hours of the day, were sitting on the steps of public buildings smoking or sleeping. Instead of the jaunty air of prosperity that is prominent in England, there is a sluggishness and carelessness, accompanied by a species of hopeless stupefaction. Rusty old carts, unsightly wagons, shabby public vehicles, save a few, and lean, way-worn hack-horses. Poor old Ireland! It is certainly to be pitied. Withal, the people are most charming—kind, witty, sociable, and extraordinarily generous—infinitely quicker and more agreeable than their heavy British cousins across the sea, whom they so heartily dislike. The better classes in Ireland are violently opposed to Home Rule, knowing that it would be Catholic rule, as the Romanists are largely in the majority. It is said—among them that there is not a man in Ireland who is capable of governing the country, as the strongest and brainiest have gone to England and America to rule those lands. The politicians who are left spend their time quarreling with each other, every man striving for the mastery, until Ireland stands a spectacle for gods and men—much like a piece of its own famous linen, slightly soiled, considerably torn and jagged, and miserably frayed at the edges. The country from Dublin to Killarney is rather a desolate one, a continuous stretch of territory covered with grass, on which a few cattle browse; acres of bog, on which nothing living is seen; but in some parts the ground is cut into squares and sub-divided into small blocks, showing that the inhabitants have been getting peat to burn in lieu of wood. The little towns are few and far between. BELLE KEARNEY.

Centenary College.

The last meeting of the Alumni Association of Centenary College passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the president of the college appoint from its former students a committee, or committees, of such members and in such localities as he may approve, whose duty it shall be to take measures for the financial aid of the college.

In accordance with this resolution I do hereby name the following committees, and request the gentlemen composing them to take such action as will best secure the end in view, and report results to me at Jackson, La.

C. W. CARTER,
Pres. Centenary College.

COMMITTEES.

New Orleans—Judge A. Sambola, Col. E. H. Lombard, Judge Chas. Parlange, E. T. Merrick, Jr.; Rev. F. N. Parker, Dr. W. H. Riley, Hon. Allen Jumel, W. H. Haigh, Judge T. C. W. Ellis, Rev. H. H. Ahrens, Judge L. M. Pipkin, Maj. R. J. Perkins, J. A. Cason.

Shreveport—Judge A. D. Land, A. J. Morff, Rev. P. M. Brown, Col. J. S. Young.

Baton Rouge—Col. T. Sambola Jones, Hon. H. N. Sherburne, Judge G. W. Buckner, Col. K. A. Cross, Dr. R. R. Jones.

Plaquemine—A. H. Gay, Jr.

Clinton—Col. A. J. Norwood, Dr. L. G. Perkins, Hon. W. F. Kernan, Hon. Chas. Kilbourne, Dr. Emmett Erwin, Hon. I. D. Wall, C. P. De Lee.

Monroe—Judge R. W. Richardson, Franklin Garrett, D. W. Faulk.

St. Joseph—Hon. T. P. Clinton, B. F. Bonney.

Announcement of other committees will be made hereafter.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

I am at home for a few days after a trip of three weeks through the Durant, Winona, Grenada and Sardis districts.

Sabbaths were spent in Durant, Batesville and Senatobia, and intervening days at Winona, Grenada, Sardis, Como and Courtland. At each place fair success was attained in the work. Services were rendered for the Sunday-school cause that will doubtless result in good. When teachers supply themselves with the Sunday-school Magazine and either Hoss', Hurlbut's or Peloubet's Sunday-school Lesson Notes, there is hope for successful work.

I found the pastors and presiding elders all at work, and, without exception, in good favor with their people.

I had the pleasure of attending the Conference of the M. E. Church at Grenada, presided over by Bishop Hurst. He and Dr. S. L. Baldwin, Missionary Secretary, made a good impression on our people by their sermons and talks—as did also Dr. Hamilton, of Boston.

Grenada Collegiate Institute is doing well. A letter just received from Bro. Malone says, "Still they come"—i. e., new pupils. "Forward" is the watchword in our Conference this year on all lines. We are all laborers together in a common cause. May God help us all to do our duty!

G. W. BACHMAN.

P. S.—Mrs. M. M. Bigby, a member of long standing in our church, died at her home in Attala county, Miss., on the first instant. She was noted for her Christian hospitality and generosity to the poor. Her home for decades past has been a preacher's home, as many a way-worn itinerant can testify.

An Unexpected Advocate.

The novelist, Zola, made a piteous lament over a wasted life-effort, but reached a wise and correct conclusion when he said: 'For twenty-five years I have been endeavoring to teach positivism, and must confess now that I have made a mistake, and that the only hope of France recovering her true position lies in her once more recovering her Christian faith." This testimony is all the more important and convincing, because it comes from one who is not prejudiced in favor of Christianity. France has tried infidelity, free-thinking, and Romanism, but they have not brought her true stability, well-being and glory. The gospel is her supreme need.—The Presbyterian.

Just what is the native Armenian Church, is a question frequently asked to-day. The distinctive features of that church may be summed up in a nutshell as follows: It differs but little in doctrine from the Roman or Greek Church. Prayers are offered for the dead. No belief in purgatory is held, nor are indulgences permitted. Celibacy is not insisted on, but a priest must marry before he is ordained. He can not marry afterwards. There are several orders of clergy, similar to those of the Romish Church for the most part. There are deacons and minor lay officers. The priesthood is hereditary. The church had a liturgy which includes the Nicene Creed and prayers of the fathers used in the Romish and Episcopal Churches. Baptism is by triune immersion. All who are baptized may join in the whole of the communion service.—Northwestern Advocate.

The Independent, or the Rev. Dr. Carroll, who renders very valuable service by compiling church statistics, publishes in detail proofs of progress in our country during the past five years. The number of churches in the United States has increased at the rate of over ten a day, and the number of communicants is larger by three and a half millions than it was in 1890. The membership of the churches increases by a larger percentage than the population. These facts are very encouraging and should incite Christians to more earnest endeavor and increased liberality, and, above all, to an undoubting confidence in God and his Word, and to prayer without ceasing.—Intelligencer.

The expulsion of a prominent member of the Chapter of the Loyal Legion in New York City, because of conduct unbecoming a military man and a gentleman, shows that there is one secular organization, at least, which makes discipline, as well as enlistment and edification, a duty. The Christian church to-day is suffering from apathy within and scorn from without quite as much because it has too little discipline as for any other reason.—Congregationalist.

Miss Clara Barton is the first woman who ever held an official position under the United States government. When she was about twenty-four years of age she was appointed clerk in the Patent Office, which had then been organized but a few years, and she was still holding that position when she commenced her philanthropic work at the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861.—Exchange.

Bro. Mellen and His Article.

I see in the ADVOCATE, of Dec. 26 an article from the pen of Bro. T. L. Mellen, headed "Those Points of Law;" and it seems to me that some one ought to answer him, as he says some hard things against the Bishop and presiding elder of the Vicksburg district. Bro. Mellen seems to think the Bishop and presiding elder held secret meetings and had an understanding beforehand, and then just rushed the matter through, under whip and spur, without any time to consider. Well, it may be that a Bishop and presiding elder to our church would resort to such means as that; but I do not believe it, and I am glad that, while I do not profess sanctification according to the second-blessing theory, nevertheless I have that charity that "thinketh no evil." Nor do I believe that our dear brother, D. Black, would intentionally bring out one side of a controverted subject and leave the other out, or do anyone an injustice intentionally.

Now, the fact is, Bro. Mellen's question was never brought up in open Conference, nor was it made a part of the business of the Conference; and I guess Dr. Black had enough to keep him pretty well employed without going around and asking the brethren if they had asked any questions that the Bishop had refused to answer, and that he had enough to fill up his paper without hunting around for unimportant matter or foolish questions that a Bishop would refuse to answer.

Now, with regard to the question that Bro. Mellen submitted and the Bishop refused to answer. I think he (the Bishop) showed his wisdom in paying no attention to it. It was not necessary at all to answer it. If Bro. Mellen intended, by "assisting in revival meetings," to preach and take charge of the services of meetings, the Bishop had already answered it fully in his answers to Dr. Weems' questions; and if he intended to sing, pray, and exhort penitents at the altar, it was too simple a question for him to pay any attention to, or make a Conference record of, for I do not suppose there was a question in the mind of any man, woman, or child, on the subject. All agree that this is right, and every preacher, so far as I know, desires all the help from laymen and women that he can get. But the Bishop knew that the object of the question was to weaken the force of his answer to the other question, and thereby avoid the result intended by the questions and answers. If he (the Bishop) had answered "No," then the same work would have gone on under the name of "assisting in revival services" that had been before, unlicensed persons would have been invited to conduct meetings—preach just as before—in our churches; and if he had answered "Yes," then the cry would have gone up that the Bishop was opposed to laymen or women assisting in revival services in any way. So the Bishop showed his wisdom by treating the question with silence. Whenever a majority of our leading men, in General Conference assembled, enact a law to license women to preach, I will say no more, but will still object to unlicensed persons being invited to preach and conduct regular revival or preaching services in our churches, either male or female.

Does Bro. Mellen actually believe that Paul taught the Galatians that there was no difference between men and women in God's church? "But they are one in Christ Jesus"—one in his church, possessing the same rights and powers. If so, why then license anyone? If all have the same rights and powers, why not let all preach without let or hindrance? Why require anyone to be licensed? If all ought not to be licensed, I do not believe any such teaching can be found, or that it, when properly understood, will teach any such thing.

Dr. Weems' Questions.

I am sorry that my good Bro. Mellen alluded, in his recent article in the ADVOCATE, to what might have passed between Dr. Weems and Bishop Duncan in private. The following are Bro. Mellen's words to which I refer: "But the ADVOCATE does not speak of the several private consultations between the brother who raised the points of law and the Bishop who decided; nor of the remarkable parliamentary decision under which the motion, based on the law points, was rushed through."

In the first place, Bro. Mellen does not know what took place between the Doctor and the Bishop; and if he did, his words in the ADVOCATE constitute an unfortunate innuendo. Suppose that Dr. Weems did consult Bishop Duncan before he presented his questions. Suppose even that Bishop Duncan framed the questions, and that Dr. Weems presented them as his own. Where is the wrong? It is not in violation of literary, nor of parliamentary usage and law, nor of good morals, for one to present in a deliberative body measures prepared by another. It is unfortunate to impugn the motives of another whose statements we would controvert. It matters not where or how the questions came into being. Dr. Weems presented them, and Bishop Duncan answered them. They are before us, and we have a right to discuss them.

I am sorry that Dr. Weems presented them, because they do not touch the question that was in the minds of the brethren. They wanted to know whether or not it is unlawful for a preacher in charge to put a meeting of his in charge of an unauthorized and irresponsible person. I believe, with "Gideroy," that it is unlawful for a preacher in charge to put his meeting in charge of anybody. I did not appoint myself in charge of Y z o City station, and I have no sort of right to appoint anyone else to take charge—no, not for a day, any more than for a month or a year.

Again, some of the brethren wanted to know whether or not they might use godly men and women, licensed or unlicensed, to aid them in their meetings. Some of us are in no sort of doubt about this matter. We use the men and the women in our own charges thus; and if one should come from another charge, we would use him or her. As for myself there are but two men that can take charge of a meeting in my church. One is Bishop Duncan, or his successor; and the other is Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, or his successor. This is the law as I see it. But I do use Bro. A. and Sister B. and S., too, to help me in my meetings. They talk and pray and sing—expound Scripture, persuade sinners and instruct penitents under my direction. If somebody says that my Sister B. is a preacher, although I know she has no license, what of it? If Sister S. herself claims to be a preacher, when I know she has no license, what of it? Nothing whatever! Who will dare to say to Dr. Carlisle, or to any godly follower of the late Dr. Garland's example, that such lay sermons as these men preach are all unlawful? Mrs. Bishop Hargrove and Mrs. Wightman preach missions, and Miss Kearney preaches temperance. They do not take charge of churches. No one objects to the work they do. We would all object to either of them being placed in charge of one of our churches. Most of us, I think, understand this; but a few of our younger preachers wished a Bishop's decision on it. But they did not get it. The answers to Dr. Weems' questions decided nothing whatever. The first part of his third question is so vague as to be utterly valueless even if it touched a living issue.

I am sorry, not only that Dr. Weems' questions leave nothing whatever decided, but that they are creating a very erroneous and unjust impression outside of our church. Miss Willard, for instance, publishes to the world that Bro. Crymes was compelled by the Conference to promise that never again would he have a woman in his pulpit. As a matter of course, we know that the woman question was never before the Conference. Bro. Crymes had said some sharp things to his presiding elder, had set his superior at defiance; and we asked him to say that he would be subject to his official superiors; and yet Miss Willard is not to blame for her mistake. It is a natural one. Dr. Weems' questions, followed by his motion to pass Bro. Crymes' character, very naturally misled her.

Let the matter rest, but do not let the Conference be misunderstood.

England's Colonial Possessions.

I have thought that a brief article on England's colonial possessions, at this juncture, might be interesting and instructive. Of course, such an article can not be an original composition, but must rather be a compilation from historical and geographical authorities.

Colonies were common in ancient and historic times, but never on so general and vast a scale as in the last four hundred years. The discovery of the mariner's compass, the doubling the Cape of Good Hope, thus revealing an open and easy route to the Indian Ocean, and all the islands and mainlands in the bosom of, or bordering on, that vast expanse of water; and then the discovery of the American continent, with its magnificent and fertile islands, gave an impulse to the spirit of colonization unknown to former ages. Spain and Portugal began at once to colonize nearly all the tropical and southern half of this continent with its numerous groups of islands. France and Holland, Daunark and Sweden, all took part in the colonizing enterprises. But England, from her insular position, commercial advantages, and, above all, from the enterprising and indomitable spirit of her people, has outstripped all competitors in the forward march of colonization. As the outcome of political convulsions, wars, victories and defeats, France, Spain, Portugal, Holland, Denmark and Sweden have all lost large portions of their vast colonial possessions. England has lost the largest and most valuable of her American claims. At present England has colonial possessions in Europe, in Asia, in Africa, Australasia and America, in the Atlantic, the Pacific, and Indian Ocean, and in most of the seas. She possesses more colonial territory and population than France, Spain, Portugal, Holland, Denmark and Sweden all put together. The figures, as published in the Encyclopædia Britannica, stand thus: Square miles of English colonial territory, 8,015,028; all the above-named nations, 1,754,360. So England has about seven times as many square miles as all these nations put together. As to colonial population, England has 204,535,000, against 41,281,900 ruled by the above-mentioned peoples—nearly five times as many colonial subjects as all these nationalities combined. It is probable these statistics were collected and compiled a score of years ago, and changes have, no doubt, taken place. The explorations of Baker, Livingston, Stanley, and others, have thrown vast light on the "Dark Continent," and brought to the knowledge of the civilized nations a large increase of information as to the geography, climate, and resources of that immense continent. The European nations have not been slow to act upon this sudden increase of knowledge as to the stupendous magnitude and value of the resources of Africa. Belgium has organized the "Free State of Africa" in the basin of the Congo; France is making large claims, and so is Germany; and England, although owning and ruling vast possessions in Southern Africa and on the Atlantic coast of that continent, true to her tradition and acquisitive habits, is stepping forward to claim still larger portions.

To the observant student of nations there seems to be two Englands—political and commercial England, and Christian and philanthropic England. Her politicians and merchants seem ever anxious to grasp, annex, and hold more territory and rule more peoples for political power and commercial profit. But Christian, philanthropic England soon enters these open doors of opportunity with the Bible, the gospel, and all the useful arts of life, and soon betters in every respect the conditions of these peoples. A remarkable example of God making the wrath of man to praise him, and bringing good out of (at least apparent) evil circumstances. J. B. WALKER.

A Fast Age

It is useless for me to say that this is a fast age. It is astonishing how soon little things become great and small things large. These be days of development, magnifying. A little thing is started in a community. One thinks it very small. The introducer intended it for the best—it may have been the best in sight, with him; but soon it began to grow until it was tall, very tall, and stood out with fatness on every side except the right side. It has caused confusion and broken up the good feelings and friendship of the neighborhood. "Tall oaks from little acorns grow." The oak is too slow for this age. One word, just for fun, will sometimes cause great men to fight. It looks very little, but it is so.

It has, for many years, been a strange thing to me that great men, Christian men, can not advocate or oppose an important matter without getting into confusion, losing sight of the subject to cut an opponent, or take up the time and tax the patience of their hearers or readers defending themselves.

This takes me back to the early days of my life when deer were plentiful in South Alabama and Mississippi. Several of the neighbors would meet occasionally for a drive. One was selected to take the hounds and drive the woods, while others were stationed miles around to kill the deer as he came out ahead of the dogs. Soon a long yelp would be heard, and then other hounds would join in until every stander would be on tiptoe (or have a buck ague, as they called it), expecting every moment to see the deer come bounding by him. But to the dismay of every sportsman, some frisky, smart dog would jump a rabbit and go in full cry as if he was in sight of the deer, calling the attention of the whole pack of hounds from the deer, creating confusion, each one running here and there, yelping for himself, until they cross each others path, have a mixing up of dogs and a general fight, to the confusion, loss of confidence and disappointment of the sportsmen. Then they would call off the hounds, and start for another drive with less confidence in some neighbor's dog—yes, a little doubtful of the whole pack for that dog.

The Palmer Camp Ground has become a noted place, or rather the meeting has. From a little mole hill we have a great volcanic mountain belching forth fire and smoke week after week, smoking the entire country round about. Blow your horn, Mr. Editor, and let us enter another drive.

Boards of Education.

Beginning on page 26 of the Minutes of the eighty-second session of the Mississippi Conference, you may find "Report No. 2 of the Board of Education" This "report" has reference to the organization of district, circuit and station Boards of Education to perfect the organization of something, it is not known exactly what. It can't be the Board authorized and elected by the last General Conference, nor the Conference Board. The one was finished when it met and elected its officers; the other has been organized among us for many years. I have looked into the Discipline for some authority for these "Boards," and into the powers delegated to the General Board, to see if it was empowered to organize such Boards, or have them organized under its suggestion or direction, and I can not find the remotest suggestion of anything of the kind.

My conclusion is, that the Mississippi Conference is trying to erect within her bounds an organization foreign to our Discipline and altogether from under disciplinary control, and this by a legislative act, no power for which is vested in her. It is too plain a fact to need demonstration that an Annual Conference has no legislative power, and when one undertakes it, it is a revolutionary move.

Beside this, there is a ridiculous side to this question, and that is, that our young men who are seeking an education are put at the mercy of this irresponsible and illegally formed Board.

I call most respectfully the attention of presiding elders to this, as they will, no doubt, be called upon to have these "Boards" elected. K. S. ENOCHS.

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 18, 1896.

Some Strange Things.

We have heard it said from the chair at Annual Conference, when preachers were reading their reports—some being in full, and others very short—"Any man can bring up a full report if he will try." This is to say that all preachers are good collectors, and that all charges are in the main alike. We dissent emphatically, for all preachers are not good collectors. Some of our best men are successful in every other way, but they fail, as a rule, in bringing up their collections. They dread to try to collect. They will not try to collect what is due them. They will do without it first. Neither are all the charges alike with regard to liberality on this line. The want of timely indoctrination, and bad training at first, have produced apathy upon the part of a few, who in turn have influenced the whole body. Particularly do we find an inveterate and widespread prejudice against the foreign missionary cause in some charges. They get into a rut here, and once in it, they are hard to move. Many members of prominence, and of good general information, are as ignorant as infants upon this great subject. They know not whether we have two dozen or two thousand missionaries abroad. They know absolutely nothing on this subject, neither do they intend to know. They never have given, neither do they intend to give, anything to missions.

Again, we have heard, and read this from high authority more than once: "Let every pastor see to it that every family in his charge is supplied with a church paper." To accomplish this, according to our experience, the expense of supplying many of his dear people with the church paper would devolve upon the pastor. There are members, not a few, in the M. E. Church, South, we are sorry to say, who never have read a church paper, and it is one of the last things that they wish to read. The pastor would have to pay for the paper, and then could not run after them fast enough to get them to read it. The reader, perhaps, is ready to say that all such are poor members. We do not dispute it, yet there are thousands of such. Our dear church numbers over a million members. A large number! Yet to see published the comparatively small number of this million, who bear the financial burdens, and who love and read the literature of the church, would be the strangest fact of all.

Letter from Brazil.

DEAR BRO. MACKIE: Your very kind letter, accompanied by the generous gift from the Seashore Camp Ground Sunday-school, came to me yesterday. In the name of our school and mission, I thank you for it, and for myself, in that you confided it to my care and judgment. We have not decided just yet how to use it. We think of getting one or two good clocks with it. It will depend on the price of a good regulator whether we shall get one or two. At present we are keeping school by one that is only right for a part of a day after it is moved up or back, and which worries the teachers, because it keeps them moving their watches to suit. I love a clock; it goes working on without asking "Why?" and "Wherefore?" and though so quiet, it comforts us all day; and then at night, if sleep deserts us, it is, too, God's messenger to us teachers "to number our days and to apply our hearts unto wisdom."

When your check used to come to Miss Phillips, it was always a cause for rejoicing, for we felt that there had been thought and prayer beforehand. You dear people at home can't imagine how we cherish every kind word, and thought, and prayer, that come from you to us. It isn't only the one who receives it, but all who hear of it. I rejoiced with Miss Phillips, and yesterday my colleagues rejoiced with me over your kindness.

You know much of the subtlety of Rome's teaching, and the effect on her adepts by your contact with them in Louisiana, but can only know it thoroughly by close contact with the people in a country entirely given up to it, as, for instance, they are in this country. What hurts me so is that, unless they tell falsehoods about it, they do not know what they are worshiping, or why. To-night I asked a young woman why they gave so many names to the Virgin Mary. She said she did not know. I tried, by questions, to show her the absurdity of dividing up one person into so many kinds of persons, but did not reach her. I shall have other opportunities, I hope. I have many good friends among the people, and I long to snatch them from the "horrible pit." What troubles me most is, that they are so well satisfied with themselves and their idolatrous religion—that is, those who are what they call "devout." We have many rescued ones to rejoice over, and believe that "God has many people in this place," and that he keeps us alive and anxious to reach them.

Here, in Petropolis, Bro. Kennedy has made a good start in reaching the people by preaching; and in the school we have twenty-one who hear the gospel read and have Bible lessons. We take our boarders to church and Sunday-school, and teach them the International Lessons. Last Sunday I taught them next Sunday's lesson on temperance. They seemed more interested than at any time before. After giving them an idea of the horrors of alcohol, as it operates on the system, I asked them if such an one could be kind and good in that state, and they said, "No!" Then I said, "If it does this for men, and women, too, ought we not to do what we can to prevent it by example?" and with one accord they said, "Yes!" I suppose that all of them have wine on the table in their homes. There is much "moderate" drinking, and much more drunkenness than formerly. So you see we have more than one dragon to contend with here.

I hope the Seashore Camp Meeting visitors will continue to pray for us. Oh, make special prayer, that their stiff necks may be broken to the yoke of Him "who is meek and lowly of heart"! With grateful regard, I remain,

Your fellow-laborer in Christ's vineyard, M. H. WATTS.

To the Women of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR FELLOW-WORKERS: Our financial year is within a few weeks of its close. If we would wind up our annual record acceptably to our Master and creditably to ourselves, we must make these last weeks a time of active effort and liberal giving. Never, perhaps, in our history as an organization, have we stood in greater need of wide-awake, zealous, enthusiastic work and workers than at the close of this, our eighteenth year. The snow-white fields are before us, wasting from lack of reapers; every mission station needs reinforcements, the strain in many places being too heavy on our faithful missionaries; our general treasury is greatly depleted; our periodicals, the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Little Worker, are literally pleading for subscribers, that they may help and not hinder our finances; and last, but not least, our zealous and beloved foreign secretary, Mrs. McGavock, has been called to her reward, and we are bereft of her wise counsels and untiring service. A crisis is upon us, and we must meet it in the strength of Him whose we are and whom we serve. The resources of our Methodist women are amply sufficient for the needs of this hour. God has wonderfully blessed and prospered our Southland temporally during the past year; and an act of liberality or loving self-denial, on the part of each member of our auxiliaries now, an extra offering of gratitude and love to Him from whom comes every good gift, will place the finances of our Conference society where we will not be ashamed of them; and show that the women of the North Mississippi W. F. M. S. love their Savior and the souls for whom he shed his precious blood.

Let every auxiliary make an earnest effort to secure the attendance of every member at the coming February meeting. Let the corresponding secretary read this letter; then let the president call upon some member to offer an earnest prayer that God may awaken each one to a sense of her responsibility, and open each heart and purse to more liberal giving than ever before. After the prayer is offered, let the treasurer call the roll of members, carefully noting and making a list of such members as are delinquent in dues or contingent fees. Let the president appoint a committee, if need be, to assist the treasurer in waiting on these members before March 1. Let the pledge next be brought before the auxiliary, and arrangements made for meeting it in full, if it has not already been paid. Where auxiliaries have made no pledge, let them feel themselves bound to aid this fund for outgoing missionaries, and arrange to that end. Let the agent for the Woman's Missionary Advocate be required to see each member of auxiliaries whose subscription has expired, or those who are not subscribers before March 1. Let lady managers of juveniles be requested to do the same for the Little Worker. Let every interest of the work receive thorough, prayerful attention, and may God help our women to see to it that March, 1896, finds each auxiliary with a financial record in advance of the past year, and with members whose hearts and hands are pledged to the work of the W. F. M. S. Active, united, generous effort will bring us to the close of this year with happy, grateful hearts; but carelessness, indifference and selfishness will cripple our work and call down upon us the displeasure of our Almighty Father.

Yours for Christ and missions,

MARY L. HARGROVE,
Pres. W. F. M. S., North Miss. Conf.

Sensational Preachers.

A New York story is told of Farmer Oatcake, who, with his good wife Mandy, was on a brief visit to a daughter-in-law in Buffalo, and who looked over the newspapers—as all strangers do consult the Sunday morning papers—in an endeavor to find a church service which he might attend with hope of securing spiritual satisfaction. He soon gleaned that the following subjects would be discussed from various city pulpits: "Is the Trilby Craze Dying Out?" "Fitzsimmons vs. Corbett"; "How the Pastor Spends His Vacation"; "Should Our Daughters Marry Foreign Noblemen?" "High Sleeves and Theatre Hats"; "The Gold Brick Saloon"; "Canal Street on Saturday Night"; "Wordsworth and the Lake School of Poetry"; "The Forty-third Congress"; "Rights of Motormen." Farmer Oatcake gave it up after a while and laid down the paper, saying, with a sigh: "Laws sake, Mandy! I do believe that the gospel and the schema of salvation have gone clear out of fashion."—Picayune.

It may be truly said that no man does any work perfectly who does not enjoy his work. Joy in one's work is the consummate tool without which the work may be done indeed, but without its finest perfection.—Phillips Brooks.

Strength comes by exercise. But the fact that one has worked hard is no assurance that he has worked well. We may be too easily satisfied with the measure of our exertion as the test of accomplishment.

It is not by turning over libraries, but by repeatedly perusing and intently contemplating a few great models, that the mind is best disciplined.—Macaulay.

Keep your conduct abreast of your conscience, and very soon your conscience will be illumined by the radiance of God.—W. M. Taylor, D. D.

Failure after a long perseverance is much grander than never to have a striving good enough to be called a failure.—George Eliot.

When we are alone we have our thoughts to watch; in family, our tempers; and in society, our tongues.—Hannah More.

True goodness is like the glow-worm in this, that it shines most when no eyes except those of heaven are upon it.—Hare.

On Board

a yacht, sail-boat, or any kind of vessel, there's a great deal of work that can best be done with Pearline. It washes all the paint, wood-work, glass, etc., better than anything else. Most captains have found this out—and Pearline is kept in foreign ports, now, on purpose for them.

You can't use soap with salt water, you know; but it doesn't make much difference—salt or fresh, hard or soft, hot or cold—with Pearline.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. E H Rook: "I am on my new work, and am doing very well but for la grippe. This is a large circuit, with eight appointments and six hundred members. Your paper is in favor here among the people, and I hope to get you a good list of subscribers."

Laura L. Chevalier, Vidalia: "The Rev. J. W. Davis, pastor of the Methodist Church, South, Vidalia, Sunday, Jan. 12, at 11 o'clock A. M., preached to a good, attentive congregation, also at 7 o'clock P. M. Sunday-school, 10 o'clock A. M. Rev. J. W. Davis presided over the Sunday-school. If there is anyone interested in our little Sunday-school at Vidalia, we would be glad if they would help us with our library by sending us a book or 25 cents."

Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan: "This writer has been kindly received for his second year's work in Tupelo. It is pleasant to dwell together in unity with this good people. We are praying and working for great things from the blessed Lord this year. Our Epworth League is one of the best in the Conference. Its exercises often prove a special grace to all present, and we leave with warmed and melting hearts. Our stewards were prompt and full on finances at the first Quarterly Conference. The presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Thames, though in family bereavement, is strong in the Lord, and is drawn nearer to Christ in the fire. There, too, our hearts get closer."

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, P. C., Olive Branch circuit: "After a short, but pleasant visit among relatives and friends, we came to our new charge. A ying, we were warmly received and kindly treated. Bro. Smith had gone to Galveston, Texas, so we immediately occupied the comfortable and commodious parsonage where we found furniture, food and fuel. Thanks to these thoughtful friends! These good people appreciate their pastors, and express the same in a substantial way. Thus they begin, and thus continue, and the present incumbent acknowledges his increasing indebtedness therefor. We begin the work with great encouragement. Our first Quarterly Conference has just passed, and it was a fine one. Bro. Cameron was seemingly at his best. We hope for the best year we have ever had. We start in for many conversions, all the Conference collections and three new churches."

Rev. W. H. Robert, Centreville, Miss.: "It is some time since I wrote to you last. I had the pleasure on yesterday of hearing a fine sermon from Bro. Rayner, the preacher in charge of this Centreville, Whitaker and Bethel charges. If Bro. R. will excuse me, I will say it really was a splendid Bible sermon from the text, Matt. iv, 17: 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.' It reminded me of the sermons I used to hear fifty and more years ago from Bishop Capers and Pierce, Whitefoord Smith, Caleb W. Key, Bond English, and others of that day. I had not been able to be there for some time from failing health, but have in my room been studying over the old-time sermons of John Wesley and others on the New Birth. We knew Mr. Wesley said in one of his sermons that this was evidenced now—(1) By faith in Christ—a live, active faith—evidenced by works and obedience. (2) By hope, the anchor of the soul—pinned in the wounds of the crucified One. (3) By love, which lasts when faith and hope have come to the full enjoyment. Bro. Rayner said: Regeneration or the new birth, necessary for church membership, would and should give to its professors (1) self-denial, for Christ's sake, (2) cross bearing at his command, (3) the joy of heaven in the end. He quoted that the kingdom of God was not meat nor drink, but righteousness—peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. I am old now, and I love good old solid Bible truth."

Rev. H. P. Lewis: "We came to our new charge on Dec. 20, last; were met at the train by that noble man of God whom we preachers have known for years, Bro. W. M. Thornton, and two young ladies, Miss Willie Wilkins and Miss Ethel Cotton. We were conducted to the parsonage, where we found Sister Thornton and Sister Day, who had supper awaiting us, with cheerful fires, all of which we were prepared to enjoy. It was 10 o'clock at night; so we soon dispatched our meal, and got ready, the best we could, to go off to the land of dreams. I have made one round on my work, and am pleased with the people and prospects. Our first quarterly meeting was held here in Lake last Saturday and Sunday. Bro. W. W. Simmons, our presiding elder, was on hand in pretty good trim; gave us two good sermons; presided in Quarterly Conference with ease and satisfaction—made a fine impression generally. Our stewards, most of them, notwithstanding the bad weather, were on hand and made a liberal assessment for their preacher. We have a good home—good neighbors, and we expect to have a good time, spiritually, during the year. We ask an interest in the prayers of all who may read this. I want to say to my brethren in the ministry, who have learned to love and esteem Bro. Thornton, that his good wife is, I think, his equal when it comes to looking after the interests of the preacher's family, if not in all respects. May God bless them abundantly."

Rev. T. H. King, Fannin, Miss: "We arrived at our new home on Jan. 2, at 4 o'clock P. M. We were met in Jackson by friends with wagons, teams and buggy to convey us and our freight to Fannin, our present work. After arriving here and dining with Sister Brown, we were driven to the parsonage by Bro. R. F. Brown and Miss Mollie, his sister, in company with two or three others, where we began to unpack our freight and get ready for the approaching night. Being left alone, we began to inspect the different departments, and when we entered the dining-room we found that kind ladies had preceded us and had lots of nice things stored away for the table that we enjoyed many days thereafter. Almost every day since our revival has brought some token of kindness and appreciation from our neighbors, Baptists, Methodists, and all; and the best part of all this, Mr Editor, is that it has increased to such an extent till this eve we received a first-class pounding. At about 4 o'clock a buggy conveying two ladies arrived at the parsonage gate well loaded with packages, bundles, etc., and before we had disposed of these, a wagon drove up ladened with a number of nice things—all of which we so much appreciate. After the company had departed, we began to examine the different packages and found that they contained just such things as we needed: flour, rice, hams, eggs, sugar, coffee, potatoes, molasses, canned fruit, jelly, soda, salt, butter, lard, etc. These good ladies seem to know exactly what a preacher's family needs. God bless everyone who participated in this act of kindness, and rest assured, dear friends, that the preacher and his wife appreciate the same; and may God give us grace and strength to minister to them spiritually as they have to us temporally! Success to you, Mr. Editor and the dear ADVOCATE."

Rev. T. W. Dye, Macon, Miss.: "We are delighted with these Macomians. They are a right royal and loyal legion of Methodists. No more delightful charge in the bounds of—well, just say anywhere—for Conference lines are not in so traceable boundaries, marking with emphasis the law of limitations. I am in position to enlarge upon the connectional idea in our Methodist economy, and would give it full scope con amore as to the above eulogy, with its circumstance. But nothing more, mind you, for I felt never the connectional afflatus to any appreciable extent of enthusiasm, inspiring or aspiring me to hope for honors of tripod, field secretaryship or to evangelize. No, no! I would not edit—beg poor preachers, lesson poor ideas how to shoot, or poor brains how to shoot ideas, nor would I so sin as to find fault with church, Bishops and everybody but myself. I would be a preacher—nothing more, nothing less. Methodism is a felt power in this community. If we had less religion and brains, our church would run into Gothic angles and towers, with gunboat port-holes on the outside, and the follies of the Anglican ritual on the inside would complete the travesty on church and service. By the grace of God, we are what we are. This is our boast. By the way, Mr. Editor, did you ever receive an official reception? The official Board met us at the depot with ample conveyances, and took us in charge. The ladies had the parsonage well warmed, and a sumptuous dinner-turkey, with accompanying et ceteras—was refreshingly tasteful to our journey-wearied company. The larder was well supplied, and two extra fat turkeys from Sisters Minor and Soales, a handsome Jersey cow from Capt. Soales. The Soales are royal blood, and as true as their noble sire, my dearly loved friend of years ago. The grand old Doctor has passed over into the real life, but his mantle is worn by his sons on this side of 'the mystic river.' May there be no missing link in that circle 'around our Father's house' in that day! A bank check for a twelfth of pastor's salary the day you arrive—by 'the Board'—and then to have that 'noble old Roman,' Judge H. W. Foote, to warmly greet you in the name of the Master, and to slip into your hand a roll of United States flexible currency, while a pleasant smile adds a charm to his presentation speech—'This is my custom for years, and I don't suppose you would have me, in this instance, break the record, as I don't care to break from my old habit myself.' One other thing is noteworthy and praiseworthy in connection with this somewhat ideal charge. They have words only of praise for their former pastors. I like this spirit. I am convinced more and more that the constituent elements of a true Methodist are two in number, viz—grace and brains. The grace of God in the heart, and plenty of brains in the head, and you have ballast and canvas in proportion. Now then set sail and make port. Charybdis and Scylla are only fable. Hear this, O Israel! The collections, all of them, are provided for by the Board. God bless such a Board of officials. Wouldn't Bob Davis shout like a 'Modoo' if he just could see the like. Never mind, old chum of mine; I am going to get the next Bishop, who comes to look after our interests, to give you such a place, or else I'll move to have him superannuated for unacceptability. Now, Mr. Editor, I know you will pardon this lengthy epistle, for such a Methodist congregation in our North Mississippi Conference is an exception. I hope we may have them in the not distant future as many as we have charges. Do you blame me for loving them? Macon and this sortlie will get along well. I love to preach to them. They are appreciative, and let you know of their appreciation. Bro. N. G. Augustus will be of great help to me. He has preached twice to the delight of the people. Augustus is known here. 'Tis his old home, and well beloved. He is a cultured, scholarly Christian gentleman. I do not like to see him in the local ranks. He can fill any pulpit, and with credit. Some things are hard to be understood."

Everyone gives it the highest praise. H. Gradel, Druggist, Walnut and Allison Sts., Cincinnati, O., says this of his trade: "I sell my share of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and my customers that have used the preparation speak of it in the highest terms."

"That was the greatest sermon I ever heard," responded the good deacon; "it was two hours long." "That was the greatest Sunday newspaper I ever saw," remarked a slave of the newspaper habit "it was forty-eight pages long."

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

DEAR BROTHER: The Bible received yesterday. I am delighted with it. Think it is very cheap. Every Sunday-school teacher ought to have one.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN A. GUICE.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 14, 1895.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to February, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

You may use this letter if you see fit for the benefit of suffering humanity. Yours truly,

A LITTLE GIRL PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her strength. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

Turkey.

If anything was needed to prove that the Turkish Empire does not rightfully belong to the circle of civilized nations, it will be found in the refusal of the Sultan to permit the Red Cross Society or "any foreign societies or individuals" to distribute "money collected abroad," or to exercise their peaceful ministries within its dominions. Turkey declares itself by this act of its rulers an anacronism in this nineteenth century, and shows itself more essentially heathen and barbarous than Japan, whose rulers welcomed the Red Cross agents and enforced its merciful rules as to the treatment of sick and wounded soldiers and of non-combatants. Since the Red Cross Society is international, and has the endoresement of all the leading nations of the West, and Japan in the East, the only effect of this surprising action of the Turk can be to further exasperate the nations, and promote a concert of action which will compel not only a reversion of this action, but a stop to the massacres and atrocities which have made necessary the intervention of the Red Cross organization. It may very possibly mean the dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire, or at least such a change of rulers and policy as will make possible the execution of pledges given, and such an administration of the laws as will secure to all, Christians and Moslems alike, security in life and property, and make forever impossible such horrors as have marked the past year. It would seem that the civilized and Christian nations of the world could not much longer content themselves with vain protests and appeals.—Christian Intelligencer.

Another Parsonage Burned.

On the twenty-fourth the parsonage at Vancleave, Miss., was burned, the fire originating in a defective flue. Almost the entire contents of the building were also consumed. The pastor, Bro. J. G. Sibley, and his family are left almost entirely destitute of clothing. Bro. Sibley's library also was for the most part destroyed. This is the second time Bro. Sibley has been burned out in six years. We make the same appeal in his behalf that we made last week in behalf of Bro. Ellis. An application of the golden rule is in order. Bro. Sibley's address is Vancleave, Miss.

The Uses of Discontent.

The word "contentment" is an offense to some because it suggests poverty of wants and sluggishness. To use the term in a restricted sense, a contented man is a sluggard who in unaspiring ignorance walks in the rut which his forefathers made. There is undoubtedly a kind of contentment which is the companion of conservatism, the enemy of all innovation and true progress. It was this unprofitable kind of contentment that Henry Ward Beecher condemned when he said: "If a man has come to that point where he is content, he ought to be put in his coffin; for a contented live man is a shame." If to be content means to be satisfied with our surroundings, so that we make no effort to improve them; if it means a feeling of complacency with reference to our mental and spiritual condition, from such a state we pray to be delivered. So long as there is room for improvement in any direction, whether it be in ploughing a furrow, preparing a lesson, sweeping a room, teaching the young, preaching the gospel, or controlling one's temper, feelings of self-satisfaction are out of place.

It is bad business policy as well as poor Christianity to endure evils that may be corrected or abolished. Every inventor is, in a certain sense, a discontented man, who seeks a better way of doing things. The eccentric rod, so essential to the steam engine, was the invention of an ingenious boy who got tired of attending to the valves. For centuries men living in cold climates had their eyes almost put out by smoke for which no way of escape was provided, until some restless fellow devised something like the modern chimney.

In reading history we often wonder how the common people were so long content to undergo grievous wrongs and oppression and discomforts almost innumerable. The record of advancing civilization is but the record of increasing discontent. Every great reform is the result of disaffection. The more men think for themselves, the more dissatisfied they become with bad, but remediable conditions. Knowledge and reason make us free. After Commodore Perry had taught the Barbary pirates a lesson, Americans as well as Europeans wondered why they had suffered the grievance so long.

Not many years hence the Christians of this land will look back in amazement at our patient endurance of and indifference toward the infamous liquor traffic, which has destroyed more men than war, pestilence and famine combined. It doth astonish us that professing Christians in some cities and towns manifest so little interest in putting down this monster iniquity. We may rest assured that neither the saloon nor the gambling evil nor cancerous social impurity will disappear from our midst so long as we are content to let things be as they are. Let discontent with everything that is evil rage like a fire among us, and then we will show ourselves to be true and worthy successors to the early Christians, who were opprobiously called "world-over-turners."

The Insignificance of Place.

Some men boast of the fact that they first saw the light in a palace or in a far-famed mansion. What human being, if he had his choice, would select a manger for his cradle? The majority of mankind would undoubtedly esteem it a disgrace to have been born in such a place as Jesus was. But God honored Bethlehem, the least among the cities of Judah, by making it the birthplace of his only-begotten Son. Evidently he meant by the circumstances and place of Christ's birth to teach us to attach little importance to environment. Truly, God's ways are not our ways. It matters little where we are and how we are circumstanced, if the light of God's love shines into our hearts.

When we remember that Lincoln and Garfield were both born in log cabins, that Whitefield was a child of poverty, that Moses was cradled in an ark of bulrushes, and that the Savior of the world was born in a stall among the cattle, because there was no room for him in the inn, surely we can not afford to think meanly of children reared, not in the lap of luxury, but amid want and privation. In truth, the world's greatest heroes and geniuses have almost, without exception, come from humble homes.

The significance of a city or a village depends, not upon the size, magnificence, and number of its buildings, nor upon the magnitude of its population, but upon the character and attainments of the people who dwell there. Athens, in her palmiest days, was but a pygmy in comparison with some of our modern cities; yet she left an impress upon cizilization that abides today. Stratford-on-Avon, though a modest little village, is known throughout the civilized world as the birthplace of Shakespeare. The Island of St. Helena, though a mere speck in the sea, will be remembered for ages as the place of Napoleon's exile. St. John was on the rocky and barren Isle of Patmos when he wrote the book of Revelation, and thus this smallest among the Ægean isles has been immortalized. A certain poet has written with some show of truth:

"Seven ancient cities claimed the Homer dead
Through which the living Homer begged his bread."

It is not place that honors man, but man the place. Claims to greatness and public esteem, based upon ancestral glory and noble birth, are being heeded less and less in proportion as men learn what constitutes true manhood. "What have you done?" "What can you do?" are now the searching questions put to those who aspire to places in the temple of Fame.

An Educational Mass Meeting in New Orleans.

On the recommendation of its Board of Education the Louisiana Conference, at its last session, appointed Dr. C. W. Carter financial agent of Centenary College. The Doctor made the first speech of the new campaign at Carondelet Street Church last Sunday night. He addressed a mass meeting of New Orleans Methodism, the usual services in the churches being omitted. The address was a very able one. A large part of it was on Christian education. He showed that education, in the proper sense of the word, means the careful training and development of the moral as well as the physical and intellectual powers, and that this can be best achieved through the instrumentality of institutions under ecclesiastical control. His argument on this point, it seems to us, ought to carry conviction to every unbiased mind. He then made a plea for Centenary. He spoke of its glorious record; of the large number of its alumni to be found in all the walks of life; of their vast influence for good not only in church circles, but also in the various spheres of secular life. He showed that the present able faculty of the college are receiving only about half what their services are worth — half what they can get elsewhere—and made an appeal for financial aid. The special work to which he is addressing himself at present is the endowment of a chair, for which purpose $25,000 will be needed. This he hopes to do during the present year. As this is the only boy's college owned by the Methodists of Louisiana, he thinks this sum ought to be raised without difficulty.

We hope the pastors throughout Louisiana will heartily cooperate with Dr. Carter in this matter. Let them correspond with him with reference to visiting their charges on this mission. This is a matter of vital importance to Methodism in Louisiana. No pastor can afford to be indifferent on this subject.

Appeal of the Evangelical Alliance to the United States.

Notwithstanding the Turk's atrocious edict against the contemplated humane work of the Red Cross Society in behalf of the suffering Armenians, we want the following call to be known.

To the Churches of America:

The Turkish threat to wipe out Armenia in Armenian blood is being fulfilled, and fire and sword have prepared the way for famine. Husbands and fathers have been murdered, homes pillaged and burned, crops destroyed, and flocks and herds slaughtered. Stripped even of their clothes, shelterless women and children have been left to freeze and starve. Before aid can reach remote and mountainous districts, even with our best endeavors, many must perish. One of the most trustworthy authorities in Turkey writes: "Four hundred thousand Armenians are facing the alternative of starvation or conversion to Islam."

Such misery appeals to every one in the name of our common humanity, but since Armenians have suffered as Christians, they have special claims upon the sympathy and beneficence of the churches. Moreover, the distress in Turkey peculiarly appeals to us as Americans, because the perils and destitution of Armenians are shared by missionaries who are our own fellow-citizens.

The Evangelical Alliance for the United States therefore calls upon the Christian Churches of America to minister to the relief of their Armenian brethren. To meet instant necessities the National Committee should be enabled to cable large sums of money immediately. When thousands are starving, every day lost in sending relief lengthens the death list.

It is, therefore, earnestly urged that every church make an offering for this object during the month of January. Money may be sent to Brown Bros. & Co., treasurer of the National Armenian Relief Committee. Correspondence in reference to this work may be addressed to the committee, 45 William street, New York City. The administration of relief will be undertaken by the American Red Cross Society.

In behalf of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States.

STUDIES IN THE GREEK NEW TESTAMENT. By Richard M. Smith, M. A., Ph.D. 12 mo, 163 pages. Cloth, 50 cents. 1895. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This little volume from the pen of Dr. Smith, who, for ten years, was professor of classical and New Testament Greek in Randolph-Macon College (Va.), is the product of devout study and ripe scholarship. Students and teachers of Greek will find in it much that is helpful as well as suggestive. Its perusal is sure to stimulate interest in reading the New Testament in Greek. A clear understanding of the different shades of meaning attaching to individual words in the original often throws more light upon a passage than the elaborate explanations of some learned commentator. The author does not aim to treat the subject exhaustively, but has selected a number of words, passages and idioms commonly misunderstood, or, at least, obscure, and by his felicitous comments made them glow with significance and beauty. The reader of this book will gain much valuable knowledge as to customs, historical events, and the state of civilization during the time of Christ.

Merely English readers, as well as those versed in Greek, will find this to be an intensely interesting and profitable volume. In chapter V., titled "Witness from Without," the author quotes some celebrated passages from Herodotus, Strabo, and others, which help greatly to illuminate the sacred narrative. The concluding chapter gives the names and enumerates the advantages of the helps used in preparing the volume in hand. We hope the book will have the wide circulation it deserves.

THINKING, FEELING, DOING. A Popular Psychology. By Prof. E. W. Scripture, Director of the Psychological Laboratory, Yale University. 12 mo, cloth, illustrated, $1.

In the production of this volume the first attempt is made to present in a popular way the results of the new psychology. All technical terms have so far as possible been avoided. The story of how the senses make reports to the brain, of the various methods which the new psychologists employ to test the senses and fundamental laws of the mind, are presented in a simple, direct, and concrete way. The book is filled with pictures illustrating the apparatus used in testing the senses, charts and diagrams illustrating various optical illusions, and other matter bearing on the subject in various ways. It is confidently expected that this book will open to the average reader a most fascinating subject, from which he has heretofore been excluded by technical and difficult terms.

Died in the Pulpit.

The following Associated Press dispatch will be read with profound sorrow throughout the North Mississippi Conference:

Coldwater, Miss., Jan. 26.—Rev. T. B. Hargrove dropped dead here to-day in the midst of his sermon. Death was due to heart failure. The minister was repeating the words, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and ye shall be saved." He began, "Believe in the Lord———. Believe in the Lord Jesus and be saved." As he uttered the last word he exclaimed: "Oh!" turned partly around and fell. There were physicians in the house who went at once to the prostrate man's assistance, but life was extinct.

The Rev. Mr. Hargrove was well-known in the South.

Bishop Haygood was a good teacher and college president, a wise almoner of the Slater funds, and did excellent service when he finally became a Bishop. To the Preachers of the Patronizing Conferences.

In keeping with our motto, "Better and better," we make the following offers: (1) To the preacher who sends us the largest number of new cash subscribers at the regular rate between now and the first of July we will present a handsome parlor organ catalogued at $225. (2) To the preacher sending us the second largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present either a handsome gold-filled watch, guaranteed to be a perfect time-keeper, and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, or an Arlington B Sewing Machine, whichever may be preferred. (3) To the preacher sending the third largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, the same described in our offer elsewhere.

Notice that these are to be cash subscriptions at the regular rate. No commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Then, every unsuccessful competitor will have his commissions returned to him in cash.

Brethren, here is a chance to help yourselves at the same time that you help your Conference organ; and also render a service of incalculable value to the people whom you serve. If any brother does not need an organ, that need not prevent his entering the list, as the organ can be sold. Should the successful competitor wish to convert his organ into money, we will advertise it for him two months, free of charge. Those who wish to compete for this premium should notify us at once.

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

Don't Skip This.

Let our subscribers take note of the fact that we are now offering the Holman Bible in three styles at $1.50, $1.65 and $2 45. The Bible heretofore sold at $1.65 is now sold at $1.75; but we handle another in smaller type at $1.50. Read our offer.

Our Own Missionaries.

At the last session of our Annual Conference we had Rev. Walter B. Nance, a missionary to China, whose traveling expenses and salary is paid by the Shreveport Church for one year. This church, after paying its entire assessment for missions, contributed an additional sum sufficient for that purpose. This act of liberality by the Shreveport Church should provoke others to greater activity and larger giving to the cause of missions.

Bro. Nance, by his genial presence, modest Christian manner, won our hearts, and by his forceful and appropriate presentation of the cause and claims of missions challenged our admiration and impressed us with the fact that he ably and well represented the church that supports and the Board that appoints him.

The Conference Board of Missions, with the consent of Bishop Hargrove, established a mission among the French-speaking people of South Louisiana, and appointed Rev. H. W. Waltace as a missionary. We wish to emphasize the importance of this work, among the needy and spiritually destitute of our State. We trust that this missionary movement will result in great good, leading many from superstition and the power of sin and Satan unto God. J. D. HARPER,
Pres. La. Conf. Bd. of Missions.

Dr. West at Bolton

PUT IN A GOOD WORD FOR MILLSAPS COLLEGE AND THE METHODIST CHURCH.

Dr. West preached for us at Bolton last Sunday, and lectured on the "Weakness of the Homan Judgment," Sunday night. We certainly enjoyed his visit.

His sermon Sunday, at 11 A. M., was pleasing and very helpful; he doesn't preach like anybody I ever heard; he preaches so easy and holds your attention from beginning to end.

His lecture on education was still more enjoyed. Dr. Cooper was right in calling him a bound copy of Sam Jones. His lecture was as chaste as the morning dew, sparkling as the dew drop with wit and humor, and pointed withal. He is the right man for agent of Millsaps College. He says he had rather have his three boys there than anywhere on earth, and he knows the surroundings of Millsaps College about as well as anybody.

He says that Congress Street Church which most of the students attend, is, in his opinion, in as fine condition spiritually as any church in the State of its size. I have not heard that before, but the Doctor has good opportunities to know.—Clarion Ledger.

Keep a bottle of MUL-EN-OL where you can quickly reach it, in case of emergency. Perhaps it will save a doctor's bill.

Notice.

To the Brethren of the Louisiana Conference:

Since my appointment as your colporteur I have made arrangements to fill orders for publications from every source, and can offer you same terms given by our house at Nashville, or any other publishing house. As yet I have no stock on hand, but am prepared to have your orders filled at short notice and sent to you direct. For the present direct all orders to No. 1014 Tchoupitoulas street, New Orleans, La. I want to add that I am also ready and willing to assist any of the brethren in revival meetings if arranged for in time. I shall endeavor to visit quite a number of circuits and stations during the year in the interest of the work, and hope the brethren will give me their hearty co-operation.

Yours in the work,

What a Woman Can Do.

Last week I cleared, after paying all expenses, $55.45, the month previous, $260, and have at the same time attended to other duties. I believe any energetic person can do equally as well, as I have had very little experience. The Dish Washer is just lovely and every family wants one, which makes selling very easy. I do no canvassing. People hear about the Dish Washer and come or send for one. It is strange that a good, cheap Dish Washer had never before been put on the market. The Mound City Dish Washer fills this bill. With it you can wash and dry the dishes for a family of ten in two minutes without wetting your hands. As soon as people see the Washer work they want one. You can make more money and make it quicker than with any household article on the market. I feel convinced that any lady or gentleman can make from $10 to $14 per day around home. You can get full particulars by addressing, THE MOUND CITY DISH WASHER CO., St. Louis, Mo. They help you get started, then you can make money awful fast.

Rev. T. L. Mellen.

CONFERENCE SECRETARY OF OUR BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference, at its late session, elected Rev. T. L. Mellen, of Wesson, Miss., Conference secretary. We appropriate only $25 to defray his expenses. This will not much more than pay for stationery and postage in the discharge of his duties. It would be greatly to the interest of our Board if Bro. Mellen could visit all our District Conferences, and many other places within our bounds, in his official capacity. Will you allow a suggestion? Send for him, and pay his traveling expenses, and he will do you good. We need to move out more aggressively in our missionary work this year. W. B. LEWIS,
Pres. Conf. Bd. of Missions.

A GREAT CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Mr. Editor:—I read how Mr. Jones made $15 a week. I have a better job taking orders for the new specialties and fancy articles in aluminum, rein hooks and rings for harness, sign letters and figures for horses, stores and vehicles. They are simply elegant, shine at night: aluminum is a great talker. I sell for World Mfg. Co., Columbus, O.; they make family fireproof cases, electric goods and many good sellers for agents. I made $27.6 a week, $39 second, first month $17. Goods are catchy; good, honest, firm, light, easy work; anyone can get a job by writing them. J. EVANS.

Pentecostal Meetings.

By invitation of E. A. Vail and H. Bain, superintendents of the Union Gospel Mission near Keller's Market, the undersigned will conduct special gospel meetings, beginning at 10 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. daily. Christian workers will receive a cordial welcome. All are invited to attend, especially the unconverted. Come expecting the pardon of sin and the fullness of the sanctifying Spirit. Already the Lord is sending "showers of blessing."

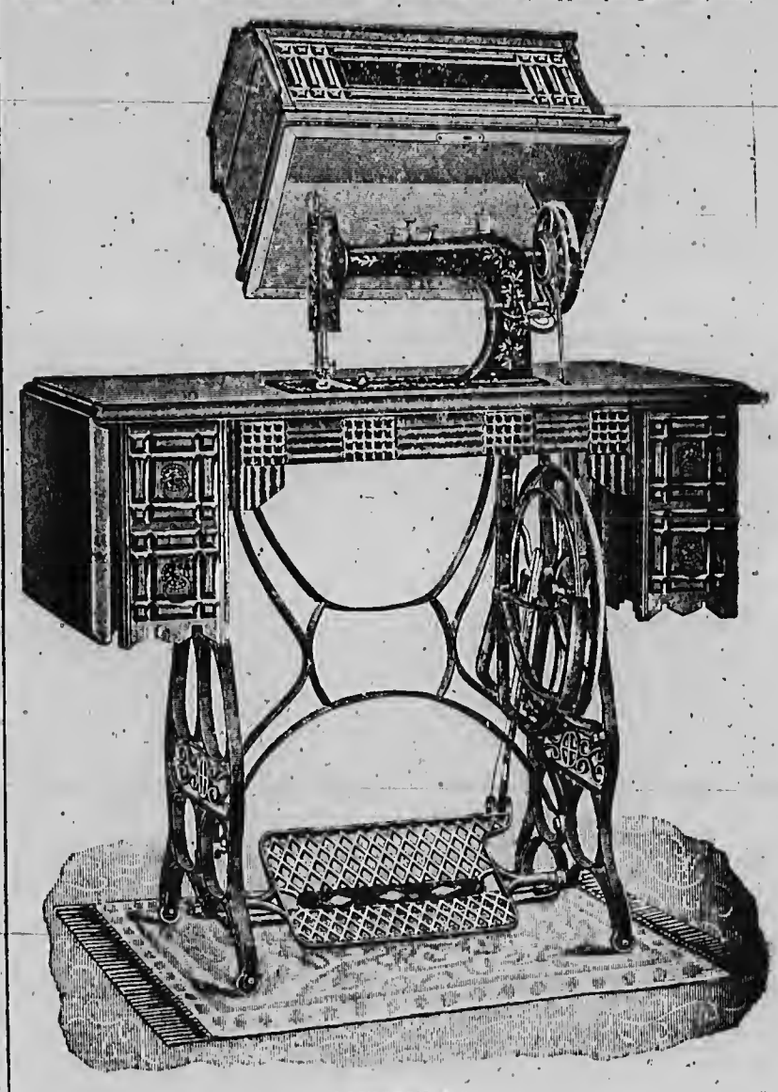
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot gemmer, one screw-driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

REST.

Too little rest—too little sleep!
Too many hours to sow and reap!
At last disease and pain!
Weak grows the never-loosened hand;
The strongest rope parts strand by strand
Beneath a ceaseless strain.

Let him who burns his midnight oil
In lonesome and unwholesome toil,
Think when he trims his lamp,
That thus he trims his life as well,
And hastens towards his last low cell:
Its darkness and its damp.

To weary feet all streams are deep,
All roads are rough, all hills are steep;
As way-worn travelers know,
One hour of rest's a precious boon,
For him who toils through heats of noon,
With painful steps and slow.

Then ye, who hope to make your mark,
Ere your last night fall cold and dark;
And stand above the throng,
On lar sun-kissed height of thought;
Or do some deed no hand hath wrought!
Work! Rest! and so be strong.

The Art of Being Disagreeable.

This is an art which some people acquire much more readily than others, being materially aided in their efforts by a native narrowness and meanness of disposition. But there is no reason why a man of ordinary gifts should not, with due attention to a few simple directions, make himself very speedily an object of aversion to all his acquaintances. If anyone of our readers is aiming at that end, we have a little advice which we offer him free of all charge.

1. Let him lay it down as a fixed rule that he will not allow himself to bestow even moderate praise upon the good deeds that are done under his observation. This rule rests upon the theory that virtue is its own reward, and that noble conduct deserves no special recognition. A collateral and kindred principle is that the desire for human approval, however restrained it may be, is always a sign of moral weakness, and ought not to be humored in the smallest measure.

2. Let him be equally resolute to criticise, with such sharpness of speech as he is able, all the faults and shortcomings of his friends and companions. It is well if he learns to make no discrimination between gross wrongdoing on the one hand and mere defects and infirmities on the other. A lively imagination, working in conjunction with a suspicious temper, will also be often helpful to him in conjuring up grounds of censure where none really exist.

3. Inasmuch as he knows that he himself is never controlled by lofty or magnanimous motives, let him take it for granted that everybody else is in the same condition. Why should he suppose that other folks are better than himself? Is not every man the measure of his own universe? The habit of sneering whenever disinterested benevolence is suggested as the possible ground of given actions, is of prime importance in this connection.

4. Let him exact with a miser's care all the service that can possibly be construed as belonging to him, receiving it always as a matter of right, and never as a matter of courtesy or kindness; and at the same time let him dole out, as if he were afraid of being reckoned a spendthrift, the meagre attention that he may choose to give in return.

5. Let him show his worst side to those that have the most sacred claims upon him, reserving any thoughtfulness and pleasantness, if he have any, for those who do not stand close to him, and who will not appreciate in the slightest degree the things that he may do to conciliate their good-will.

By faithfully following these directions, he will succeed in alienating his friends, in repelling all those whom he might have won, and in making himself an object of universal dislike. A few faithful souls may cling to him longer than the rest; but even they will at last be worn out with his infinite pettiness, and will give him up to the devices and desires of his heart. Nothing will be left him but a morbid egotism, a dark and cheerless old age, and six feet of ground over which no honest tear will ever be shed.—Selected.

A Daughter's Part at Home.

One of the sweetest things a girl can do is to receive friends graciously, particularly at home. In one's own house a cordial manner is peculiarly fitting. Do not stand off in the middle of the room and bow coldly and formally to the friend who has called. Walk over to meet her; give her your hand, and say pleasantly that you are very glad to see her again. Stiff, cold and formal ways of greeting acquaintances are not proper in a girl welcoming guests to her father's house. A daughter's part is to assist her mother on every social occasion. The girl pours the tea in her mother's drawing-room when friends drop in at five o'clock. Quite often, when no maid is present, she help the guests to the sandwiches and the cakes which are served at five o'clock tea, and herself hands the cups, and takes them from the guest who would like to be relieved.

Apart from and more important even than her manner to a guest who happens in for an hour or a day, is the manner of a daughter to her father and mother. The father returns to his home after a wearying day at business. He is tired in body and mind. Coming back, as his latch-key turns in the home door he throws off care; he is joyous at the thought of the dear ones he will meet after hours of absence. His young daughter, in a pretty gown, with the bloom and freshness only girlhood wears, should be ready to give him the attentions he loves—the kiss, the cheery word—to help her mother and the rest in letting her father see how much he is loved at home. Men give up a great deal for their families—their time, their strength, the knowledge they have gained in life's experiences—they spend everything freely for their home's sake, and the home should pay its debt in much outspoken love.—Harper's Round Table.

Bereavement forces the soul to recognize its destiny. Tears are sometimes telescopes with which other worlds are viewed. Aching hearts feel their helplessness and then call on God for the comfort that is not within reach. They see visions, have revelations, and doors are opened the key to which is forged out of some grief. The ties of earth are loosened that we may be bound by stronger cords to heaven. The cruelty of death imbues us with a longing for immortality. The surgeon cuts in order to save the body, and when it is all over we bless the knife. God wounds because a wounded soul needs sympathy and consolation, and can only find them in thoughts of another life.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, in "Herald Sermons."

The terrible evil of the saloon is illustrated in the statement of the owner of a costly and attractive building, formerly used as a saloon in New York City, but who has gone out of the dreadful business. The statement comes to us with apparent accredited authority: "I have sold liquor," said Mr. ——, "for eleven years—long enough for me to see the beginning and ending of its effects. I have seen a man take his first glass of liquor in my place, and afterward fill the grave of a suicide. I have seen man after man, wealthy and educated, come into my saloon who can not now buy his dinner. I can recall twenty customers worth from $100,000 to $600,000, who are now without money, place, or friends."

Advice to Young Men.

"Say, young man, there is one thing you can not do. You can't make a success of life unless you work. Better men than you have tried it and failed. You can't loaf around street corners and saloons, smoke cigars, tell foul stories, drink whisky, sponge on some one else without a failure in life. You must learn a trade, or get in some honorable business. If you don't, you will be a chronic loafer, despised by all, producing nothing—simply making yourself a burden on your parents or on the State. There is no place in the world to-day for loafers. The ripe fruit is at the top of the tree. You must climb to get it. If you wait for it to fall at your feet, you will never get it. Smart men will jump up and pluck it all. Move. Do something, no matter how small. It will be a start. Help yourself, and others will help you. There is no royal path to success. Toil, grit, endurance—these are the requisites. Wake up and see what you can do."

A more serious truth could not be uttered than the above, and it is one that every boy and young man should seriously consider. The hardest, most miserable, and most unsatisfactory of all conditions outside of the penitentiary is that of a young man who attempts to exist without honest labor. Such a man not only loses his own self-respect and that of his neighbors, but it is a hard and disagreeable life. The laboring man's life is a paradise in comparison to his.

Rove, put your shoulder to the wheel, and if necessary your nose to the grindstone, rather than live in enervating idleness. If no work comes ready to your hand, find some and do it.—Exchange.

The Only Father.

"My father is very rich," said little Earl, as he walked by the side of his nurse. "All this land is his, and this house and stable, and the lake." "My Father is also rich," said the girl, and she looked up toward the sky and away over fields and woods. "The green fields and meadows are all his, the blue sky and the golden sun, 'the cattle on a thousand hills'—all these are his." "And who is your father?" asked Earl. "He is God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth," was the good and gentle answer. —Indian Witness.

It is high time you began to thank God for present blessings. Thank him for your children, happy, buoyant, and bounding. Praise him for your home, with its fountain of song and laughter. Adore him for morning light and evening shadow. Praise him for fresh, cool water bubbling from the rock, leaping in the cascade, soaring in the mist, falling in the shower, dashing against the rock, and dipping its hands in the tempest. Love him for the grass that cushions the earth, the clouds that curtain the sky, and the foliage that waves in the forest. Thank him for a Bible to read, and a cross to gaze upon, and a Savior to deliver.

Don't get the blues. Don't look on the cloudy side of everything. Don't be pessimistic. Don't think that the good people are all dead, nor that bad people are to be allowed to turn this world wrong side up. God reigns. His glorious cause is as dear to him as it ever can be to us. He will take care of those who trust in him and do their best. If we suffer, good may come from it. What are we living for but to get right with God and eternity, and stay so? Let us make the best of our opportunities. Be hopeful, happy and pure Work hard. Die only when you must.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy; and the two can not be separated with impunity. —Ruskin.

HYGIENE.

Large Eaters.

BY DR. DIO LEWIS.

Large eaters are generally deficient in activity and endurance. I used to know one who tried hard to be a Christian, but failed because of too much dinner. This man was a curiosity. He worked in a small wood turning shop and ate five times a day. When he consulted me about his "poor stomach," and I told him flat that "he was a pig," he replied, "You are mistaken. I am faint half the time, and have to eat extra meals to keep up my strength."

I went at him with fact and physiology. At length he was convinced, and promised that he would follow my prescription.

It was this: Take but two meals a day. For breakfast, at seven o'clock, eat a piece of beef, half as large as your hand, a slice of bread, a baked potato, with a cup of weak tea. For dinner, at one o'clock, beef or mutton, as large as your hand, with bread and potato, and other vegetables at pleasure; no dessert. Take no supper and go to bed early.

In fifteen days his faintness had disappeared, and he rapidly recovered. To day he is a healthy, active man, and a warm advocate of two meals a day, and moderate ones.

Temperate people, with good digestion, never feel their stomachs—forget they have stomachs—while these big eaters are always hungry, or faint, or bloated, or troubled with eructations or acidity, or diarrœa, or some other unhappy condition of the digestive apparatus.

All the very strong and active men I have known have been moderate eaters. It takes a large amount of nerve force to digest food. With these prodigious eaters, so much of the nerve force goes to the stomach that little is left for brain or muscle.

Persons having a good stomach to begin with, can, by practice, learn to digest an enormous quantity of food. If they give their whole force and vitality to this business of grinding grist, they can, in the course of even a short life, grind through immense quantities. But the wiser, the more human way is to find out just how much food is needed to run the machine, exactly what fuel will keep the system at the best working point, and then never pass these bounds.

For years the author had eaten three hearty meals a day. At length upon a careful consideration of the physiology of digestion he thought he was probably using too much of his force in that unction. He reduced to two meals a day. He can't tell you what freedom in mental and bodily activity he experienced.

Men with large heads and well-made bodies sometimes consume so much of their nerve force in digestion that they have nothing left with which to achieve those triumphs that, otherwise, would be easy to them.—Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SWEET RUSK.—One pint of warm milk, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cake of compressed yeast. Make a sponge with the milk, yeast, and flour enough for a thin batter. Let this rise over night; in the morning add the butter, eggs, sugar (well beaten together), then salt, and flour enough to make a soft dough; mould with the hands into balls and let them rise very light, then bake.

POTATO CROQUETTES.—Take a pint of mashed boiled potatoes, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, half a teacupful of thick cream, a teaspoonful of butter, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, and a little grated nutmeg. Mix, and turn into a frying-pan, stir over the fire until thick and smooth, take off, spread on a dish to cool. When firm, form into croquettes; roll first in beaten egg, then in grated bread crumbs, and fry in boiling fat.—Harper's Bazar.

Only in the sacredness of inward silence does the soul truly meet the secret hiding God. The strength of resolve, which afterwards shapes life and mixes itself with action, is the fruit of those sacred, solitary moments when we meet God alone.—F. W. Robertson.

OBITUARIES.

LEWIS—Mrs. KISIAH LEWIS, eldest daughter of J. L. and Narcisse Lamkin, wee horn in Alabame, Aog. 21, 1831 When a child she, with her parents, oeme to Mississippi, and settled on Magee's Creek, near Tylertown. Her father died in Holmeeville in 1875. On Feb. 25, 1846, she wes married to Barney Lewis, eldest son of Qolnoa and Mertha Lewis The early part of her merried life was spent in and near Holmesville, Miss., where her husband published a paper called "The True Southern." In December, 1855, she, with her family, moved to Leake county, where they lived until the close of the Confederate War. They then moved to Brookhaven, thence to Crystal Springs, Miss., where her husband died in Decemher, 1874. She then moved to Wesson with seven of her children, where she lived several years, and succeeded in raising and edocating her children with credit to herself. A few yaers ago she moved to Dayton, thence to Rosetta Miss., where she died in peaca, Nov. 23, 1895, leaving seven children and meny grandchildren to mourn her death.

In January, 1875, I officiated at her father's funeral. Ahout the same time I wrote her husband's ohituary. In Augnst, last, I, assisted by Bro. J. M. Morse, officiated at her mother's funeral. "One hy one we pees away."

Mrs. Lewis joined the Methodist Chorch in esrly life; lived a qniet, peaceahle Christian life, and died in peace sorrounded hy most of her children. She has had mnoh sorrow and deep affliction, all of which she endured patiently. Mey her children ha aver guided hy the Divine hand!

H. P. LEWIS.

RIGGS—Mrs. ALTHEA RIGGS (nee Lee) wes born Dec 23, 1827, and died at her home in Lafayette, La., Dec. 15, 1895. She was married to David Riggs shout seven years ago, with whom she lived happily until daeth. Sister Riggs joined tha M. E. Church, Sooth, while yonng. From her childhood she daeired to he a child of God, and lived to that end. She was converted at a camp meeting held at Plaqoemine Brnlee in 1857. Her conversion was very hright. She never had a doubt as to this. She always endeevored to do her daty. She loved the chorch, and delighted in serving it. She lovad her pastor and his family; did all she oould to make them comfortable and supply their wants.

As her pestor for four years, I knew her well, and always foond her true and faithful. She was a true friend, a loying sister, a devoted wife, and a faithful Christian. She was one of those sanctified, holy women that impressed thosa with whom sha associated that she had been with Jesus—yes, that she lived in constant communion with the blessed Lord. Her aim always wes to help and do good to all.

She lived and died a happy Christian. Her place will be hard to fill in the little Methodist Church in Lafayette. She leaves a husband, two sisters, with relatives and a host of friends, to mourn her death. May God sostain them by his grace, and mey they all meet in the home above!

T. S. R.

LOCKHART—ALICE CAROLINE LOCKHART was born March 17, 1864; joined the M. E. Church, Sonth, under the pastorate of Rev. M. C. Calloway, September, 1879; died Dec. 9, 1895.

For several years Alice had been afflicted, yet she was patient and sohmissive in all her sufferings. She often expressed herself as being ready and willing to depart this life at any time.

As a daughter, she wes true and obedient, and ardently devoted to all the members of the family. She so moch enjoyed attending services at God's house, hut on account of her afflictions she did not often have an opportunity. Bot when she did attend, the deep interest she manifested was a most impressive one.

On the morning of Nov. 25 she wee fearfully burned, and died from the effects two weeks later. A skilled physician and loving relatives and friends ministered to her during her illness.

God always does what is best for his children. May he comfort the bereaved ones, and help them to so live thet they may meet her in heaven!

MARY GILES HARDIN.

Westville, Miss.

McHENRY—Mrs. JANE McHENRY (nee Price), wife of Mr. J. W. McHenry, was born in Maryland, March 17, 1818, and was converted and joined the Missionary Baptist Church in 1843, and married to J. W. McHenry in February, 1847, and fell asleep in Jesos, Jan. 11, 1896.

Sister McHenry was a devout Christian, an affectionate wife and a devoted mother. For nearly thirty years she lived in Homer, La., and there she laid aside all that was mortal, and from thence her soul was translated to heaven. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," etc.

The writer has known Sister McHenry for nearly thirty years, and can truthfully say he never knew or heard aught against her Christian life or character. Though belonging to a different denomination, she loved the church of her husband, and very often went with him to his church. Indeed, but few suspected that she was a member of another communion.

She leaves an aged husband and a son and daughter; hut they will not be separated long. May the Lord bless the survivors!

THOS. J. UPTON.

Zachary, La.

BEALL—Mrs. SARAH J. BEALL, daughter of William and Elizabeth Nelson, was horn in Stewart county, Ga., June 12, 1832; died Dec. 13, 1895. Sister Beall joined the Methodist Church when quite young, and remained a faithful and loyal member till death. She was married to A. A. Beall, 1849, who fell on sleep, 1867. She moved to Asheville, Miss., 1870, and here she sleeps with father, mother and other loved ones.

It was her happy lot to see her children—a son and two daughters—gathered into her church, and, with the help of her life, precepts and character, she will, hy the grace of God, gather them together in the church triumphant.

Death had no terrors for Sister Beall, bot came as a herald of eternal rest. Her last words were triomphant; she had glimpses of the home "over the river." May God help us all to join her in the roll call up yonder!

B. P. PATTERSON.

JOHNSON—Died, Nov. 30, 1895, at her sister's home (Mrs. T. S. Draughty), Miss ANNIE JOHNSON, tho daughter of L. A. and P. J. Johnson, Beef River. Her mother was a native of Rapides perish—one of the oldest families. Annie was baptized in Wall Street Church, Natchez.

Annie's mind was clooded from infancy from a spell of fever. The mist cleared awey, her eyes opened to the beautiful world beyond. She was ready, willing to die. She folded her hands upon her breast and sweetly fell asleep in Jesos. One who loved her,

L. L. C.

PIGOTT—ROSA ANNETTE, little daughter of O. A. and M. L. Pigott, was born April 6, 1895; died Dec. 21, aged eight months and fifteen days.

Little Rosa was a sweet little babe. The Lord saw fit to take her to himself. May the father and mother find consolation in God's grace, through which they may meet their little one in glory!

Good Men in Politics.

The churches in this country are in danger of playing the role of antagonist to the general government while they profess loyalty. Many ministers, and not a few prominent laymen, seem to have lost all respect for our present political methods. They claim that it is a sacrifice of one's good name to enter political life; that no man can become a legislator, use political machinery, represent his fellow citizens in the National Congress, and breathe the air of Washington political life, without being contaminated,—soiled, and spoiled for any work of moral reform or Christian activity thereafter. It is an admission that politics is so intensely demoralizing that the average Christian character now building in the church can not stand up against it. This logic teaches us that good men should keep out of politics; have nothing to do with it. We should hand our legislation over to men of weak conscience and damaged character. Besides, it is an insinuation that men in our public service are of a doubtful reputation.

It is a dangerous tendency when our best people are at variance with our legislators; when Christian men in all political organizations prefer a prayer meeting always to a caucus; when they do not assert themselves in party politics, but leave party management to men who adopt methods which do violence to a good conscience. How shall we secure wholesome laws if good men cry down the character of their law-makers, and stand at the door-way of political parties to conneel men of character to keep out of politics? How shall the public service be improved? Where is there any room to hope for a better order of things? . . .

No man is too good for the public service; but this is just what the Christian church does not seem to believe, and that, too, while the pulpits semi-occasionally, and especially on Thanksgiving Days, thunder against the evils of the government. To have justice and equity in our laws, we must have law-makers who "do justly and love mercy." We say these things not of one, but of all political parties.—The Chautauquan.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Small Things.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach or an orange tree does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of sunsoil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons is impossible. A man can be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fibre of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."—The Examiner.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to February, '97. (A little later it will be March, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2.45.

Mrs. Anna R. Aspinwall, of Pittsburg, who died in Scotland recently, left her entire fortune, estimated at $3,000,000 to the hospitals of the Episcopal Church in Philadelphia. Her niece will contest the will.

In a heavy fog, with the wind in the northeast, and the surf running far up the beach, last week, the new American Line steamship "St. Paul," bound in, went ashore in front of the Grand View House, Long Branch, N. J. All of the 700 passengers were transferred to land.

The City Council last week, by a majority vote, adopted resolutions protesting against the passage of any act by Congress to include the wharves and landings at Chalmette in the limits of the port of New Orleans, on the ground that such act would be detrimental to the interests of the people of New Orleans.

The ban placed by the Catholic Church upon the orders of the Knights of Pythias, Sons of Temperance and Odd Fellows is absolute and offers no further discussion. This is the mandate of the Pope through his official representative, Cardinal Satolli. The three orders named have a Roman Catholic membership in round numbers of nearly a hundred thousand.

Owing to the energetic representations of United States Minister Terrell, Miss Barton and her party will be permitted by the Turkish government to distribute relief to the distressed Armenians, although the Red Cross itself will not figure in the work.

The latest advices from Eastern Turkey not only seem to show that the responsibility for the slaughter, burning and plundering of Armenians there rests upon the Turkish authorities, but correspondents writing from Asia Minor also assert that Mustafa Pasha himself, the commanding general at Karpool, shared in the plunder.

Numerous reports have been received of skirmishes, indicating unusual activity on both sides in Havana province. Detailed reports are also coming in of General Luque's operations in Pinar del Rio province against Maceo. Almost continuous fighting for three days is said to have resulted in the retreat of Maceo's forces, 5,000 strong.

The outlook in England to the speedy settlement of the dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, regarding the boundaries of British Guiana, is now looked upon as being much more hopeful. But whether the settlement will be arrived at with Venezuela direct or by means of arbitration, still seems to be an unsettled question, although nobody anticipates any further serious trouble in connection with the dispute.

A project is now being seriously considered by the Emperor and the Cabinet providing for a formidable increase of the German navy. It is well known that the Emperor has long wished to do this, but the refusal of the Reichstag to vote the necessary funds has rendered the scheme impossible up to the present. Recent events, however, especially the attitude of Great Britain towards Germany, have ripened the plan to accomplish an extension of the navy without the grant of large sums of money by the Reichstag.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHRIST'S WAYS OF WINNING SOULS: BY PERSONAL WORK.

1. Of all professions and avocations, the ministry of the gospel is the noblest of all.

(1) Suffering mankind appreciates the medical profession. It has been created by the necessities of life. A good family physician a great boon.

(2) In this world of conflicting interests and pecuniary complications, the legal profession a blessing. Are indebted to same.

(3) We like the farmer's employ. Produces food from the unwilling soil. Natural, he is led to commune with nature's God.

(4) All hail to the mechanic! Civilization vastly indebted to him. Builds our houses, bridges, ships, and railroads. Honor him.

(5) But superior to all is the ministry of the gospel. Teaches to find happiness here and happiness evermore.

2. In soul-winning Christ is our beloved Exemplar.

(1) Was always about his Father's business. Not a man of leisure. Did not waste his energies by engaging in pursuits foreign to his holy mission.

(2) Was always earnest, serious. Turned his back on hilarity and merriment. Tears often coursed down his wan cheeks.

(3) His discourses engaged head and heart. Knew that reaching either separately is wastage of effort. His sermons direct, brief, practical. His parables inimitable.

3. The four instances set forth in our lesson explain the Master's method of winning souls.

(1) In plain speech he told timid, honest, but metaphysically morbid Nicodemus, that man must be born again.

(2) To the Samaritan woman, a lone bearer, he preached one of his best sermons. Did not require large audiences for inspiration.

(3) The rich young man left him with a sharp arrow in his breast, having been told that the idolatrous love of his money interfered with his soul's salvation.

(4) Zacchæus was won by immediate words of cheer. The Master recognized in him one who was already disgusted with the life of sin. He was not far from the kingdom of God. The Master was to him a helpful guide to reach that kingdom.

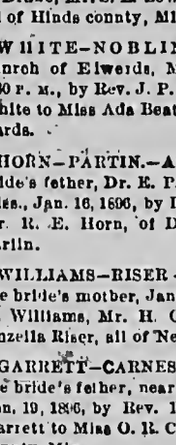
Timely Warning.



The great success of the chocolate preparations of the house of Walter Baker & Co. (established in 1780) has led to the placing on the market many misleading and unscrupulous imitations of their name, labels, and wrappers. Walter Baker & Co. are the oldest and largest manufacturers of pure and high-grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent. No chemicals are used in their manufactures.

Consumers should ask for, and be sure that they get, the genuine Walter Baker & Co.'s goods.

ON THE OTHER SIDE.

We go our ways in life too much alone,
We hold ourselves too far from all our kind;
Too often we are dead to sigh and moan,
Too often to the weak and helpless blind;
Too often where distress and want abide
We turn and pass upon the other side.

The other side is trodden smooth and worn
By footsteps passing idly all the days
Where lie the bruised ones that faint and mourn
Is seldom more than an untrodden way;
Our selfish hearts are for our feet the guide—
They lead us by upon the other side.

It should be ours the oil and wine to pour
Into the bleeding wounds of stricken ones;
To take the smitten and the sick and sore,
And hear them where a stream of blessing runs.
Instead, we look about—the way is wide—
And so we pass upon the other side.

O friends and brothers, sliding down the years,
Humanity is calling each and all
In tender accents, born of grief and tears!
I pray you, listen to the thrilling call!
You can not, in your cold and selfish pride,
Pass guiltlessly upon the other side.

Belle Kearney in Ireland.

I arrived in the quaint village of Killarney after dusk. Mounting a "jaunting-car," a queer vehicle, with seats on either side of a partition that passes through the centre, on which the light baggage is put, with steps below the seats for passengers to rest their feet on, backs turned to each other, I went rattling at a John's gait throughout the streets, where squads of small boys stood at each corner, waving their hats and yelling at the top of their voices. In the uncertain light that streamed from the lamps, they looked like dervishes, or sprites, from their neighboring hills. Two happy, restful days were spent in this beautiful region, riding over smooth roads that led into an indescribably picturesque country, climbing rugged mountains or jogging through their rocky gaps on horseback, skimming over the Upper, Middle and Lower Lakes of Killarney, which stretch their placid faces at the feet of majestic Carran Tual, with its lofty head over three thousand feet above the level of the sea; the Toro, its gigantic brother, and the Purple Mountains; exploring grim, fantastic ruins on the mainland, or the islands that "lift their fronded palms in air" from the heart of the quiet waters.

A few miles from the town of Killarney are the romantic ruins of Aghadoa. This venerable old pile is the seat of an ancient bishopric. Near it is a Round Tower, which is said to be the finest in Ireland. It was founded by St. Finiar, who lived in the sixth century. On a slope beyond this are the ruins of a circular castle known as the Pulpit, or the Bishop's Chair. Legends declare that it was an episcopal residence in the twelfth century. On Innisfallen Island, which in itself is remarkably beautiful, with magnificent oaks and yews, and rich green grass, flowers and trailing vines, is the ruin of an old abbey, where the "Annals of Innisfallen" were written six hundred years ago. The original is now in the Bodleian Library. A short ride across the lake from Innisfallen brings us to Ross Island, where Ross Castle, a handsome ivy-clad ruin, is seen, commanding a superb view of this enchanting spot, with its > "Scenes that sink into the being

> Till the eyes grow full with seeing,
> And the mute heart can but bless
> Him that shaped such loveliness!"

Another fine old ruin is the Abbey of Muckross, which was built for the Franciscans in 1340. Many ancient tombs are within its crumbling walls, and its cloister is still standing. The cottage of "beautiful Kate Kearney, who lived on the banks of Killarney," rises into full view just before we reach the Gap of Dunloe. It is like all the other cottages of old Ireland—built of gray stone and covered with thatch. In the doorway stood a time-wrinkled old dame, who is the granddaughter of illustrious Kate, who, by her unusual beauty, stirred the lyric muse of the unknown bard who has made this Irish lady famous by his song. After introducing myself as an Irish-American who bore the same name as hers, and being enthusiastically greeted by old Kate with a hearty "God bless you!" and "May you have a long and happy life!" I mounted a pony and began my journey through the wild defile, five miles in length, that lies between the Torries and the MacGillicuddy range. Soon we passed Lough Dhuv, one of the three places where it is said St. Patrick killed the last of the snakes. Further on we arrived at the St. Patrick's Cottage, which is now used as a public house, where travelers stop to imbibe quantities of liquor. As Patsey, the sure-footed little gray nag on which I sat, scrambled up the mountain-sides that were covered most invitingly with purple heather, ferns, and shamrocks, a foreggy old Irishman, who owned the "beastie," plodded along by my side with a heavy stick to encourage her slow strides or lead her through dangerous parts. When we had proceeded a short distance we were besieged by a bevy of woman and girls, begging us, in their soft, whining voices, to buy their wares, which consisted of woollen socks, goat's milk, and "mountain dew." The last was a fiery white liquor made in the Black Valley, which lies at the end of the Gap of Dunloe. They presented an amusing sight as they tramped along barefooted, with heavy shawls covering their heads and folded innocently across their breasts, hiding under their voluminous proportions the stuff that has caused the flourish of more shillalies and the ache of more broken heads than anything else in the Emerald Isle. With a girl, who introduced herself as Bridget O'Sullivan, I had the following conversation as she walked demurely by Patsey's side:

"How do the people in these mountains make a living, Bridget?"

"By selling mountain dew, ma'm."

"Do you sell much of it?"

"Oh, yis, ma'm."

"When the men and women get full of it, how do they act?"

"They get into terrible fights, ma'm."

"Well, don't you think it is wrong to sell liquor to people to make them get drunk and fight?"

"I have to make a living, ma'm; we are very poor, ma'm; and the girls have to buy their marriage licenses, ma'm! The boys have no use for us if we don't, ma'm. We have to pay thirty-six shillings to the parish priest for a license. I have made nearly enough to get mine. I lack only five shillings, ma'm. Dear lady (with an accentuating of the whine) won't you take a drink of mountain dew? It will add seven years to your life, and you will help Bridget O'Sullivan to buy her marriage license."

Her tragic gestures and mailing appeals might have told on a heart less steeled to such approaches than that of a W. C. T. U. woman, who for six years has fought every species of "mountain dew" like grim death, or that of an equal rights woman who has been preaching since the first dawn of her reasoning powers against the encouragement of every form of masculine indolence or domination. From the frequency of drinks on the part of a sturdy Englishman near us I felt sure that Bridget would go home with a glad song in her heart and the ringing of marriage bells in her ears. Donkeys are in great demand in Ireland, as they are in Italy. I have often seen five people sitting in a little two-wheeled cart, with a bag of meal thrown in as ballast, all drawn by one little donkey. They are very patient animals, and seem quicker-witted than the majority of their race. This has come, doubtless, from association. Poverty is the great curse of Ireland. In every conversation with the people, complaint of their situation formed the pathetic keynote of every utterance. With a shade of sorrow now sweeping over their bright faces, they exclaim, in their musical tones: "Ah! lady, we are very poor." It is not to be wondered at that they turn their eyes longingly toward America, when the depressing circumstances that surround them in their own country are understood. The whole island is owned by a few landlords who rent to men, who in their turn sub-rent to other men. If these first renters choose not to subrent, as they often do, the people beneath them in the scale of poverty, having no land to work, and incapable of securing other employment, go to swell the vast hungry multitude. The Earl of Kildare has very handsome landed estates in the vicinity of Killarney. Hedge and meadow, field and garden, are kept in perfect order. While riding through a portion of his property one afternoon, our driver, who was a typical Irishman, somewhat advanced in years, was entertaining his passengers by explaining how the earl undertook to encourage the habits of thrift and cleanliness among his tenantry. "A woman is commissioned," he began, "to visit the homes of the people on Earl Kildare's estates and inspect the condition of their houses. She has a perfect right to enter them at any hour of the day or night. If everything is not in apple-pie condition, she reports to the manager, who is authorized to turn the negligent tenant out of doors. A person dare not call his soul his own," cried the old man, waxing furious as he proceeded. "I told the woman, when she first began her visits, that if she ever dared to step inside my house on such a spying expedition I would give her a knock on the head that would settle all reports from her until the judgment day. She has not come yet, and is not likely to come very soon." I sympathized with the old man completely. What "free-born" American would not? This police system of forced social reformation is disagreeable, truly. But there is no doubt that the Irish peasantry need lessons along the line of cleanliness. In the huts in the country districts and in towns there are no floors—only the dank earth to stand upon. In the mountain regions I have seen chickens roosting under the beds, and the space in front of the doors filled with pigs and cattle, while a large pot of boiling potatoes sat in the centre of the floor and each individual helped himself, sans fork, sans knife, sans everything. In the town of Killarney I saw a tall razor-backed hog standing in the middle of the floor of the family living-room, eating contentedly from a pail of slops, while the old lady of the house stood in the doorway conversing with her next-door neighbor, and her husband and son sat near the hearth quietly smoking.

After a short stay in Dublin on my return from Killarney I went to Belfast, which has the enterprise and appearance of a stirring American city. It possesses very little interest for an archæologist or a hero-worshipper, but is very attractive to business men and women. It is rich in elegant church edifices and educational institutions, numerous manufactories, especially of linen, and extensive ship-building yards. The suburbs, like Dublin's, are noted for their beauty. Trains carry one beyond the city limits, past handsome residences and parks, to surrounding heights, where a glorious panorama of land and water stretches before the gazer in bewildering loveliness. On one of these elevations is the castle of the Countess of Shaftesbury, who was a young Irish woman of wealth when she captured the English earl who has left a name that will be blessed by all succeeding generations of the sons of men for blessed acts of unselfish philanthropy.

The Visit of a Missionary.

The people of Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss., have been favored by an appreciated visit of one of our missionaries to China. Rev. W. B. Burk, formerly of Macon, Ga., sailed for China, as a missionary, about the first of September, 1887. After about eight years of service in the foreign field he, with his estimable wife, whom he captured from the Woman's Board of Missions about one year after going to China, returned to America on a vacation last July. We were favored with a visit and an excellent missionary lecture from Mrs. Burk several weeks ago while her husband was in Georgia, and now we have had Bro. Burk himself with us. He came to us last Saturday, the twenty-fifth instant, and in the late afternoon he gave our Sunday-school children an interesting lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views. Sunday morning he gave our Sunday-school a good talk which was much enjoyed by the children. At eleven o'clock he gave us a sermon on Heb. iii, 1, which was simple, instructive, spiritual and edifying. At night he gave us a lecture on our mission work in China, which was much enjoyed by a large congregation. His lecture was replete with interest, full of information, well calculated to remove objections to foreign missions, and to infuse new life into the missionary enterprises of the church.

Altogether we feel that we have been highly favored by this visit of our brother and of his companion from the front. Jefferson Street Sunday-school has long been a missionary society, and for many years has contributed $100 annually to the cause. We shall expect this missionary society to take on new life now, especially as arrangements have been effected by which they will hear regularly from Bro. and Sister Burk. W. B. LEWIS.

The Preaching Spirit.

The preacher needs qualification for his work. Much of this he can get from the schools, from books, and by hard study. None of these should be neglected. All of them are important. Thorough preparation is indispensable, and the preacher who does not do his best, and put forth all of the best in him, sins against God. This proposition is so simple it need not be discussed. Where facilities are afforded for preparation for this great work, young men ought to avail themselves of them, and by careful training and hard study qualify themselves for the greatest work man has to do.

It should not be forgotten, however, that in the matter of understanding and expounding the Word of God, the heart needs as much, or more, training and preparation than the head. The spiritual truth of God's Holy Word is spiritually apprehended. This truth is often hidden from the wise and educated, and clearly apprehended by the ignorant and unlearned. Their understanding—spiritual understanding—is "opened, that they may understand the Scriptures." Pastors of experience can give numbers of instances of persons well-informed, who seemed to be totally blind as to spiritual truth; also instances of persons ignorant of books, but exceedingly wise in the Word and truth of God. The Bible appeals to the heart more than to the head. It should always be remembered that "the Bible is a divinely inspired book, and, most of all, it needs a divinely inspired reader and expositor." Without this the glad, meaning and import of it will be missed. It is not to be handled, expounded and criticised as we do other books. It is a book for the soul more than for the head. It was given for soul-saving, and not for literary entertainment. When we treat the Bible and deal with it as we do with books of human production, we degrade the Word of God and dishonor him who gave it to us. In many ways we "handle the Word of God deceitfully," and thereby sin against the truth and against the God of truth.

The Holy Ghost, who inspired holy men of old to write the Word of God, is ever present to help holy men and woman of all times to understand that Word. Men do not, and can not, understand the Word without the enlightenment and help of the Spirit. This truth should be deeply impressed on the mind and heart of every student and expositor of the Scriptures. It should be remembered and pondered by every preacher of the gospel. Of himself he has no power, either natural or acquired, to understand, expound, or to apply the Word of God in its spiritual import and power. God has wisely reserved this to himself, and this he does by his Spirit, the Holy Ghost.

God has made a revelation of his will to us in human words—words that we know and understand. It would have been useless to have revealed his will in words and terms that we did not, and could not, understand. If there be a revelation at all, it must be a revelation, and not an enigma and puzzle. A Bible in the language of angels would be a sealed book among the generations of men. If God speaks to us, he must of necessity speak to us in the terms and signs of ideas, that we understand, otherwise the sound would have been without sense, so far as we are concerned. God could not mock man in this way. Any person of ordinary intelligence can understand every word in the Bible. The words are remarkably simple and pure. They are easily understood. As for the words—the letter of the text—the Bible is one of the simplest books we have. But the letter of it and the spirit of it are two essentially different things. Anybody can understand the letter of it—the words used—but none but the spiritually enlightened can lay hold of the spirit—the life-giving spirit—of this blessed Book. It is this that makes the Bible the Book of all books; just this that makes it the Word of God, expressed in human speech.

The preacher, be he learned or unlearned, needs spiritual discernment, enlightenment, spiritual understanding, that he may lay hold of the spirit of the Scriptures. This is the main thing, the soul-saving thing, in the Word of God. It is just this that makes "the Word of God quick and powerful." If this is missed or lost, preaching is vanity and foolishness. The preaching Spirit is the Holy Ghost in us. The more we have of him, the more we have of the spirit of our work. If we make room for the Holy Ghost by turning all selfishness and sin out of our hearts, and seek him, he will come in and fill us "unutterably full of glory and of God." Then we will be flames of fire in the pulpit. Then, too, the spirits of God's Word will be more to us and more to our people than all textual and verbal criticism. Before, during and after the most diligent and careful preparation of our sermons, we need to implore God to give us the Holy Ghost to enlighten, guide, and inspire us. When coming to the altar to offer the sacrifice of love so carefully prepared, we need to cry mightily to God to send down divine fire to set the offering into a holy and hallowed flame. This will give unction and power to our mission and ministry, and "the Word will have free course and be glorified" in all our congregations. A ministry filled with the Spirit can not be inefficient or powerless. Without this the pulpit will be nothing more than a lecture platform. It may afford intellectual entertainment, but its vitalizing and soul-saving power will be gone.

It might be well for all preachers, and working laymen, too, to call out and write down all the promises in God's Word in regard to the gifts of the Spirit in fullness to all them that ask him. We have not this gift, because we ask not. We do not seek it, do not long for it, do not crave it above everything else, do not agonize for it. GILDEROY.

The Universal Association, Chicago.

OBJECTS.

To interest the people in the pursuit of useful knowledge.

To bring to their homes and firesides the results of the profound study and investigation of trained specialists in the different branches taught by them in the prominent colleges and universities of the country.

To carry on the work of self-culture by individual effort, or in local centers or organizations, along the lines of Graded School, High School, or University Extension.

To bring our public schools and the higher institutions of learning into closer relationship with all classes of society, and, in turn, to stimulate the attendance of students upon them.

To aid the teachers of our public, private and parochial schools in thorough and systematic preparation for their duties.

METHOD.

Monthly lesson pamphlets (52 pages each, magazine size) have been prepared for this especial purpose by some of the most eminent university professors in our country. These lessons are beautifully illustrated, and are enriched by notes, side-lights, incidents, biographies, recent discoveries, etc.

FIRST YEAR'S WORK.

The first year is devoted to history, as a foundation, and the series of twelve monthly studies gives a comprehensive survey of the subject from the earliest times down to the present day.

ORGANIZATION FOR WORK.

Members are secured, and, if possible, organized into a "center," or group, to meet and discuss the subject of study under the leadership of one elected from their own number and known as the "local instructor." As each month's work is sub-divided into daily lessons, meetings could be held as often as the convenience of the center would allow. At the end of each course an examination is held under the supervision of the "local instructor," and certificates given in accordance with its results.

No other books are necessary to a good understanding of the subject, though, of course, works of reference are always valuable.

EXPENSES.

The entire expense for the year's course, including certificate of membership, which is unlimited, is but $3 75. The cost of future courses will be but $2.75 per set to old members.

The object of the promoters of this association is to make the expense so low that the benefits may be within the reach of all classes.

HOW TO BECOME A MEMBER.

Send your name and address, with $3.75, to the address given below, and your certificate of membership and the first lesson-pamphlet will be forwarded to you at once. The other lessons will follow at intervals of thirty days. Wherever possible, "centers" should be formed, as the opportunity for discussion such an organization affords is of the greatest value to members.

In the Living Present.

The Holy Synod of Petersburg (Orthodox Greek Church) has sent five missionaries to the United States for purposes of propaganda. What next?

In the United States, during the last year, chewing gum, valued at twenty million dollars, has been purchased. During that same time only five million dollars were contributed to foreign missions. Opponents of the Christian religion benightedly call the latter wicked wastage. But wicked wastage certainly is the former.

In the very interesting book, "France of To Day," Miss Betham Edwards does not speak complimentally of Protestantism in the land of Charlemagne. Calls it stagnant, lifeless. Its numbers only little more than a half million communicants. Only a genuine John Wesley could give life to the "dry bones."

Said a visiting patron to a college president: "You should decorate the walls of the class-rooms with expressive and instructive mottoes, such, for instance, as, Knowledge is wealth." "No use," said the wan pedagogue, "the students know that I and colleagues receive a very meagre salary."

Something new under the sun is the newly organized Training-school for Servants, in Chicago. Instruction will be theoretical and practical. The curriculum embraces cookery, housekeeping, etc. It is hoped that this enterprise will abolish the impression that the position of servant is degrading. Recently Miss Lucy Andrews lectured the students on "The servant girl's relation to her mistress."

There are one hundred and forty-nine Protestant denominations in the world. Of these, seventeen are Methodists, twelve Presbyterians, thirteen Baptists, twenty Lutherans. Little known seems to be the "Old Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Church." It has 473 churches and 12,855 communicants. Alas of the centrifugal tendencies of our race! Prejudice takes the place of judgment, and obstinacy that of principle.

What the Spanish minister of foreign affairs said about the unreliability of the news from Cuba holds also good in regard to Armenia. If all the reports of massacres in that country were true, there would be now no Armenians left to tell the tale. The complications are political. Wonder if our friends of Russia are aware of the fact that, if Armenia were absorbed by the land of Peter the Great, Protestant missions in that country would thereafter be impossible? JOH DIKM.

SHOW ME THY WAY.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Dark the night, the snow is falling;
Through the storm are voices calling;
Guides mistaken and misleading,
Far from home and help receding,
Vain is all those voices say;
Show me Thy way!

Blind am I as those that guide me;
Let me feel Thee close beside me!
Come as light into my being!
Unto me be eyes, all-seeing!
Hear my one heart's wish, I pray:
Show me Thy way!

Son of man, and Lord immortal,
Opener of the heavenly portal,
In Thee all my hope is hidden;
Never yet was soul forbidden
Near Thee, always near, to pray;
Show me Thy way!

Thou art truth's eternal morning;
Led by Thee, all evil scorning,
Through the paths of pure salvation
I shall find Thy habitation,
Whence I never more shall stray;
Show me Thy way!

Thou must lead me, and none other,
Truest Lover, Friend, and Brother;
Thou art my soul's shelter, whether
Stars gleam out or tempests gather;
In Thy presence night is day;
Show me Thy way!

Mansfield Female College.

The management of this time-honored institution changed hands on Jan. 22. Dr. A. D. McVoy's resignation, which was tendered last June, and being held up by him at request of the Board of Managers until his place could be supplied, taking effect on the date mentioned.

The election at the last Annual Conference of Prof. T. S. Sligh and his accomplished wife as president and vice-president of the college, is, doubtless, well known throughout the State. Mr. Sligh is in charge of the college for the immediate present, and will administer its affairs with her usual energy and ability until such time as President Sligh can wind up his affairs at Granbery College, Texas, over which he has presided with marked success, and giving eminent satisfaction to his patrons. These deservedly popular educators are by no means strangers in our State or community, and it is with profound satisfaction that we, not only for our home community, but for the entire Conference at well, bid them a most cordial welcome back to Louisiana, and bespeak for them and the cause they serve a most generous support at the hands of all true friends of Christian education throughout the bounds of this and adjacent States. The faculty will be composed of experienced educators of the highest order. Miss Emma Fisher, the presiding teacher, and Miss Fannie Reves, of the preparatory department, who taught with Dr. McVoy, giving perfect satisfaction, will continue in their respective capacities, to the delight of our people. While we deplore the loss of Misses Bessie and Irma McVoy as teachers in the college, we are consoled with the fact that their places will be supplied by Misses Lizzie May and Ruth Sligh, the talented and highly accomplished daughters of President and Mrs. Sligh, one of whom, Miss Ruth, has already assumed charge of the music department. Miss Lizzie May, who is still in Granbery, is expected here soon. These young ladies are, in the strictest sense of the word, college-bred, which, with their thorough conservatory training under masters of the highest proficiency, most eminently qualifies them for the duties that will devolve upon them in any department of college work. Miss Annie Williams, who will be for the present in charge of the art department, is an artist of the highest type, a member of the New York Art League, and eminently qualified for her work.

We feel that an era of renewed prosperity is just now dawning, not only upon our college, but upon our town and parish as well, and is plainly discernible in the near future. The building of the Kansas City, Shreveport and Gulf railroad through our town and parish is now being pushed to an early completion, and in a few short months two trunk line railroads will connect us with the world at large, giving us facilities at an early day that will revolutionize our old-time system; and we rejoice in the assurance that our college will be in no sense a laggard in the march of improvements now setting in upon this favored section of our country. In a short time it is our purpose to put our college buildings in first-class repair, beautify the college campus, and make the premises attractive and home-like. The sanitary condition of our college insures healthfulness. We invite all who have daughters to educate to send them to Mansfield Female College, and Sister Sligh will exercise over them a motherly watch care. The association with this cultured and refined Christian lady will be worth a great deal to your daughters. Let every Methodist preacher within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference constitute himself a committee of one to drum up girls for the college; then he will have discharged his full duty, and displayed a zeal and loyalty which should characterize the life of every Methodist preacher in the Louisiana Conference.

I trust that this appeal will not be made in vain, but that everyone interested in the success of this college will rally to its support, and make it what it ought to be: the pride of our State.

In conclusion, we want to say that the veteran educator, Dr. A. D. McVoy, who faithfully labored as president of this college for eight long years, has gone to Minden to assume the charge assigned him by the late Annual Conference. We hate to part with the Doctor and his family. Our loss will be Minden's gain. We gladly commend them to the hospitality and tender care of the good people of Minden, and congratulate them in the acquisition of so good a man, with his charming and accomplished daughters, whom to know is to love. Their multitude of friends here will ever be solicitous for their well-being.

A. F. JACKSON,
Sec'y of Board of Managers.

The Best Way and Time to Take Up a Collection.

I.—THE BEST WAY.

1. The collector must be well informed as to the nature of the collection, the purpose, and the needs. Our church papers and periodicals, and other publications easy to be had, cheap in price and rich in contents, will meet this demand.

2. He must be confident of the correctness, propriety, righteousness of the collection, so that he may put his heart into the effort. Information and religion will supply this demand.

3. He must "turn on the light" by preaching, praying, talking, tract distributing, and by contributing liberally. By word and by example. Take stock in the enterprise himself.

4. Then take up the public collection, calling for specific amounts; take time, but be sprightly, and do not let the collection drag.

5. Then send a number of collectors, with papers and pencils and collection plates, baskets, or hats, out among the congregation.

6. Then look after the absentees, and give them the privilege of subscribing or paying. Do not slight anybody. Go, expecting to get something for the Lord. Make it a pleasure, not a task.

II.—THE BEST TIME.

1. As early in the year as possible.

2. But always after having "turned on the light," and not on the day the sermon is preached on the subject or object for which the collection is taken. And then payments will be made from principle, and not from impulse.

III.—SHOULD WE TAKE THE COLLECTIONS SEPARATELY, OR ALL TOGETHER?

1. Were it not for the order of our Annual Conference requiring the collection for the Conference claimants to be taken separately on Veterans' Day, I should take them all together.

2. But as it is, I take the one seperate from all the others, and then I take the others at one time. This has been called "making hash of the collections," but to my taste it makes a very palatable "plum pudding." The Conference year is too short for all the collections to be taken separately.

3. This year I shall take the collection for the American Bible Society apart from the others.

4. Common sense, information and religion will solve all the problems and bring up full collections.

The Discussion in the Advocate.

The question now taking up one or more columns of the ADVOCATE every week may be thus stated:

Resolved, That unordained or unlicensed persons ought not to hold divine service in the churches.

The affirmative of this question caters to a feature of High Churchism. For the want of a better word just here to express myself, I will say that I am "High Church" in some things. I believe that the man who has charge of the services ought to be responsible for them. I hold also that the men who preaches has the unquestioned right to pronounce the benediction upon the congregation he has preached to. Let a layman, on no occasion, pronounce it.

I have led in Sunday-school, class meeting, prayer meeting, and love-feast exercises; conducted public preaching, held protracted meetings, and managed camp meetings. In all the variety that has come up in these varied services when the conversion of souls was directly and specially aimed at, it has been a principle with me to put those persons forward who could "get there;" to call on the man or woman for song, for prayer, or a talk, who, I thought, could best do the work then immediately in hand. The conversion of souls being the special work of God with us, every means we can use for this end is legitimate. A soul born to God under the talk of a woman would not be rejected by the councils of heaven as an illegitimate child.

Give Us a Rest.

MR. EDITOR: For some time your correspondents have been waging a war of words, the casus belli being the action of a young preacher, in charge of a certain camp meeting, who, in simple violation of law, unthoughtedly or otherwise, undertook to turn over to some one else his own responsibility as preacher in charge. And, after all, what does it amount to? Each one seeking only to vindicate himself. Brethren! brethren! Please read the exhortation of Paul in II. Tim. ii, 14, and give us a rest.

Malone College, Holly Springs.

After a successful management of five years, the Rev. J. W. Honnoll will retire from the presidency of the above institution at the close of the present term, and will be succeeded by the Rev. R. M. Standifer, at present pastor of our church in Columbus, Miss. Bro. Standifer and Dr. S. A. Steel have purchased an interest in the college, and propose to enlarge the buildings, or erect new ones, and make Malone College second to none in the South. Dr. Steel will deliver a course of lectures each session. It is expected that 150 boarding pupils will be in attendance at the opening of the next term.

Holly Springs is proud of her school, and rejoices at the good work accomplished by the retiring president, and the bright prospects for the future.

This is a city of schools and churches. It has colleges under the auspices of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches. It is also the seat of Rust University for colored students and the State Normal School. Six ministers of our church reside here.

We were greatly shocked at the announcement of the sudden death of the Rev. T. B. Hargrove, pastor of Hernando and Coldwater. He was one of the most consecrated and useful members of the North Mississippi Conference. Born in Lowndes county, Miss., Feb. 4, 1819; graduated at the State University; married Miss Mary Lipscomb, the gifted daughter of Dr. W. L. Lipscomb, of Columbus, Miss.; admitted on trial, 1888; ordained deacon by Bishop Galloway, at Grenada, 1890; elder by Bishop Granbery, at Corinth, 1892. Bro. Hargrove's first appointment was Pleasant Grove. At the end of that year he was stationed at Greenwood, where he remained three years. This was followed by a three-years' term at Sardis. At the last Conference he was appointed to Hernando and Coldwater. He had just entered upon his work when "God's finger touched him, and he slept." He died in the pulpit at Coldwater, Sunday, Jan. 26. His last words were, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

Correspondence.

Letter from Texas.

The "summing up" at the several Annual Conferences of the State was, as usual, good. Texas—all Texas—desires to make a good showing, and labors to that end. Of course, our Texas Methodism is a live branch—and a large one. Figures do not tell the whole story; they are not everything; but they mean a good deal, and the following statistics give some notion of the largeness of our Zion: Local preachers, 1,093; members, 180,576; number of churches, 1,237—valued at $1 817,507; parsonages, 463—valued at $485,500; value of other church property, $3 500,160; a grand total of $2,-662,840. There are 1,369 Sunday-schools, with an average attendance of over 70. There are more than 500 Leagues, with an average membership of 35.

We were delighted to have the senior Bishop at the East Texas Conference. He had not held this Conference since 1878. His counsel was wise, his sermon grand, his presidency gave great satisfaction, his appointments were, to some, disappointments, yet no more than usual—perhaps fewer. I have never known a Conference at which there were so few changes. This is as it should be. A man should not be changed unless there is a real necessity. The only unusual thing at this session was the locating of several brethren "without" their request. They were good men, good preachers, but such men as "Gilderoy" described in a recent number of the Texas Christian Advocate—"they harped on one string," they were "hobbyists." Now they "feel" persecuted for righteousness' sake. It is ever thus.

Revivals.

Reading in "Revival Lectures," by President Finney, I came across the following paragraphs, which might do to think over just now. What he says is as true to-day as when spoken. While this was spoken of preaching, and especially of revivals, it is none the less applicable to these paper controversies. Our churches should be in a revival spirit all the time. This is the apostolic idea, but this can not be when our papers, which visit so many of our homes, are full of what we have had for some time.

"If a minister means to promote a revival, he should be very careful not to introduce controversy. He will grieve away the Spirit of God. In this way probably more revivals are put down than in any other. Look back upon the history of the church from the beginning, and you will see that ministers are generally responsible for grieving away the Spirit, and causing declensions by controversy. It is the ministers who bring forward controversial subjects for discussion, and by and by they get very zealous on the subject, and then get the church into a controversial spirit, and so the Spirit of God is grieved away." . . .

"Who does not know that ministers have been crying out 'Heresy' and 'New Measures,' and talking about the 'Evils of Revivals,' until they have got the church all in confusion?" . . .

"The body of the church are always averse to controversy, and will keep out of it only as they are dragged into it by ministers. When Christians are revived they are not inclined to meddle with controversy, either to read it or hear it. But they may be told of such and such 'damnable heresies' that are afloat till they get their feelings enlisted in controversy, and then farewell to the revival."

If we find it necessary to discuss particular points about which Christians differ in opinion, let us, by all means, avoid a controversial spirit.

We gather some facts from Woman's Missionary Advocate obtained by the investigation of Mr. Rice, of Chicago: "An average to each church member of more than seventeen dollars for local church expenses, nearly five dollars for home charities, and one dollar for foreign missions." Of course, the home work should be increased rather than lessened, but the small amount for foreign missions betrays selfishness—a great lack of the true spirit of missions.

As special blessings come from fasting and prayer, would it not be well that each auxiliary observe a fixed time in this way for the benefit of the local auxiliary, each member resolving to do "greater things" "through Christ which strengtheneth me?" Let us not lose our individuality in the organization, and let us not forget the Week of Prayer, Feb. 5-9, of our sister missionary society.

Twenty-four names, etc., have been sent to Miss Holding, Kansas City, as subscribers to the Evangel, to be credited to our missionary of the W. F. M. Society. Let it be remembered that all who help us to obtain this scholarship must be sure to request this credit when sending subscriptions to Miss Holding. Will not the Epworth Leagues, Sunday-schools and others help to obtain the 600 subscribers which places this missionary—now ready to enter—in the Training-school?

TWO OR THREE—THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

May the Holy Spirit cause each of us to learn the beautiful and solemn lesson from the following in the Woman's Missionary Advocate—not only those numerically weak, but those strong in numbers, who should have added strength spiritually, that we all may do more for the perishing millions:

"I get rather tired of hearing 'Only so few of us—only two or three—would come, so we decided it was no use and gave it up.'

"Now the plain fact is this: If God does not meet with you two or three, you have no right to assume that he would meet with the two dozen. If your two or three found no life and faith and knowledge in your meeting, it is just as well the two dozen were not there; the fewer who leave God's house empty, the better.

"The society meeting is where God's daughters meet to (1) learn of his work, (2) lay their offerings on his altar for his work, (3) pray with all their souls for guidance in this work, for consecration to this work and the blessing of fruitfulness on this work. Now read Matt. xviii, 18, 19, and tell us frankly if your two or three do not find it worth while to do this, why should you want any number to do it? God help us to get away from numbers and crowds and externals, and look at essentials a little as God's Word sees them.

"I was in a ladies' meeting lately; met, I supposed, to organize a Woman's Missionary Society, and every woman sat there trying to see 'how many would go into it.' A girl jumped up, her soul in her eyes. 'Miss Winona, can two organize?' I turned to 'History and Work,' page 9—'Any number of women,' etc. 'Then if one girl will go with me, I'll organize.' It was the society, not the number, she looked at. But before night she had the name of almost every girl in the church on her list of members, and the consecrated, noble older women were not all behind. It is the work, the organized work, for Christ that is of value—not the number.

"But if this work, this meeting of the two or three, is a precious work, and if you talk about it as you do other precious things, you will have no lack of members. People don't stay out of a good thing. Make your society of two or three what Christ wants it to be, because he loves you and has ordained you to bring forth fruit, and others will join, and they will come regularly too. Make it worth living, and it will live."

Mississippi Conference Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

At the second annual meeting of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the M. E. Church, South, held at Wesson, in July, 1895, I was elected to edit the P. and H. M. S. column of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Had I been consulted, I would have preferred that one more experienced be placed in charge of this responsible position, as I feel incompetent to assume such a relation to this important arm of church work. Realizing that I am a disciple of the blessed Savior, and that the work is for his glory, I assume the position with a willingness to do my best towards stimulating my sisters in Christ to a greater activity and consecration to this work.

I am pleased to be able to report that of the 122 pastoral charges of the Mississippi Conference only 22 are without homes for their pastors. This is a good report; but, while these 22 ministers are unprovided for, opportunities are presented for our society to render valued service to the Master's cause.

By districts — Jackson has need of two homes; Brandon, 1; Meridian, 7; Natchez, 4; Brookhaven, 4; Seashore, 3; Enterprise district has the record of a parsonage for every charge.

The Mississippi Conference Minutes show an increase of 6 parsonages over 1894.

I regret to report the destruction by fire of two parsonages in the Enterprise district since the session of Conference, and still sadder to report, both without insurance. It is to be hoped that both the buildings will be replaced before Conference meets again. Now is the time for local societies to inspect the needs of the parsonage premises. Decayed fence posts often are neglected until some Spring gale prostrates the fences, and allow cattle to enter, and destroy orchards and gardens. "A stitch in time saves nine."

I was calling at our parsonage the other day, and found our dear good preacher doing this work himself. Had a box of peach seed sitting by ready for planting, and had just finished putting out some pecans. This put me to thinking. Would it not be true home missionary work, in addition to the monthly contributions, to interest ourselves in the educational wants of our varied sections? Many places in Mississippi have areas of many miles where scarcely any educational advantages are to be had. Until the people are able to read God's Word they can never develop to any marked degree. Canvass the section where you live on this line and report.

That was a kind offer of Bro. Cassell, of Canton, to donate some fruit trees to parsonages where needed, if he could be assured that when planted careless preachers would not allow cattle or worms to destroy them. This is the time to plant new trees, prune the limbs and destroy the worms.

I think it would be a pertinent question in examination of character at the Annual Conference for the Bishop to ask: "Brother, in what condition did you leave the parsonage home?" Some pastors never think about the comfort of their successor.

Now, dear sisters, send in your reports, that I may become posted upon the immediate needs of our work. There are only sixteen organized societies in the Mississippi Conference, and only six of these report their dues regularly. And yet, with the small means so obtained, we have been able to help build this year two parsonages.

Selections.

The Reading of the Word.

A few striking incidents have recently come to our knowledge, from over the sea, of how simple reading of the New Testament, without a word of comment, has been blessed to the conversion of individuals of God's ancient people, the Jews. A young Israelite in the Crimea, a highly-cultivated man, and thoroughly instructed in his own faith, became acquainted with several Christian families, and conceived the idea of writing a novel in which the families of the Jews and Christians should be contrasted. The better to understand the latter, he bought a New Testament, and had not long studied it before he became convinced that Jesus was the promised Messiah of his people.

In Berlin a Hebrew artist, desiring to find new subjects for pictures, began to search for them in the New Testament. As he read, the moral beauty of the Savior made a deep impression upon him. The more he read, the deeper was the impression, until he came to the profound conviction that Jesus was the Son of God.

Such, when once they begin to study it, is the influence of the New Testament upon those who have never known it. And yet how many of us Christians, who fancy we know it well, fail to find any decided evidence in our lives that we are gaining anything from it. We read it, but we do not grow by it. Is the reason that we are looking in it rather for doctrines, for truth, perhaps we may call it, than for Jesus Christ, who is the Truth? To know him, this is life eternal.—American Messenger.

The Straight-out Religion.

What the world wants is a straight up-and-down religion. Much of the so-called piety of the day bends this way and that, to suit the times. It is horizontal, with a low state of sentiment and morals. We have all been building a wall of character, and it is imperfect and needs reconstruction. How shall it be brought into the perpendicular? Only by divine measurements. The whole tendency of the times is to make us act by the standard of what others do. If they play cards, we play cards; if they dance, we dance; if they read certain styles of books, we read them. The question for me should not be what you think is right, but what God thinks is right. This perpetual reference to the behavior of others, as though it decided anything but human infallibility, is a mistake as wide as the world. There is a mighty attempt being made to reconstruct and fix up the ten commandments. To many they seem too rigid. The Tower of Pisa leans over about thirteen feet from the perpendicular, and people go thousands of miles to see its graceful inclination, and by extra brace and various architectural contrivances it is kept leaning from century to century. Why not have the ten granite blocks of Sinai set a little askant? Why not have the pillar of truth a-leaning? Why is not an ellipse as good as a square? Why is not an oblique as good as a straight up-and-down? My friends, we must have a standard; shall it be God's or man's?—New York Observer.

"Thou, therefore, endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." It was the pagan discipline of the Roman army, or of the Roman games, which Paul made the type of the courage, hardihood, endurance and dogged strength which was to characterize the man who should be his successor in the care of the churches. Our Lord himself was the perfect pattern of these hardier virtues.

In view of the softness and effeminacy of civilization, it is worth considering whether we do not need to preach gentleness less, and the gospel of brave truthfulness, of exertion, and of the endurance of pain and labor more. We suspect that the five-cent trolley car is a foe to grace, and that sunshades and umbrellas have not strengthened either the moral or the physical constitution of our people. Iron makes a better corset than velvet. The Countess de Genlis required her prince pupil to walk with leaden soles on his shoes. If our men are getting to dread the exposure of labor in sun and rain, and to count an hour of work as an hour lost, and to hesitate to accept the blessed burden of a family; or if our women are getting to avoid the pain and toil of child-bearing and maternity and home-making, then it may be time to go back a bit and learn a little of the discipline, at least, of paganism.—Independent.

Among the forms of insect life there is a little creature known to naturalists which can gather around itself sufficiency of atmospheric air, and, so clothed, it descends into the bottom of the pool; and you may see the little diver moving about, dry, and at his ease, protected by his crystal vesture, though the water all around be stagnant and bitter. Prayer is such a protector. A transparent vesture, the world sees it not; a real defense, it keeps out the world. By means of it the believer can gather so much of heavenly atmosphere around him, and with it descend into the putrid depths of this contaminating world, that for a season no evil will touch him, and he knows when to ascend for a new supply. Communion with God kept Daniel pure in Babylon.—Dr. James Hamilton.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Farmersville, Tex.: "I have just closed a grand revival meeting with Rev. C. I. McWhirter at Nevada, Texas. More than a hundred and fifty conversions at the morning and over a hundred added to the Methodist Church on profession of faith. I am now engaged in a good work here. Just begun the meeting here, but the outlook is good for victory. Pray for us."

Rev. H. Armstrong: "My third year in Franklin opens auspiciously in the main. I was down Christmas week with lumbago. Did you ever have it? Congregations good at preaching and prayer meeting. The Epworth League is doing well, and the Sunday-school is very fine. Hard times are talked of, but this town is steadily improving. Am going to begin a canvass to-day for the ADVOCATE. If I get two dozen to take it, I shall feel assured of a successful year. God bless you!"

Rev. J. W. Raper, Nettleton, Miss.: "In the providence of God, we have begun our third year on this, the Nettleton circuit. We were very kindly received. Never before have we been more kindly welcomed to our work. We begin the work of this year under much more favorable circumstances than any preceding year. Our people seem to be willing to do something. (This is only as it should be. We must all do something this year.) Our first Quarterly Conference met at Pine Grove Church on the tenth of January. Our much-loved presiding elder (Rev. S. M. Thames) was on hand with the best sermon he has ever given us, on the subject of divine power and human agency. We had a good old-fashioned, Holy Ghost time; and all took a new start for a good year's work. We are working, looking and praying for a sweeping revival at every appointment on this charge this year. The good women are making their arrangements to put all the needed furniture in the parsonage. We have done a good deal of work on the parsonage since Conference. We feel sure that we have the co-operation of the good people of this charge, and we are looking for a good year on all lines. Pray for us. We send our best wishes to editor and the ADVOCATE."

N. P. Hobgood, Rowa Log., La.: "I write in the interest of our little church at this place, Tunica. We fear that the presiding elder of this district has forgotten or neglected to send us a preacher for '96, as we have not heard of one up to date. It is true, we have very few Methodists in our neighborhood. Still we hate to be neglected after being a church for so many long years; our pulpit having been filled in the years past and gone by such noble men as Drake, Winans, Hinds, three Godfreys, Wade, Finn, Flowers, Harris, Clark, R. D. Norsworthy, C. D. Cecil, D. P. and Harry C. Bradford, and in the last few years by Hodges, Enochs, and last year by a most excellent young preacher, Mr. Bishop, from the Mississippi Conference. From what I can understand we were transferred to the Louisiana Conference last year on account of some church being so anxious to retain Mr. Tucker one more year, and by so doing we are left out in the cold. I truly hope it won't prove in the heat in the next world. Last year we were assessed eighty dollars, and we paid about eighty-seven dollars to the support of the minister and our pro rata of the Conference claims with ten less than eight members to do the paying. Now, dear Doctor, anything you may be able to do for us will be appreciated, as we hate to think of our little fellows growing up without any knowledge of Methodism. A real, earnest, good Methodist sermon once a month would be better than no church services at all."

Rev. J. A. Leech, Brookville, Miss.: "At the recent session of our Conferences, Bishop Fitzgerald send us out to Brookville circuit, Columbus district. We came at once; was kindly met at depot by a number of good Methodists and others, and conducted to the best parsonage in our district, where we found good, warm rooms, and a good dinner awaiting us. We were agreeably surprised in our new work, for we find our work second to none in our Conference. Our home is first-class in every particular. We have four churches—three in this beautiful, rich prairie, one in the sandy lands. All good houses, well furnished and well attended. Our people are mostly good-looking, thrifty, intelligent, liberal Methodists. This is an old field, but has been well cultivated, and the people remember and appreciate all of the good men who have ministered to them in holy things. Our larder, crib and turkey-pen have been kept filled since we came, and our predecessor tells me his was so for four years. Our presiding elder, Bro. R. A. Burroughs, was with us the first Sunday in January, and preached two fine sermons, which were highly appreciated by our people. Our district is taking on new life, and our motto is, 'A great revival in every charge, home, and heart in our bounds.' I want an ADVOCATE in every home in my charge, and I am trying to put it there. Pray for us, and come to our District Conference, which will be held at Columbus, embracing the second Sunday in April."

WEST END, MERIDIAN.

This church last year increased the salary of the pastor over the previous year, and paid it in full. I have never known more unanimity and harmony to reign in any church than in West End, or a greater zeal and desire in the hearts of the people to see the cause of Christ and the church advanced. The standard of religion which had been erected was sought to be maintained, and our wonderful success can be attributed to the fact that we never ceased to teach the doctrine of entire sanctification as taught by our church.

Our new pastor, Bro. Peebles, came to us immediately after Conference and has gotten down to vigorous work. We find him to be an earnest and zealous worker and faithful man of God, and under his leadership we are looking forward to great things this year. He can, in one respect, be compared to Absalom: already he has "stolen the hearts of the people" (better, won their hearts), not, however, for the same purpose of Absalom, of dividing the hearts of the people, but with the desire of more solidly uniting them and urging them up into higher heights in glory and on to greater victory in the Master's work. We are not only at peace and harmony in our own household, but enjoy friendly and brotherly relations with all other denominations—all uniting in a weekly cottage prayer meeting which has proven profitable to all.

We closed the year with 230 members, and raised for all purposes $2,067.05—only $621.50 of this amount being paid on church building. If all the obstacles in the way during the year were known, the report could be more fully appreciated. For five months we were without a church building, holding all meetings in a school-house, situated on a hill on the northern edge of our district, and many of the people would not attend. In June, immediately after going into the new church, our pastor was appointed to take the field in the interest of Millsaps College for two months, and Bro. Browning, who had been appointed in his stead, after serving the church about a month, was suddenly stricken down and had to give up the work. In May, while we were in the midst of a meeting, the small-pox epidemic broke out, the meeting was immediately closed, and advice being issued by the health officers to all people to quit attending public meetings, it kept a great many away from church until the scare had entirely subsided; and, lastly, about a month before Conference the sash and blind factory, one of the largest manufacturing institutions of the town, where a number of our members were employed, was burned, thereby throwing them out of employment and unable to further meet their pledge. We are thankful to our heavenly Father for what he has done for us, and pray that he might be with us as graciously this year."

How to Help Your Pastor.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

The relation of a pastor and a parishioner is much like that of wedlock—a relation of mutual obligation, and it ought to be one of mutual affection and helpfulness. If at the time of his installation he has made a vow to be faithful to you, the member of his flock, you also have made an equally binding promise to be true to him. Has he not a clear right to your assistance, and just as strong a claim on your support as you have on him for pulpit instruction and pastoral oversight? Granting that you ought to help your pastor, how can you do it?

There are many ways in which you can strengthen his hands and cheer his heart. First of all, practice the "golden rule" towards him; do as you would be done by; put yourself in his place. He can not always strike twelve in his sermons any more than you can always make a shrewd investment, or always finish a piece of work quite up to your promise. You don't like to be unreasonably censured; neither does he; and when you are scolding a good pastor you are discrediting a servant of the Lord, and obstructing his work. Supposing him to be conscientious and doing his best, he has a right to your generous appreciation. If you have just ground for criticisms, take them to his study, and not to your neighbors' houses. You may really help him by the first method, provided that you go in a frank, fraternal spirit. A sensible minister will welcome a sensible criticism.

2. For a more pleasant purpose than for criticisms you may freely visit him, or ask him to your own house—and that is to devise plans for doing good. Partners in business consult together often; you are a spiritual partner with your minister. It is your church as much as it is his; it really belongs to him who owns you both. Just as clearly as it is your duty to labor for the Master as it is your pastor's duty. Put your heads and hearts together, and devise plans of usefulness and the best methods to make them successful. If he sets on foot a feasible plan for quickening church life, then back him up heartily.

3. A minister who is worthy of the name can stand an empty purse better than an empty pew or an empty prayer meeting. It is a disgrace to a church that failure to pay an honest salary should straiten a pastor's purse; but the spiritual emptiness pierces his heart the most keenly. Perhaps your pastor is wondering what has become of you on the evenings of the devotional meetings. The better man or woman you are, the more you are missed: the worse you are, the more you need to go. It may be that your pastor is disheartened by the emptiness of your pew on the Sabbath. He has carefully prepared a discourse for your benefit; you have lost it; both he and you suffer from that absence. For one, I am ready to confess that I never made any converts to the truth in an empty pew, and never have delivered a sermon loud enough to awaken a parishioner who was dozing at home, or strolled off to some other church. If a good reason keeps you at home, try to send a substitute. Church members sometimes complain that their minister does not "draw" a larger congregation; yet they do nothing to draw outsiders to the house of God by a cordial invitation to come. Help your pastor to fill the house.

4. Follow up the invitations, appeals and counsels of the pulpit with your own efforts for the conversion of sinners. The pastor is trying to draw souls to Jesus; pray don't draw the other way. If one of your family or one of your Sabbath-school class comes home from the sanctuary thoughtful and tender, then aim to deepen that impression. Draw with your minister; follow up his efforts with your own. But the downward pull of your trifling talk, or your unkind criticisms, or your inconsistent conduct, may be an overmatch for the upward lift of his faithful discourse. Co-operate with Christ's ambassador in the grandest work that man or angel can covet—the work of saving immortal souls. "As ye go, preach," is a commission to the pew as well as to the pulpit.

5. A single sagacious and active helper is a rich blessing to a pastor. But several scores of them are still better. If he leans all the time on Aaron and Hur, then the rest of the flock are apt to grow lazy themselves and censorious towards the two men who occupy the leading position; and what shall the minister do when Aaron is sick and Hur is absent from home? That is not a healthy church in which all the work, all the giving, and all of the praying is done by a few individuals, even if the men are Calebs and the women are Tabithas. It is the pull of the whole church that brings the large blessing.

This touches the very core of the question. "How shall I help my pastor?" Pray for him, pray with him, and practice as you pray. Peter's powerful discourse at the Pentecost was preceded by a powerful prayer-gathering. Saturday evening wrestlings with God in a certain church brought heart-moving sermons on the next morning, until a revival shook the whole congregation. What your minister wants is spiritual power. That is God's gift; help him to plead for it.—New York Evangelist.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to February, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL, PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

To the Preachers of the Patronizing Conference.

In keeping with our motto, "Better and better," we make the following offers: (1) To the preacher who sends us the largest number of new cash subscribers at the regular rate between now and the first of July we will present a handsome parlor organ catalogued at $225. (2) To the preacher sending us the second largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present either a handsome gold-filled watch, guaranteed to be a perfect time-keeper, and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, or an Arlington B Sewing Machine, whichever may be preferred. (3) To the preacher sending the third largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, the same described in our offer elsewhere.

Notice that these are to be cash subscriptions at the regular rate. No commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Then, every unsuccessful competitor will have his commissions returned to him in cash.

Brethren, here is a chance to help yourselves at the same time that you help your Conference organ, and also render a service of incalculable value to the people whom you serve. If any brother does not need an organ, that need not prevent his entering the list, as the organ can be sold. Should the successful competitor wish to convert his organ into money, we will advertise it for him two months, free of charge. Those who wish to compete for this premium should notify us at once.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The only property that the North Mississippi Conference owns entirely is the Grenada Collegiate Institute. We have here an excellent plant, the nucleus of a great college. The property itself is out of debt, and in good repair. The present management has expended a large sum in improvements. A new art room has been built, the prettiest in the State; a large dining-room has been fitted up with a special table for the French teacher and her pupils. When a girl asks Miss Burgess, the French teacher, for chow chow in French, some of us think the English of that word is bad enough. The girls are furnishing a handsome library room for their literary society. They have a monthly paper, a live Sunday-school, an excellent missionary society, and they are our best workers in the League. Bishop Hurst, of Washington City, pronounced the orchestra the finest he ever heard. Misses Conley and Neblett, and Mrs. Malone and Calkins, are progressive and successful teachers of music. The art room is a perfect beauty. Miss Damon giving instruction to a number of bright, beautiful girls in the mysteries of art makes a perfect picture itself. Mrs. Calkins is succeeding admirably well with her classes in elocution and physical culture. The breathing lessons which she gives to the whole school are very helpful to health and the development of the whole body. All the other teachers are doing thorough work. All pretense and effort to push through a book without knowing it is opposed in the college. Mrs. Fort, the hall teacher, deserves special mention for her lady-like deportment and her very competent instruction.

The college opened well in September, but its present growth is far beyond our most sanguine expectations. There are now 59 boarding pupils at the college, and more to come. "If many more come, where shall we put them?" is the question now. We must enlarge our facilities, and provide for 150 girls by the next session. One large recitation-room has just been fitted up for a bed-room, and Dr. Malone says he will have to crowd things a little to get through. We ask if the Conference won't stand by us in our effort to go forward? If we could put $10,000 in an annex for a few music rooms and a number of boarding rooms, board could be reduced because the larger the number the lower the price of board.

Brethren, this is your college. You own it. It is growing so rapidly that additional facilities must be provided or we will be crippled. The college is gaining ground as never before. Prominent men are looking to Grenada as the best place to educate their daughters, and we appeal to you to come up to the help of the college at this time.

The health of the college family is remarkably good. One good woman who came to Grenada an invalid is in better health than she has been for years. If you could walk into the college this morning, you would see a pretty lot of the healthiest girls in Dixie. We hope to make Grenada for the girls what Millsaps is for the boys.

Wanted, for office work, on salary, in most every county in the South and West, a young lady or gentleman. Those from the country also accepted. Experience not necessary; in fact, prefer beginners at a small salary at first, say to begin, from $50.00 to $60.00 a month. Strictly office work. Chances for rapid promotion good. The enterprise is strongly endorsed by bankers. Address P. O. Box 488, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHRIST'S WAY OF WINNING SOULS: BY WORKS OF CHARITY AND HELP.

(Mark iii, 1-5; Luke xvii, 11-19; John v, 1-8; xiii, 2-9.)

Sympathy with the sufferers as well as the desire to secure followers, led the Master to perform many of his miracles.

I. Christ cured the man with withered hand. Doing so, he expressed some views about the Sunday law.

(1) To this day the Sunday law everywhere excludes physicians from the prohibitory statute of following their usual employ.

(2) For the same reason the drug store is permitted to be open.

(3) Visits to the sick on Sunday evening are proper. Instruction at Sunday- and mission school commendable.

2. The lesson next speaks of the cure of ten lepers. Only one acknowledged his obligation.

(1) The sinner's usual petition, 'Have mercy on me!' is here employed by the lepers. Mercy saves, mercy cures.

(2) Jesus assisted readily. He is more willing to hear and bless than we are to pray.

(3) Only one of the ten cured lepers returned to express his gratitude. Sad proportion. Will hold good to-day. "Where are the nine?"

3. We now read of the chronic invalid's cure at the Pool of Bathesda.

(1) Sick for thirty-eight years. Human sufferings numerous and heart-rending. Not improperly earth is called a vale of tears.

(2) The sick man's statement dolorous indeed. Had no one to render necessary assistance. No one. Bless the Lord for friends. We have aid.

(3) The Savior did for him what a brother and son could not have done. He performed a miracle in effecting the forsaken invalid's instant cure.

4. In conclusion, the lesson narrates the Master's menial service: He washed his disciples' feet.

(1) As an expression of his humility. Though elevated above his followers he treated them more than equals, even as superiors. Not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think would prevent much heart-burning. Respect, love and serve your fellow-man.

(2) As an expression of brotherly love. In matters of salvation and church life there are neither rich nor poor, neither high nor low. All are sinners saved by grace. All should be treated alike.

League Data

President W. M. Sloan, of the United Epworth Leagues societies in Louisiana, has been in the Crescent City. He attended to necessary League business.

The Louisiana State Epworth League Conference will convene in Carondelet Street Church, May 28 to 30.

President Sloan and Executive Committee appointed as field secretaries Dr. W. H. Laprade and Pastors L. F. Jackson, John F. Foster and R. H. Wynn.

A Committee of Arrangement for the coming Epworth League Conference: Pastors Jas. M. Henry, C. M. Lyons and Henry H. Ahrens have been appointed.

The Union Epworth League meets in Felicity Street Church each week hence.

Tchoupitoulas Street Church.

Dr. Sawyer, the presiding elder, reports that the Tchoupitoulas Street Church is on a boom. Under the pastoral care of Rev. Thomas L. Lallance all the interests of Zion in that part of New Orleans are prospering. The Sunday-school is growing in numbers and spirituality. The prayer and class meetings are large and doing great good in developing the spiritual life of this infant church. The Sabbath services are well attended, and many, on profession of faith and by certificate, are joining the church. The quarterly love-feast, on Thursday night, led by the presiding elder, was an occasion long to be remembered because of the full presence and power of the Holy Ghost. Many testified to the saving and keeping power of their Lord. It was indeed good to be there. There is every indication of a wonderful work being done in that neglected section of the city. Bro. Lallance finds an efficient helper in Mrs. Lillie Maskins, one of his members, who is also the missionary of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

Should Women Be Rich?

That question is about as sensible as to ask, Should women breathe? Of course, they should be rich, and especially in health. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC will make them rich, too, in curing them of Uterine Troubles and complications, such as weakness, irregularity, suppression, nervousness, anæmia, chlorosis, prolapsus, etc. It is a health builder!

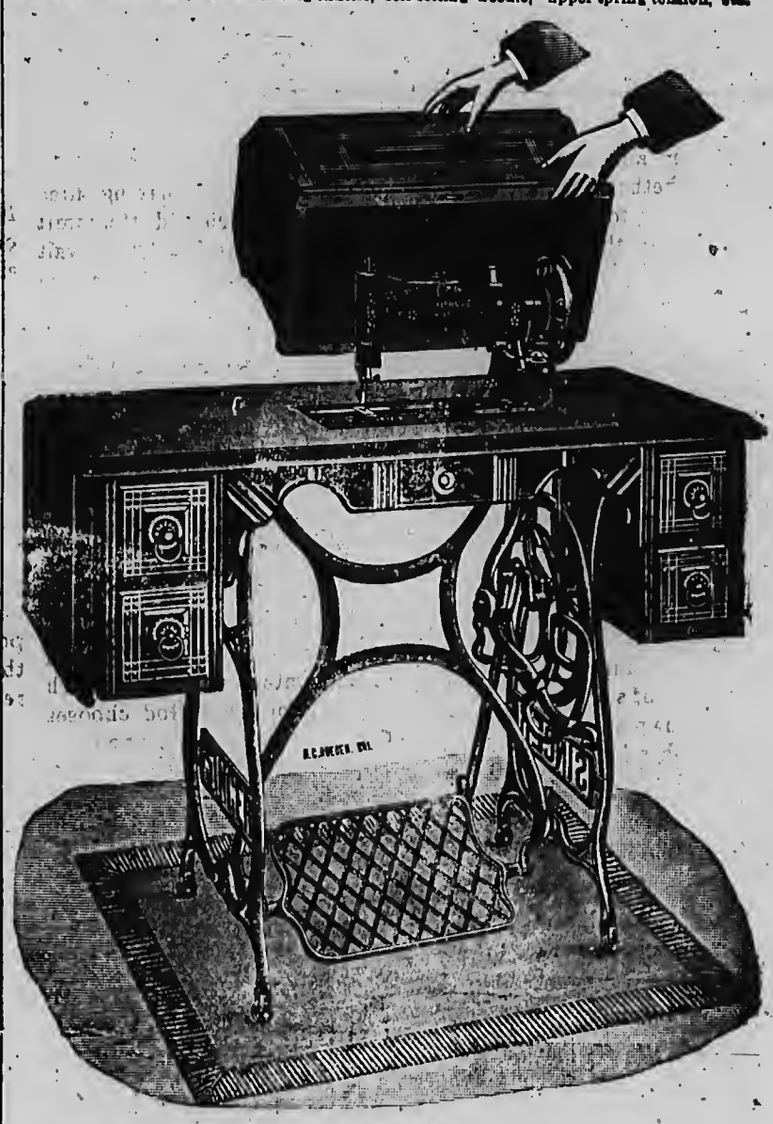
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great ease, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case-hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

PADDLE YOUR OWN CANOE.

BY INA R. MANN.

The sea of life is sometimes rough,
Sometimes it is smooth and serene;
There are dangerous rocks and storm-tossed waves
With beautiful calms between.
If you wish to cross in safety—
To reach the end in view—
You must keep an eye on the breakers ahead
And "paddle your own canoe."

Perhaps some reckless voyager,
While rowing by your side,
Has broken both his paddles
And is drifting with the tide.
You will help your fellow-traveler,
If you are good and true,
But you must not stop. Keep going,
And "paddle your own canoe."

Dame Fortune does not favor
The lazy man, who shirks,
But gives her choicest treasures
To the braver man, who works.
Don't lean on your friends and neighbors
And expect them to pull you through;
They have their own loads to carry,
You must "paddle your own canoe."

If you meet with disappointments,
Waste no time in vain distress.
Keep going forward, bravely,
Work, not worry, brings success.
Perhaps your load is heavy;
Don't lose hope, whatever you do.
Remember the rest on the other side
And "paddle your own canoe."

If you feel that you have within you
The power to conquer fate—
To guide your bark, though frail it be—
You should not hesitate,
But go to work in earnest,
With faith in what you do,
And success will crown your efforts,
If you "paddle your own canoe."

—Arkansas Methodist.

Loving too Late.

Not long ago I met a young lady in poverty whom I had previously known in wealth, and this was, in substance, the story she told me: "Father died suddenly in Washington, and the professional skill through which he had coined money for us died with him. I am not weeping because we are poor. I am broken-hearted because none of us saw that he was dying. Was it not pitiful that he should think it best not so tell any of us that he was sick? And I, his petted daughter, though I knew he was taking opium to soothe his great pain, was so absorbed by my lovers, my games and my dresses that I just hoped it would all come right. If I could only remember that even once I had pitied his suffering or felt anxious about his life, I might bear his loss better!" . . .

The story is common enough. Many a father, year after year, goes in and out of his home carrying the burden and doing the labor of life, while those whom he tenderly loves hold with but careless hands all the honor and gold he wins by toil and pain. Then some day his head and hands can work no more! And the hearts that have not learned the great lesson of unselfish love while love was their teacher must now begin their sad duty when love has left them alone forever. —Ladies' Home Journal.

Prof. Huxley on Liberal Education.

That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will, and does with ease and pleasure all the work that, as a mechanism, it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength and in smooth working order, ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work and spin the gossamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness and to respect others as well as himself.

The Same Boy.

Some years ago, in a farming neighborhood, a middle-aged [illegible] of employment. He called at the house of a respectable farmer and told his errand.

"What is your name?" asked the farmer.

"John Wilson," was the reply.

"John Wilson—the same that lived here when a boy?"

"The same, sir."

"Then I don't want you."

Poor John, surprised at such a reply, passed on to the house of the next farmer, and there a similar reply was given. And he found no one in the neighborhood where his earlier days had been spent who was willing to employ him. Passing on, he soon came in sight of the schoolhouse. "Ah," said he, "I understand it now. I was a schoolboy there years ago; but what kind of a school-boy? Lazy, disobedient, often in mischief, and once caught in deliberate lying; and though since I have been trying to reform, they all think me the same kind of a man that I was a boy. Oh, that I had done as I ought when at school, then people would have confidence in me now!"—Episcopal Recorder.

Make Geography Interesting.

In teaching your little girl geography try to make it more than a dry list of names to be learned by rote. Take her on imaginary voyages and journeys from one country to another. Tell her something of the manners and customs of the people and anything you can learn yourself about the lives of the children. Describe to her how the Swiss boys herd their cattle under the shadow of the Alps, and the Esquimaux are made daring by being thrown into the icy water in their strange fur garments. Tell her of the stunted lives of the pit boys in the coal mines and of the German girls who learn to use their five knitting needles almost as soon as they can hold them. Books of travel will furnish you with many interesting incidents which you can turn to account. Geography will not be a wearisome task to her. Her mother's wisdom can make the first steps attractive.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Tongue.

The following story is told by the Jewish Rabbid to illustrate the great power of the tongue for good or evil:

"A certain man sent his servant to market to buy some good food. The servant returned, bringing with him some tongues. Again he sent the same servant to buy some bad food. The servant again brought tongues.

"The master said: 'What is the reason, that when I sent you to buy good and bad food, you brought tongues?' The servant answered: 'From the tongue both good and evil come to man. If it be good, there is nothing better; if it be bad, there is nothing worse.'"

Sometimes strangers endeavor to entrap young girls by advertising that they would like to begin a correspondence. This is the most common means of leading young girls astray. The awful results of answering such advertisements, as they have been brought to my knowledge by letter and personal accounts, and through reformatory and other institutions, would arouse the American people to such indignation against the newspapers that admit such decoy letters, that the wretches that edit them would be driven from decent society. Never write a letter to a stranger, nor one to a friend, that would disgrace you if it reached other hands than those for which it is intended.—Christian Advocate.

"A SINGLE FACT OUTWEIGHS A THOUSAND CLAIMS."

For Mother's Sake.

General O. O. Howard's description of his life at West Point should be an incentive to every young man. He tells how he braved the ridicule of the cadets by going to religious services and doing work in the Sunday-school. He said it cost him more to take his stand and run the gauntlet of their scoffs and sneers than it did later to face the musketry of the battlefield. "But I gripped my Bible, shut my teeth and went, for my mother's sake."

An ounce of prevention is worth a ton of attempted cure. God has built up his solid barricades against alcoholic drinks that antedates all statutes of prohibition; with his statutes no legislature dare meddle; just as soon attempt to repeal the law of gravitation. In the solid wall of total abstinence are immutable principles founded on the constitution of the human body, and in the inherent qualities of all intoxicants. They are not needed by the healthy; they seldom cure the sick; they involve the risk of damnation to body and soul. On the forefront of the wall of abstinence God has kindly hung his warning, "Look thou not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it goeth down smoothly; at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Yet in spite of all warnings, millions of young men venture to break through this fence, with the reckless hope that they will dodge the adder. But when the poison of that serpent once gets into the blood and the brain, it is a desperate battle for life; and where the grace of God gives one John B. Gough the victory the vast majority of fence-breakers die of the venomous bite. My friend, never loosen a pebble from that wall!—Exchange.

A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick-room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you can not see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear wether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. "The good-humored man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere and is a nuisance as well," says a family doctor.

There is always some one to smile at; somebody to whom a book, a flower, or even an old paper, will be a boon. These small attentions will open the way to confidence; will make it possible that in need these friends will give you opportunities to help them, which, unless you had shown thoughtfulness and regard for them, they could never have done. A quiet, sympathetic look or smile many a time unbars a heart that needs the help which you can so efficiently give.—Lutheran.

A majority of women seem to consider themselves sent into the world for the sole purpose of displaying dry goods; and it is only when acting the part of an animated milliner's block that they feel they are performing their appropriate mission.—Abba Gould Woolson.

HYGIENE.

Hygiene for Women.

A writer in the New York Herald says:

"Every woman who needs it should give up from fifteen minutes to a half hour daily for thorough and continuous relaxation of the body. As near mid-day as convenient is the best time. At 2 o'clock, say every afternoon, unloose the clothing and fastening, that no part of the body may be girded any more than at night, and then lie down for not less than fifteen minutes and not more than an hour, perfectly flat upon a bed or long divan. Keep every part of the body as passive as possible. Sleep a few minutes, if possible. But, at any rate, remain in this position for a little while. It is better, but not necessary, to undress, but every muscle, every nerve, every artery, should be completely relieved from pressure."

One woman I know undresses, goes to bed for an hour and sleeps. She darkens the room so it will seem like night. In this way she restores her resources and maintains her health. Many will say they can not get the time, but if they arrange their work right they gain time rather than lose it.—The Journal of Hygiene.

Airing Our Bedrooms.

In Winter, quite as much as in Summer, the poisonous exhalations from the body during sleep should be gotten rid of, so that the air breathed at night will not become impure. Why is it that the tone of the system is generally lowered, and that many people think they need a tonic or a "blood purifier" in the Spring? Partly, no doubt, because the manner of living has not been in accordance with the laws of health, and partly because the sleeping rooms have not been sufficiently aired.

In the first place, then, the bed should be opened, the blankets and sheets taken off one by one, and well shaken, and arranged carefully in such a way that the air can blow upon them. Shake the pillows well, and if possible leave them in a sunny, breezy spot; take off the blanket or quilt that covers the mattress, and, lastly, the mattress itself should be thrown up so that the air may get around it. Then open the windows and let the out-door air sweep in and blow out all the accumulated impurities taken up by sheets and night dresses during the long hours of the night. This sort of ventilation is called "wind ventilation," and it is very effective, quickly removing foulness.—The Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CREAM PUFFS.—Put one cup of water in a saucepan over the fire. When it boils, add to it one-half of a cup of butter and stir until it dissolves. Then stir in one and one-half cups of pastry flour, stirring constantly while cooking, until it is smooth and forms a ball, leaving the sides of the pan. Take from the fire and put away to cool. When cool, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and six eggs, unbeaten, one at a time. Add an egg, beat it into the paste until it entirely disappears, then add another, and so on, until the six are in. Drop by the tablespoonful on a buttered baking-pan, forming little cakes some distance apart. Bake twenty minutes in a quick oven, or until they have puffed, are a delicate brown, and are light when picked up. To test the puffs, lift one from the pan, and if it is very light, it is done; if heavy, even though it is browned, it is still unbaked. The lightness is given by the beating in of the eggs thoroughly, and also by the niceness of the baking. When done and cool, make an opening in the side with a sharp knife and fill.

Filling.—Scald one pint of milk; rub two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch smooth with a little cold milk and add to the scalded milk. Stir until it thickens. Beat three eggs light without separating, add one cup of sugar and beat until light. Add the scalded milk to the sugar and eggs, stirring all the while. Then return to the farina boiler and cook until it thickens. Take from the fire, add a pinch of salt and one teaspoonful of vanilla.—Table Talk

Certain thoughts are prayers. There are moments when, whatever be the attitude of the body, the soul is on its knees.—Hugo.

"Pearl top," "pearl glass," "tough glass," "no smell," and "best light," are great big things in "Macbeth" but includes them all, if you get the chimney made for your lamp. Let us send you an Index.

OBITUARIES.

KITTRELL.—Wilburn Kittrell, youngest son of John and Martha Kittrell, was born [illegible]. He joined the Methodist Church here in 1890. He was always a consistent member of the church, a dutiful son, an kind-hearted, tender-hearted disposition rendered him a constant source of happiness in the home circle.

He had been afflicted for some time with rheumatism, which finally attacked the heart, and on Dec. 30, last, God took him home to that realm where pain and sorrow and parting shall be no more. His parents, a brother and two sisters remain behind, to terry a while longer till they also are privileged to enter the eternal rest of their permanent home in the glory-land. They sorrow, not as they who have no hope; but, yielding to God's wisdom and love, they give him up, expecting, by faith in Jesus, to see him again, when the shadows have departed and God has wiped all tears from their eyes.

It was my privilege to try to minister to them the comforts of our precious religion in their affliction. On New Year's Day we committed his body to the earth till the resurrection morn. Adolphus T. Bell.
Daleville, Miss.

HIGGINBOTHAM.—Mrs. R. A. Higginbotham (nee Miller) was born in St. Helena parish, La., April 25, 1839, and died at her home in East Feliciana, Oct. 12, 1895.

To those who knew her she was a perfect example of Christian faith and patience, having been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, since childhood. Truly it could be said of her: She left her own burdens and troubles to her Savior's keeping, while she helped to bear those of other people. During her illness of nearly three weeks she never lost sight of the Redeemer. She expressed herself as "ready and willing" to leave her labor of this life and live with our Father in heaven, for, she said, she had lived to see her children all grown and responsible for themselves.

We are six in number—three boys and three girls—and though she had taught us to look upon death as the doorway to life eternal, we fairly fainted in our sorrow when the dread angel opened that great portal and called our devoted mother away from us. But a gleam of hope tells us to live as she lived, and on some sweet day we'll meet our precious mother, where she's waiting for Her Children.

VAUGHAN.—Mrs. L. A. Vaughan (nee [illegible]) was born in Boston, Erie county, New York Jan 6, 1812 and died in Homer, La., Dec. 3 1895. She was twice married: first to John Britton, Sept 8, 1829. He died within a year afterwards. She next married Tilling-hast Vaughan. Of this union five daughters and one son were born. Her husband, two daughters and the son preceded her to the spirit world. She was converted in her eighth-ninth year, and united with the M. E. Church. She moved to Minden, La., in early life, spent a few years there, then resided for some time at Athens. She went from there to Homer when there were a few tents and no houses. More than half her life was spent. She had an active, strong and well-stored mind; was entertaining and instructive in conversation, and her genial, gentle manner won for her many friends. She was generous and unselfish, and a sincerely devout Christian; loved her church, its services, and her pastor. She adorned her profession by a good, pure life and conversation. Her death was like a cloudless sunset, for hers was a long, faithful life, whose zeal never failed and whose "faith never wavered."

J. D. Harris.

TALIAFERRO.—Our far-away ranch home is gloomy now, since God has called our precious grandmother, Mrs. S. F. Taliaferro, home. She has taken the Christian Advocate and enjoyed it for many years.

She passed away Thursday, Jan. 16, at four p. m., after a week's sickness. To know her was to admire and love her. She was a member of the Methodist Church about seventy years. She was eighty-seven years old the 4th of last June.

After Mississippi home was for so many years home for all preachers, and so many knew and loved her, that we would like for them to know that she has passed away, praising, living and loving the Lord to the end. She feared she would not get well, but never expressed any desire to live and never complained. She asked her loved ones to sing certain hymns for her a day or two before she died. Her only daughter (my mother), Mrs. S. F. Roberts, five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren nursed her with loving care.

Emma Rosanna Alderson.
Forney, Montana.

PATTON.—Hilliard J. Patton was born [illegible], and died Jan. 18, 1896. He was converted quite young and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hazle Green, Tenn. He afterwards moved to Mississippi (about 1845 [illegible]), and died a consistent member at Pleasant Valley, on Guntown charge, North Mississippi Conference. Bro. Patton loved his church. Having served as class leader and steward, he knew its needs and was in sympathy with his pastor in all his work. He has been called to his reward. It is our loss, his gain.

He was married first to Margaret Ann [illegible], who died July 17, 1851. He was married the second time to Martha [illegible], Jan. 11, 1853, who died Jan. 7, 1895. She gave him eleven children, three of whom have crossed over the river. Eight are left, besides his grandchildren and friends, to mourn his departure. Peace to his memory! May the blessings of God abide with those who are bereft! His pastor,

J. W. Treadwell.

The Strength of Protestantism.

Protestants sometimes contemplate with alarm the encroachments of Romanism, and well they may. There was never such an organization upon the face of the earth since the sun first shone as that controlled to-day from the Vatican. In completeness and attention to detail, in foresight and in obedience, in command and in response, the millions of the Roman Catholic body are marshalled and directed, in every nation and country, as no other body ever was. And they declare their intention of subjugating the whole earth. They announce it to be their purpose to Romanize the United States during the next century.

They are massing their forces in every city and town and village. They are securing eligible sites for church, school, hospital, asylum, orphanage, nunnery, monastery, and cemetery. On hill-top and in valley, in the most central and conspicuous station, on crowded street and showy square, their cross blooms everywhere over their institutions.

And they are securing public positions for their membership and public patronage for their various institutions.

A shrewd bureau at Washington City watches government appropriations and appointments, and their end in every large city secures the lion's share for those of this faith. The army and navy have had more than their share in official positions from this body. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are voted every year for their Indian schools, while our Protestant Churches are refused government aid. It is said that over eighty per cent of the aldermen, police force, fire department, and public-school teachers in Chicago are Roman Catholics, while in many other cities, as Boston and New York, conditions not greatly different from this obtain, while the population should warrant an almost exact reversal of proportions.

Romanists are great managers. They are shrewd politicians. They learn it from Rome, the capital of the ancient Cæsars, who believed in conquering the world. Protestants may well be on their guard against that foreign force which is the disturbing agent at work to destroy every South American republic as soon as organized, and which has set itself to master our own republic.

A paper was presented at the Catholic Congress in Chicago by a Miss Elder, niece of Archbishop Elder, of Cincinnati, which reminds Protestants, however, that all these external manifestations of success and power are not such as to make us despair, if only we, as Protestants, are earnest to understand and maintain the real secret of our superiority.

Miss Elder says that the Roman Catholic Church has lost twenty millions followers in this country, and that there have been good reasons for their turning their backs upon their original church. She says that in intelligence, morality, temperance, spirituality, Protestants are, in general, superior to Romanists, and that unless Roman Catholics develop these, they can not hold their own by means of organization and institutions.

Let us learn from this not to be overawed by all the prodigious missings of force and property which Romanism presents. But let us patiently and persistently spread the light; oppose and break down intemperance; instill morality; advance intelligence; promote spirituality; keep the Bible open, the newspaper circulating, the library stocked; guard the little red school house in the valley and the little church on the hill; preach the gospel truth, and stand by the principles of a true manhood, living in the fear of God. If we do this, and keep well on our guard, we shall preserve our nation as a Christian, to bless and save the world, and to resist successfully all the foes of religious and civil liberty.—Herald and Presbyter.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

An important truth is brought forward by a contemporary when it says: "Were the infidel lecturers as plentiful as the preachers, they could not draw a corporal's guard to hear them. Infidelity never has possessed soaring and enthusing power, and never will. It is a cold, cheerless and unhappy state of mind at best, and has few attracting qualities." To the first sentence of this quotation we call attention. It is worth considering. We believe it to be as true as it is. If preachers were as few as infidel lecturers, the poorest one in the lot would draw multitudes to his ministry. Greatness and fame are not always absolute.—Exchange.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED.

Any lady or gentleman who desires a good business education and a good position should write for free catalogue of Draughon's Practical Business College, Nashville, Tenn. This College guarantees positions under reasonable conditions, and will allow students to deposit money for tuition in a bank until position is secured. It is strongly endorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers, and others.

Has no vacation; students enter any time. Board $10.00. It pays part of railroad fare. Four weeks by Prof. Draughon's method of teaching book-keeping is equal to twelve weeks by the old plan.

SUCCESS A STUDY.

He has prepared books on book-keeping, shorthand and penmanship, especially adapted to home study. Address, stating your wants, J. F. Draughon, President, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

It is just as much the duty of some men to make money as it is of others to preach the gospel. Both will be held equally accountable for the use they make of their talents.

The reason so many people hold themselves in such high esteem is, that they compare themselves at their best with others at their worst.

comes to stay

There is more than one food which will cause the body to increase in weight. A free supply of sugar will do this; so will the starchy foods; cream, and some other fats. But to become fleshy, and yet remain in poor health, is not what you want. Cod-liver oil increases the weight because it is a fat-producing food. But it does far more than this. It alters, or changes, the processes of nutrition, restoring the normal functions of the various organs and tissues.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites, is pure cod liver in a digested condition. So that when a person gains in weight from taking Scott's Emulsion, it is because of two things: First, the oil has acted as a fat-producing food; and, second, it has restored to the body a healthy condition. Such an improvement is permanent; it comes to stay.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.25; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.75). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to February, '97. (A little later it will be March, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2.25.

DOMESTIC.

A great fire occurred in Philadelphia on Feb. 2. Loss, over two million dollars.

The free silver substitute for the bond bill was passed through the Senate by the votes of Southern and Western senators.

The opening for business, on Feb. 1 of the new St. Charles Hotel, in this city, marks an important era in the city's history.

The lieutenant-governor of Kentucky declares that using a railroad pass is good and sufficient ground for the expulsion of a member of the Legislature.

Ex-President Harrison has written a letter to the Indiana State Republican Committee disclaiming that he is not a candidate for re-election to the presidency.

The Massachusetts savings banks hold deposits to the amount of $440,000,000, an average of $1,000 for each family depositing, and the deposits are rapidly increasing.

Belva A. Lockwood does not seem to have elevated the practice of law very much. She has been disbarred from practicing before the Pension Bureau for taking an illegal fee.

The Atlanta Exposition did so well that now it is proposed to preserve the grounds and buildings and have one every year. A State exposition is to be held the coming Fall.

At Defiance, Ohio, the Bell Telephone Company are giving telephones for nothing. The trouble was started by a local company, which proposed to put telephones in private residences for a dollar a month, and in stores for two.

The State treasurer of Georgia has to give bond for $200,000 and gets a salary of $2,000, and Robert U Hardeman, who has filled the office for a long time with distinguished integrity and ability, says that he does not want it any longer.

The Chicago Board of Education is greatly bothered by applications from the parents of white children, asking for transfers to other schools, where the negroes are not in a preponderance, and especially from the schools which have negro teachers, as some half a dozen have.

A few days ago there was launched from the ways of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company a large gunboat, destined for the United States navy. This vessel is the third such ship built by the Newport News Company, that corporation having secured the contract to build the three gun vessels authorized at the first session of the Fifty-third Congress.

The Citizens' League, which was organized by the people of this city for the express purpose of fighting municipal corruption and for securing the election to office in the city government of men who are honest and capable, and who will be faithful to their trust, has established head quarters and is already preparing for the city campaign by establishing branch leagues and clubs in the various wards of the city.

FOREIGN.

The American engineer, John Hays Hammond, in trouble in South Africa, is said to draw the biggest salary paid anywhere in the world to an individual employee, $60,000 a year.

Hon. A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury and conservative leader in the House of Commons, declared in a speech that England and the United States should form an alliance, and the two countries thus united could reform the world.

News comes from Yokohama that the English squadron in the Pacific is being augmented by six warships. At the same time a considerable increase is being made in the Japanese navy. England and Japan are evidently preparing energetically to meet possible complications arising out of the Corean and Sino-Chinese understanding.

Our quarrel with Great Britain over that country's attempt to seize a portion of Venezuelan territory does not appear to have seriously impressed the European powers with the majesty of the Monroe doctrine. Germany, at least, has not been awed, as she proposes to coerce Venezuela into paying a large debt due Germany capitalists for certain railroad building.

Representative Money, of Mississippi, the senator-elect from that State, has recently received advices from Cuba which are of considerable interest. According to the statements of Mr. Money's informant, the devastation of that island has been carried on to such an extent that poverty, famine and wide-spread suffering will surely prevail in the near future unless by some means the hostilities are brought to a close.

A Chance to Make Money.

It seems strange that people will not improve their opportunities; they all want to get rich, but have not enough enterprise to succeed. I believe any man or woman can clear $10 a day in the Dish Washer business, as it is just booming now; but not one in 500 has push enough to enter the field and reap the harvest. I have been in the business over a year, and have cleared over $20 a day, without canvassing any. I have examined all the Dish Washers, but none equal the Climax. Address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you how to proceed, and you can do well in city or country, as every family wants a Climax Dish Washer. When we know of opportunities like this, I think it our duty to inform others, as this is a chance for all to make money honestly and easily.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to report the following amounts that have not been reported on Indian Mission fund on last year and paid on salary, to wit:

DeKalb Church, $5 50; Fannin Church, $5; Drake's Church, $1 25.

Collected to help pay on land by Bro. F. B. Ormond, the pastor, to wit: Sumpterville Church, Ala., $2.

Collected by myself to pay on land the following amounts, to wit: A Methodist lady, and sent by the New Orleans Indian Mission Association, $3; Miss Etna Howard, $1; Mrs. N. E. Denny, $1.50; A Friend, $2; Mrs. M. A. Murff, $3.50; Mrs. E. G. Pepper, $5; T. A. Overton, $2.

Many thanks to all the givers, and may God's richest blessings rest upon them all. Let others help us at once, for we want to pay for the land this Spring and then raise something on salary later. I think we owe about $165 or $175, and have been owing it for several years, and it certainly ought to be paid; and if it is not, we will lose the land.

Brethren, sisters, help us, and let us pay it out at once. Send where it is convenient. Postoffice money order on Hermanville, when it is not registered letter. Send.

How a Woman Paid Her Debts.

A lady in Lexington made the following statement: I am out of debt, and thanks to the Dish Washer business.

In the past six weeks I have made $530, and feel like giving other ladies the benefit of my experience. Dish Washers are in general demand, and anyone can sell them with an immense profit to the seller.

The machine is lovely. With it you can wash and dry the family dishes in two minutes. I believe that in two years every enterprising family in the United States will have a Dish Washer. You can get full particulars by addressing THE MOUND CITY DISH WASHER Co., St. Louis, Mo.

There is big money in this business for any bright lady or gentleman. I am going to make the most of this opportunity, and expect to clear $4,000 the coming year. I need the money, and why not make it? ₩ MISS C.

"THERE'S ALL ETERNITY BEFORE."

BY JULIA H. JOHNSTON.

Suggested by these words, spoken by Chaplain C. C. McCabe, and inscribed to him.

Time's fair and fleeting yesterdays
Are heaping high the storied past;
With gleaming honrs, all jewel-set,
The treasure-house is filling fast.
But why regret the vanished gold
Of Time's most dear and hallowed store?
Why monrn the nnreturning days?
"There's all eternity before."

The ship that spreads her canvas white
To meet the strong and fav'ring breese,
Goes speeding toward the wished-for port
That beckons o'er the wind-tossed seas.
Time's mariner is outward bonnd,
Nor marks the dim receding shore;
The land-locked harbor may be fair—
"There's all eternity before!"

The baffled hopes, the hindered toil,
The bonds which eager spirits wear,
Shall find a recompense at last
When dawns the nightless morning fair,
Life's fret and fever then shall cease,
The scourging haste shall all be o'er,
The long, long leisnre comes apace—
"There's all eternity before."

O solemn warning! Comfort sweet!
These days and deeds are not the whole;
This broken life shall be complete
When Jesus calls the trusting soul.
Ring, tuneful bells of passing time,
Till time itself shall be no more,
While Faith repeats the chant sublime,
"There's all eternity before!"

Education and the Ministry.

The scope of every calling is broader to-day than ever before. The specializing so characteristic of the present-day scientific and literary investigation does not restrict, but enlarges the field of individual activity, because all truth is so related to all other truth that he who does not see his special subject in its relations does not rightly see it at all. A striking confirmation of this assertion is to be found in the recent developments of several branches of science. Most of the great discoveries in the practical department of medicine are attributable to the researches of men in other lines. Pasteur is the originator of the germ theory, which has revolutionized the practice of medicine, though himself not a physician. The discovery of chloroform, through which there has been opened a practically unlimited field of operative surgery, was not the achievement of medicine. In like manner psychology has been revolutionized by the work of physiologists. Perhaps the newest and most hopeful development of theology—biblical—is largely due to the impulse of literary critics, while the refinements of philosophy have come almost since the day of the inductive, or fact, sciences began.

Especially true is it that the teacher of religion comes in contact with all aspects of knowledge. His postulates and the articles of his creed are being contradicted or confirmed by the new knowledge. He can not remain indifferent to it, and continue to influence the minds of the educated and thinking people of his day. An able teacher said to me the other day: "I can not preach my old sermons; they will not fit the times." Of course, the truths of the religion of Jesus Christ are the same to-day that they have always been; but in order to make these truths factors in the minds of men, the teacher of religion must bring them to men in appropriate forms. These forms must be drawn from the life of the people. To read one of the magnificent, analytical sermons of Dr. Barrow to a modern congregation would be to empty the church. It is of no use to say that the people ought to come for instruction and edification, and receive the truth, whatever form it is presented in. The gospel must be given to men in such a way that they will receive it, and think about it, or they will do no good. No ministry ever did better illustrate the power of adaptation to the times and the thought of the people than that of the prophets of the Old Testament; and the teachings of our Lord are always in such forms as to give them ready entrance into the minds of men. Current belief, passing events, the hopes of the generation in which he lived, all found place in his teachings.

The diffusion of knowledge is more general than in any former times that we know anything about. The number of college-bred man is far greater in every line of life than heretofore. It was once believed that a college education was needful for only those who were to follow the learned professions; but large numbers of college-bred men are now to be found in the commercial and mechanical walks of life, and in the learned professions themselves the average of general and special scholarship is higher than formerly. The standards of matriculation in professional schools are higher, in many institutions requiring degrees. So much for the increase of scholarship. The increase in general information upon many subjects is in even greater proportion. Much has been justly charged against the sensational character of newspapers and magazines; but in these same journals and periodicals are to be found accurate accounts of the latest researches in science, and the doctrines of religion are discussed with a freedom and fearlessness that make fearful saints quake. Many people who have not had much school training have attained no inconsiderable degree of exact, though fragmentary, knowledge through reviews and magazines and general newspaper reading.

A higher standard of intellectual training and furnishing is particularly evident among leaders of men. Of course, comparisons in such matters are not easily made with exactness; but I think it will hardly be questioned that the self-made man is not now as frequently met in positions of leadership in any line as formerly. It is certainly not so in the Methodist Church. The men that are coming to the front, and that are rapidly increasing in influence among their clerical brethren and laymen, are college men. The men that are sought for the better class of appointments—and for all appointments, indeed—in the Methodist Churches are the college men. The men who stay out their time, and are then moved, to the regret of those to whom they have ministered four or five years, are college men. The editors, writers of books, and Bishops in the church, are chiefly men who have had the advantage of college training. The variations from this rule are so few as to figure only as exceptions.

All these facts point to the increased need of educated men in the Christian ministry. They point out that education greatly enhances the value of whatever work the worker undertakes. A man's original forces may be immensely augmented by education, and the value of the output of his energy and the expenditure of his time will be usually in the direct ratio of his cultivation. Suppose a man come to a manufacturer seeking employment. He is asked what he can do. His answer must be a statement of what his education has been. If he says, "I can do manual work," his usefulness is something; if he has manual training, it is greater; if he has intellectual and manual training to enable him to repair or make machinery, he is still more valuable; if he can make designs for manufactured goods, his value is greater still; if he understands physical sciences also, so that he can devise means of economizing force and material, he is a still more valuable man. His original force and mentality may be no greater than that of the man who can do only manual work; the difference is in education. The ability and influence of the brain worker especially increase in the ratio of his education. The minister's range of influence and his sphere of usefulness, not less than those of any man, are affected by his culture. There are, of course, many factors entering into the different results—fervency of spirit, faithfulness, and diligence; but I have no doubt that, excepting always those prerequisites of spirituality and the prophet's call, the principal difference between men in the ministry is that attributable to difference in educational advantages and their use. The common demand for the educated man has its rise in the manifest superiority of the educated man over the uneducated.

I wish to use what has just been stated in general terms as the basis of an appeal for help in educating young ministers in Louisiana. A year ago a Minister's Educational Aid Society was formed for the purpose of aiding young ministers to obtain college education. Its method of doing this is to lend sums of not over one hundred dollars a year each to needy students, the loans to be repaid as soon as possible after graduation. The income of the association is derived from membership dues of $5 a year. These dues go out in loans to students, and continue to bear rich returns throughout the life-time of the beneficiary, while the same money repaid into the treasury of the association, goes forth again, and again, upon its mission, constituting a permanent source of help. Thus the influence of such benevolence is doubled. Its returns are immediate in the increased efficiency of the men who have been educated through it; and the gift is not expended once and for all, but goes on in a circle of ever-recurring use in a given direction, heightening the power and compounding the very piety of the men who minister to us in the pulpit. There is no means of telling who of us shall be directly affected by this work. The layman who gives his five dollars a year to sustain a young man at college may be blessed in his own soul's life through the ministry of the very man whose ability to bring the gospel to him has been derived from the gift. His children may be converted through the same instrumentality. I do not wish to appeal to a selfish motive, but this consideration may make the value of this benevolence more evident.

The Educational Aid Association has now two young men at Centenary College, and a third will soon come under the benefits of its loan fund. But the need exceeds present ability. I, therefore, call upon all who are interested in the education of our young ministers to aid us by becoming members of the association, or by contributing in any amounts they can afford to its fund. One hundred dollars means a year's schooling for a young minister every four years perpetually. Remittances and payment of dues may be made by check or money order to Rev. R. H. Quittin' Fellows.

In nearly every pastoral charge there are one or more quittin' fellows—man or woman who are going to quit for every little thing. They are a troublesome set to the pastor and to all earnest workers in the church. What makes it worse is the fact that they are often, in other respects, pretty good people. They hold the quitting privilege as a cudgel to beat the pastor and the other members over the head with. If things do not go to their notion, if they do not have their way in all matters, both great and small—specially in the small—why, they are going to quit. It requires great patience to get along with this class, and generally the more they are humored, the worse they get. The quitting propensity grows by what it feeds upon. One of this class in a church is always a majority, no matter what the one hundred and one other members may want. They are a minority, so far as this single quittin' fellow is concerned. He must have his way, or he will burst the church wide open. If he fails in that, he quits the church.

The quittin' fellow, male or female, fails to see how ugly his contrariness makes him appear to other people; and he seems to be wholly unconscious of the fact that his conduct is un-Christian. This fellow bobs up in nearly everything connected with the work of the church. If a new church is to be built, he puts in his say among the first about the size, shape or plan of the house, or in which end the doors must be cut, or where the pulpit is located; and if his views are not accepted and acted upon, why, he is going to quit. It may be he sets his head about who shall, or shall not, be pastor; and the Bishop, Conference and preachers must yield, or endure the awful calamity of losing this most important of all the members.

In rare instances, and at long intervals, the quittin' fellow is a preacher, and ugly and sinful as it is, he says: "If I do not get this appointment or that, I'll quit. I've got to have my way, and go where I want to go, or I won't go at all." A preacher of this kind generally gets a chance to quit, and that mighty quick. When he wakes up, and has time to cool down, he discovers—greatly to his surprise, no doubt—that the work goes along just as well without him. He quits, but the work moves right along. It was a case of self-importance—nothing more.

In other places the quittin' fellow is found in the choir—often in the person of the organist—some pet little miss, who gets miffed and falls back on the holding back-straps, and undertakes to balk the whole team. She would be pretty if she did not act so ugly, and sweet if she were not so very hateful. When I see one of this kind, I always say to myself, if not to some person: "Well, women are all angels; but there are angels from two different countries. It matters much which country a female angel is from."

The quittin' fellow is often found in the Sunday-school, and here he is a troublesome customer to deal with, and can do much harm, specially so if he is a quittin' fellow who does not quit. Many of this class are neither in nor out. They hang on just close enough to give trouble and to do as much harm as possible. If they would only quit in both fact and form, they would confer a great favor on all concerned.

A church of one hundred and fifty members once bought an organ. It lay in the depot for six months. There was a quittin' brother, a good man, a man of wealth and influence in that church, who vowed that when that organ went in at one door of the church, he and his family would go out at the other. Nobody wanted to offend him, and yet one hundred and forty-nine members wanted the organ, and one did not. At last they sent for a preacher, a great friend of this quittin' brother. Reason was wasted on him. He had made up his mind. At last the preacher said: "My dear brother, if you quit the church, it will ruin it. It will ruin Southern Methodism. It will imperil Methodism on the continent of America."

"What do you mean?" asked the brother.

"Well, sir, I mean just this: that if you think the church is in any way dependent on you or your family, you are badly mistaken. If you and your family were all dead and buried, the church would go right along just as it did before you were born."

Then he said: "Tell them to put the organ in, and I will stand it if I can."

He was a good man; one of a thousand, and one of ten thousand, of the quittin' class.

GILDEROY.

Centenary College.

Our second term began Jan. 20, with an accession of fifteen new students enrolled since Conference convened here in December. The work being done now is better than ever. Our students, for the most part, are diligent and faithful. Our professors, in their self-denial to carry on the work, deserve the commendation of all the Methodists in Louisiana. The session of our Conference here opened the eyes of some of our preachers and laymen, and the college will reap great good in the future.

At the request of the Conference, Bishop Hargrove appointed me financial agent of the college, with authority to travel through the State in the interest of Christian education. It appears to me that each successive appointment, as it comes to me, comes with a heavier load. This is the biggest burden I have ever had laid upon me, but I cheerfully take it in the hope that I may awaken the Louisiana Methodists on the subject of sustaining our church schools. The peculiar and unheard-of way in which Centenary College came to be the sole property of the Louisiana Conference is clear evidence that God's providence was in the matter. He put this college in our hands to try us and see what was in our hearts in regard to Christian education. We have now, by this providence, what we never had before, and that is, an open field in which to expend our money and energy in the direction God calls us. The question for our people to consider is this: Shall we honor the trust God imposes in us by this special providence, and work together to build up the college?

As financial agent, my first visit was to our churches in New Orleans. By special invitation of the Preachers' Meeting, I spent Jan. 26 with them. All the preachers dismissed their night congregations, and we had a large representative audience of Methodists in Carondelet Street Church. I was glad to see prominent man and woman from all the churches. My talk was well received, and much good was accomplished. The old students of Centenary, who reside in New Orleans, under the guidance of Judges Sambola and Ellis, will heartily co-operate in any plans for furthering the interests of the college. The "elect women" of New Orleans Methodism gave me assurances of substantial aid, and those women have never failed yet. Who should be more interested in Christian education than the woman who give their boys to the Church and State? I was much gratified with the results of my first appearance before the church as financial agent for the college. As the way opens, I expect to visit other points.

In the Living Present.

The political chaplain of the House of Representatives has been the unenviable cause of the introduction of a new phrase. It is "stump-prayer." When recently, in his so-called prayer, in spread-eagle style, he alluded to the Venezuelan difficulty, the auditors expressed their merriment and, perhaps, approbation by clapping hands.

The daily tidal motion of the briny waters along the border of the sea is to be utilized. In Santa Cruz, Cal., the machinery of an electric power-house is to be propelled by the either incoming or outgoing water. The power-house will illumine the city and propel the trolley-cars.

The young Czarina is reported to have shed tears when told that the child to which she had given birth was not a boy, but a girl. Her husband, perceiving the distress, comforted her promptly by saying: "If our child had been a son, he would belong to the empire. Being, however, a daughter, she will be exclusively ours."

Dr. Porter, of the Episcopal Church, bewails the fact, true or untrue, that the Sunday-school trains a generation of non-church goers. Heard other church dignitaries express similar lamentations. But the church is going on conquering and to conquer all the same.

Zola says in Le Figaro, in Paris: "Pope Leo is honest and hare alternately. In the United States he condemns what in Europe he approves. As a true Jesuit, he is governed solely by expediency. Thus, in turn, he called the white black, and the black white."

When recently the opponents of arbitration and compromise, in order to voter to the Fenian vote, clamored for war against Great Britain, the Washington Star treated the unholy advocates to the following doggerel:

"Let dogs delight to bark and bite;
To do so is their fate.
They can't be turned. They never learned,
You see, to arbitrate."

The Duke of Cambridge, inspector of public squares in London, ordered the dog-cemetery in Hyde Park closed. Many of more money than sense had erected costly mausoleums over the remains of their dead canines. The death of his favorite dog led to the premature death of Lord Pearce.

Miss Haygood at Atlanta.

Miss Laura Haygood made her farewell talk this afternoon to a large audience in the First Methodist Church of Atlanta. It was a memorable hour, and as such must live in the hearts of those who were present and heard the eloquent plea for workers, looked upon the still more eloquent face of that grand woman, listened to the soft, rich tones of her magnetic voice.

Very earnest and thoughtful were the faces of men and women that were turned as if for help and direction to wards hers. Or it might be said, women and men, for few of the latter were present. Part of the reason for this is given in saying that the meeting was held under the direction of the Woman's Home Mission Society, but we believe most of the reason lay in the truth of that old, old story of the risen Christ, when a woman was first to tell the tidings of goodness.

One central idea Miss Haygood held forth continually, and would not allow it for a moment to lose prominence or power—that there could be only one mission work, one supreme purpose, one master motive directing the laborers in Christ's vineyard. There must not be neglect of any field for another, there must be harmony between home and foreign interests, for these were simply divisions of the same grand whole, each needing the other and both commanded by Christ during his last days on earth.

Miss Haygood talked as only those can who have given up every individual purpose and ambition of this life to be fully controlled by the divine will.

Home, friends, country, are on the altar; and those who have seen the glow of consecration lighting up the strong, kind face, know that she has not lost her life, but gained it.

She appealed directly to the women who were present, reminding them of the obligation resting upon them to serve. That was Christ's mission on earth. She had taken it for hers. She appealed to them through their patriotism, and spoke earnestly of the splendid evidence many of them had already given of their power to work in a cause when their hearts were enlisted. They had cared to work for the glory of Atlanta when called on to help make the great Exposition a success. Did they care as much for the glory of His kingdom? Their time and thought and money and labor had been faithfully given for the name of Atlanta and the pride of Georgia. Would they not bring these gifts to the King? Women who had hardly thought it possible to leave their children once a month to attend the missionary meeting, to say nothing of time to work for the cause, put their love into this work and held on untiringly, day after day, week after week, month after month, until success and fame crowned the great enterprise of Atlanta. Yet they claimed a citizenship in heaven that outranked the glory of all other lands. Could they not be zealous for the Eternal City, not made with hands?

In less than six months the women had raised $17,000 for their beautiful building on the Exposition grounds; in another six months as many more. In this city were about 4,000 Methodist women, and thousands of Christian women in the other denominations. Had missionary results been commensurate with the numbers and strength and talent of this host?

Once or twice during her address the speaker paused, and for a moment seemed mastered by a deep emotion no words could interpret. Then, with steady voice, calm and sweet as ever, she went on. A last appeal was made nearly in these words: "Think what you owe to a Christian civilization. If all the institutions that teach Christianity were closed, if all the orphanages that shelter and train childhood were abolished, if all the churches of our land were swept away and you no longer had the blessing and the protection of their influence, what would it mean to you, as women, my sisters? Arouse your hearts to think on these things."

Emory has more boys this year than ever before. On the first day we had 296 boys to annex to the roll. Since the holidays began the Harrison Library has been put up, and now makes our library number 20,000 volumes. One who has not examined the library as it now is, can hardly form an idea of its increased value. It is to be remembered that the Harrison Library contains about 10,000 volumes, and when you take down book after book at random, and find in nearly every one of them marginal notes and references by Dr. Harrison, giving evidence that he has studied it closely, you can form some conception of his scholarship.—Wesleyan.

When Spurgeon was asked why he never came to this country, he replied: "Why, I would rather go to Hindostan. I could be of much more service there, and then I am afraid my views on the communion would be so different from my brethren in the United States that I would scarcely feel at home with all their kindness. Do you suppose for a moment that I could sit down to a communion table that separated me from my loving Christian mother, who taught me in the divine truths of God's infinite love and mercy on her bended knee? No, never."—Alabama Christian Advocate.

It is about time the North stopped criticising the South for its treatment of the negro, when Atlanta built a special Negro Building and welcomed a negro orator at the exposition's opening, while Bishop Arnett could scarcely find a hotel in Boston to receive him the other day, and three students, picked pupils from the Hampton Institute, were recently refused accommodations at three leading hotels in Hartford, Conn., all on account of their color.—Standard (Chicago).

DO THY LITTLE.

Do thy little, do it well;
Do what right and reason tell.
Do thy little; God has made
Million leaves for forest shade.
Smallest stars their glory bring.
God employeth everything.
All the little thou hast done—
Little battles thou hast won,
Little mastories achieved,
Little wants with care relieved;
Little words in love expressed,
Little wrongs at once confessed;
Little favors kindly done,
Little toils thou didst not shun;
Little graces meekly worn,
Little slights with patience borne—
These are treasures that shall rise
Far beyond the smiling skies.

Worldliness in the Church.

In this week's issue of the ADVOCATE is a timely article, "A Revival Needed," by Bro. T. W. Lewis, calling upon the pastors and members of the church to pray and work for revivals all over the North Mississippi Conference this year.

That the churches are sadly in need of awakening there is no question. Why are they in such a deplorable lukewarm condition? I think the question can be answered in one word—"worldliness." It is a sad, but true statement, that it is a rare thing to find a live, spiritual, progressive church. What will more certainly sap the vital, spiritual life of a church than for its members, especially the leading ones, to attend theaters, dances and progressive euchre parties, playing cards for prizes? Such members would be horrified and think themselves insulted to be accused of gambling, and yet what is the difference between playing cards for prizes and playing for money? Unquestionably the difference is only in the value of the article played for, the principle being the same. I am told that the ladies display the same eagerness and excitement to win as does the gambler who makes his living by his profession. Some of these members will not play progressive euchre for prizes, but play progressive games, looking upon the former as an awful sin, but the latter an innocent amusement—a distinction without a difference to the candid mind. It is strange how easily we can silence the admonitions of conscience, and persuade ourselves there is no harm in doing things our inclinations lead us to do! It is useless for members of the church to try and deceive themselves in thinking there is no harm in indulging in these things. If they will only stop and closely examine themselves, they will easily discover their spiritual condition and zeal for the welfare of their church are at a much lower ebb than before they engaged in these things, that they are living upon a lower Christian plane. Such members are generally conspicuous by their absence from church and prayer meetings, and their lessened interest in all church work. If they only injured and jeopardized themselves, it would not be so disastrous to the church; but evil is contagious, and others, who perhaps had looked upon them as model Christians, still follow their lead, until finally they participate in these indulgences themselves, being convinced by the specious arguments and examples of these models that they have heretofore been too puritanic in their Christian views and lives. Other conscientious members become disheartened and discouraged at the loose church discipline, until after a while there is no life left, and, like the church of the "Laodiceans," become lukewarm, neither hot nor cold, and in a condition to be "spewed out of the mouth of God."

Right along this line the preachers often come in for their share of blame and responsibility for this condition of the church. They see and recognize the cause; but instead of standing upon the walls of Zion and warning the people of their danger, and boldly preaching against these evils, they often utterly ignore them or else preach so leniently that some members actually believe they do not oppose them, and the pastors lay themselves open to the criticism that they are afraid to deal with these leading, good paying members, lest the church lose them and their large contributions, and thus bring a reproach upon the church.

With these causes existing, there is no wonder there are so few genuine revivals, or the difficulty of getting up a successful one so great. These things will have to be eliminated, and the churches will first have to be baptized with the Holy Spirit, and become a unit in their desire and efforts for revivals, before there will be any success.

Why is it, Mr. Editor, that the churches these days do not enforce the discipline as in the long past ago? If I were the pastor of a church, I would rather have a dozen consistent, consecrated members than have the names of hundreds upon the roll whose lives were such that the world only knew them as members by being informed by some one, their lights shining too dimly to be seen. While I do not believe in dealing too rashly and too harshly, I do believe it to be to the spiritual interest of the churches to strictly enforce discipline. If members violate the rules, or if they persist in doing things their church regards as inimical to it and to themselves, they should first be approached in a gentle, Christian spirit and reasoned with, and failing to prevail upon them to desist, they ought to be dealt with according to the Discipline. May the heart of every Christian, of every denomination, say Amen to Bro. Lewis' suggestion, and may we get ourselves in that state of preparation that the "windows of heaven shall be opened and such abundant blessings be poured out that our hearts can not contain them," and a revival wave roll from one end of this Conference to the other, resulting in the gathering in of many souls to Christ's fold.

LAYMAN.

Greenville, Miss.

Firecrackers.

Why don't our people kneel during prayer? A layman says, "Our preachers are to blame." He says when he moved to town he always knelt during prayer, but he noticed that at a District Conference the preachers themselves didn't kneel. Shame on them! Why is it that when country people move to town they take rheumatism, preachers as well as people? No wonder our children don't kneel. We are raising a generation of irreverent Methodists.

The Bishops get after us little fellows for not following the Discipline. How many of you ever heard a Bishop close his Sunday morning prayer with the Lord's Prayer, as the Discipline directs? Of the seven, I have heard only two.

At a Methodist Church the old people complained that the choir sang tunes they didn't know. On investigation it was found that the choir had sung the tunes the hymns were written to, which leads us to remark that our present hymn book is the finest collection of sacred poetry in the world, but it is the poorest music. It is said that of the nine members of the Committee on Revision of the Hymn Book, only two could sing.

Choirs come in for a large share of criticism. Like the dear pastor and the beloved presiding elder, they may need a little criticising now and then. Whenever they seek for artistic singing at the expense of spiritual results, they are wrong. Some dear souls are frightened at the sound of a discordant note, for it jars on their trained and sensitive nerves like distant thunder.

Mississippi has a new governor. A great company of young people from different parts of the State came to witness the inaugural ceremonies, and to attend the ball. Not all of them, for some of them are Methodists. What does it mean when you see the names of the children of prominent Methodists at the balls and card parties? (Newspapers very often report persons as present at a ball who were not present.—EDITOR.) Do these prominent Methodists believe there is no harm in the fashionable ball and the card table? Or have they lost their grip on their children? Who can answer?

Circumstances alter cases. A brother preacher was conscientiously opposed to any preacher touching a school that was not the property of the church. Afterwards he became president of a school that belonged to private parties. He opposed the plan of appointing a president or a professor to a pastoral charge, and introduced a resolution at the Annual Conference to that effect, but afterwards he was both president of a school and in charge of an appointment. He thought it was all right.

Why can't people be natural? Affectation governs the world. A preacher has one tone for the parlor and another for the pulpit. I thought the old, "And, ah, my brethren, ah," had been relegated to the background, but I heard him the other day. When he first poked his head up I hardly recognized him, but afterwards I remembered my old friend who furnished me amusement many a dull hour. To see a preacher putting on airs, strutting like a peacock, and murdering the Queen's English, is like Bishop Galloway's young Jap going down the street with a stove-pipe hat on, long Prince Albert coat, a gold-headed cane, and no pants.

Easter Offering.

A CARD FROM THE COMMITTEE.

At the last annual meeting of the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, held April 15, 1895, it was resolved to request the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions to approve the observance of Easter Sunday in 1896 for the benefit of the Training-school.

This action was embodied in the report of the managers presented to the Woman's Board in annual session at Meridian, Miss., and was adopted by the Board after amending by adding the words, "where practicable." The amendment was made necessary by the fact that in some Conferences it is the custom for pastors of leading churches to take up collections on that day, hence their already existing plans are not to be set aside or interfered with.

Anticipating the approval of the Woman's Board of Missions, the Board of Managers appointed a committee at the same meeting to prepare a program for Easter Sunday for use in societies and churches observing the day for the benefit of the Training-school.

The committee has finished its work, and the programs will be mailed Feb. 1, that there may be ample time to prepare for the service. Easter Sunday comes on April 5, this year, and collection cards will accompany the programs for the children's offering. It is hoped that our Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues will help the missionary society in this year's offering. The understanding is that in every Conference where there is not a scholarship or leadership to be completed that the Easter offering shall be devoted to the endowment of the Belle Bennett Chair.

$8,335 01 was reported last June as the amount already raised for that chair. It could be completed this year without difficulty if there were strong, united effort throughout the church. To that end let us labor and pray.

"Giving enriches, withholding impoverishes."

This is true of individuals and churches. In answer to prayer, the Holy Spirit can open purses and unlock hearts, can impart the spirit of giving and unfold its blessedness to those who as yet know it not. Believing this, the committee calls on the friends of the school everywhere to pray for this daily until Easter. In this all can help, for those who have no money to give can pray and seek to enlist the sympathies and interest of those who, having wealth, yet are not "rich toward God."

The privilege of giving is not confined to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, nor to our church; but the invitation is extended to all of every name, and to those who are not connected with any church organization, but who desire to help an institution that is designed for the glory of God and the help of man. The larger the endowment, the more widely extended will be the usefulness of the school and the greater the advantages for its students.

For this reason, the committee earnestly prays for active and faithful co-operation.

Bro. Parker Still in a Tangle.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your issue of Jan. 16 another article from Bro. Parker, trying to get out of the tangle; but he fails again, and closes beautifully by moving to excuse me. Yes, brother; I expect you would gladly excuse me; would have done that some time ago. But, no, brother; I am not quite ready to be excused. Later on I will accept your offer with thanks, but not just yet. Brother, you said I "built up an argument in favor of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits," and I said you misunderstood and misrepresented me, and now you try to prove your position by saying I used the word "pulpit" in the paragraph. Well, well. You know, and the readers of the ADVOCATE well know, that I did not use it as favoring unlicensed persons occupying it. I did not say they had the right to occupy our pulpits as preachers, which was the subject being discussed, but had the right to occupy our churches. The superintendent of the Sabbath-school has the right to hold his school in our churches, but he does not occupy our pulpits to hold them; and if he did, not as a preacher. I said: "I did not even refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons, and hence did not build up any argument or even refer to unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits."

Brother, why did you not read and quote the rest of it? Why did you stop at the word "pulpit," and leave out "occupying our pulpits?" If you would have read on, quoted on, my meaning would have been plain; but you stopped short of the meaning, and hence left it confused. You said in your former article I built up an "argument in favor of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits," but you have failed to show it up, and will, for I certainly did not build up any such argument. I said they had a right to use our churches, and we were glad for them to do so; but my argument was all against those unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits or preaching without license.

Now you say: "The ground of my offending lies in the fact that I said he did refer to the pulpits in connection with the subject of unlicensed persons." No, no, brother; you missed your mark again. The offending lies in the fact that you said I built up an argument in favor of unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits, which I did not do, and you have failed to show it up.

My dear brother, I did not intend to use the term "misrepresent" in an offensive sense, or that you would intentionally misrepresent me, but from careless reading or a misunderstanding of my language.

The other part of Bro. Parker's article, with regard to shaking hands with my friends according to discipline, is irrelevant, and too silly to notice. I am not fighting against any one person, but against unlicensed persons occupying our pulpits as regular preachers of the Word, and will. And now I ask to be excused from further discussion of this subject.

A. D. MILLER.

Hermanville, Miss.

Let Us Have Peace.

I have just read Bro. A. D. Miller's article in last ADVOCATE. See nothing in it that Bro. Mellen, or any other brother, need worry over or reply to. I have also read in some paper Dr. W. H. Featherstun's article with interest and profit. I am glad Bro. Featherstun wrote that article. I am sorry it became necessary for him to write such an article, but am truly glad, inasmuch as it became necessary, that he wrote what he did, and in the good, yea, brotherly spirit that he did. It will do many of the brethren good to read carefully and prayerfully what Bro. Featherstun has written.

Now, Mr. Editor, have we not had enough of this? Is it not about time for us to call a halt and spend a little more time in prayer and supplication at a rich throne of grace, for a little more of that charity that "Suffereth long and is kind, . . . doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not provoked, . . . rejoiceth in the truth, heareth all things, . . . endureth all things, and that never faileth?" God bless all our own brethren, give us "pure hearts and right spirits!"

May God bless all the divinely appointed agents, whether they be men or women, evangelist or preachers in charge, or what not! Let us have peace. Oh, for God's sake, let us have peace. Let us all get the peace of God in our hearts, then we will have peace.

Mansfield Female College.

In reference to the change that has taken place in this college, I desire to state that I resigned in June, 1895, to take effect Jan. 22, 1896, and Prof. T. S. Sligh was elected to take my place. The Board of Trustees, including the president, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, have acted honorably in the transfer of the college, and in the purchase of the equipment, to the best interest of the college and of the retiring president.

I hereby express my high appreciation of the management of the Board of Trustees, and my regret at severing the official relation that has so cordially existed during my management. It is a matter of great satisfaction to me that, as I retire, I leave the institution in a better condition than when I took charge eight years ago.

I take pleasure in most heartily commending the new president and his wife to the favor and patronage of the friends and patrons of the institution. They come fully endorsed as worthy and competent, and under their management I hope the institution, so much improved in patronage this Fall, will spring to new life and a larger career.

Indian Mission.

I will give the readers of the ADVOCATE a few facts concerning our work with the red man, as I see it to-day after only a few weeks' experience as a missionary among them. There are some difficulties to contend with. There is some opposition to educating and Christianizing the Indian, even among Methodist people. Nevertheless, the mission is to-day on a boom. I have thanked God often since Conference that the appointing powers of our church, at our last Conference, sent me to preach to the poor Indian, although I told my presiding elder before Conference that I thought some other man would be more suitable for this work. I really love to work with these people; they seem to be hungering and thirsting for the Bread of Life. Thank God an Indian can testify to the saving power and efficacy of the blood of Christ as truly as a Caucasian.

Our second service with these people, held last Sabbath (fourth Sabbath in January), was a very spiritual service. There were quite a number who came forward for prayer, and I had the privilege of baptizing two, and receiving them into the church. In addition to these two, there was another—one who came back to the church, having withdrawn some time prior to this.

There is an idea prevailing that the efforts we, as a church, are putting forth to save the Indians, are amounting to but little good. This is erroneous. These people are so sincere in their devotions, it will do any Christian good to attend their services.

Our mission school at Tallahulok, under the supervision of Miss Minnie Toles, a member of our church, is doing well. In this school the children are not only taught to read, spell, etc., but the Bible is used as a text-book. They are also being trained in singing, as was the case under the supervision of my worthy predecessor, Rev. W. W. Cammack. We are not only striving to improve the Indians mentally, but we are bending our energies to that one end—the salvation of their souls.

There is still a large indebtedness on the land near the church, for which we have bargained. Brethren, we must cancel the debt and secure the land to the church. Who will contribute $10, $20, $5, $2 50, or $1—any amount? Send contribution by money order on Hermanville, Miss., or by registered letter, to Rev. A. D. Miller, agent.

We are also needing some song books in our mission school, as well as for the Sunday-school. Who will send us, by mail, postpaid, one or more copies of "New Life, No. 1"? Please send books to my address, or send me money to buy books with, by registered letter, to Toles, Miss., or by money order on Meridian, Miss.

In one respect, at least, the Indians are in advance of the white people in this country, viz.: the interest manifested in Sunday-school. The schools of the latter generally go into Winter-quarters by November, but our school at the Indian church runs from January to January, superintended by one of their own number.

I ask an interest in the prayers of the editor of the ADVOCATE, and also of all its readers. Oh, that the gospel preached to this people may prove to be the power of God unto their salvation!

F. B. ORMOND, P. C.

Explanation.

MR. EDITOR: I have been asked so many questions since Conference about our work among the Indians of our State, that I deem it necessary to make some explanation for the benefit of all concerned. The church I built and organized (Tallahnick) has been placed on the white circuit (Linwood), and Rev. F. B. Ormond is in charge of the work; and James Johnson (Indian preacher) has been employed by the presiding elder and Missionary Board to travel and preach among the Indians at other points now unoccupied by our church. Miss Minnie Toles, a white lady, a member of our church, a good Christian, and with considerable experience as a teacher, has charge of the Indian school at Tallahulok; and Rev. A. D. Miller has been continued as financial agent to collect specially on the land debt. Thus it will be seen that this Indian work is amply provided for, and, too, at a less expense than before to the Missionary Board. I feel a great interest in this work, to which I consecrated four of the happiest and the most successful years of my life. I trust our friends will respond to the call of Bro. Miller at once, and pay off the land debt, and then we will have a permanent location for a school and church, which we will all feel proud of, and which the Indians will properly appreciate and use to their present and eternal good.

The Apostolic Spirit.

A few months ago the wife of a missionary in Africa was compelled to return to her home in the United States because of failing health. It was a painful parting between the husband and the wife; but under their united labors a successful mission had been established among those heathen tribes, and they felt that the missionary must remain on the field. It was hoped that she would return in a few months with health restored, but very soon her physician told her that her work in that distant land was ended, and that unless her husband speedily returned she would see his face on earth no more. Must the missionary who was standing in his distant field, waiting eagerly for the reinforcements which were so sadly needed in the prosperous mission, abandon the work and know that his flock would be scattered? A martyr's spirit was in the heart of the dying wife. "Do not come home," she wrote. "Stay where you are. Africa needs you more than I do." The spirit of a Christian hero was in the heart of her husband. They were worthy of the days when the apostles died for their Lord. When that spirit prevails in the church of Christ, his kingdom will soon triumph among all nations.

The above clipping from a recent issue of the World for Christ should put to shame those among us who are indifferent to missions or half-hearted in our work for that cause. Surely we in the home-land, surrounded by friends and loved ones, should be unceasing in prayers, untiring in labors, and abounding in gifts, that we may have some part in this work to which our sisters have given themselves and their all, leaving self, sacrifice and toil almost beyond our comprehension.

Sisters, let us take heed to our privileges and responsibilities, lest, while we enjoy, in slothful ease, the blessings with which our Lord has crowned our lives, we miss the benediction, "Ye have done it unto me," and mourn with those to whom he shall say, "Ye did it not."

Selections.

Love to Christ.

Love to Christ smooths the path of duty, and wings the feet to travel it. It is the bow which impels the arrow of obedience; it is the mainspring moving the wheels of duty; it is the strong arm tugging the oar of diligence. Love is the marrow of the bones of fidelity, the blood in the veins of piety, the sinew of spiritual strength—yea, the life of sincere devotion. He which hath love can no more be motionless than the aspen in the gale, the sear leaf in the hurricane, or the spray in the tempest. As well might hearts cease to heat, as love to labor. Love is instinct with activity—it can not be idle; it is full of energy—it can not content itself with littles; it is the well-spring of heroism, and great deeds are the gushings of its fountain; it is a giant—it heapeth mountains upon mountains, and thinks the pile but little; it is a mighty mystery, for it changes bitter into sweet; it can death life, and life death, and it makes pain less painful than enjoyment.—Spurgeon.

The fact that some people can acquire any amount of religion without being any better for it signifies nothing more than that the religion they get is something apart from real life. People who were taught in childhood that the church is a sacred place, and thus learn to themselves to infer that the home is a profane place, regard religion as a sanctuary—a quiet place with dim cathedral lights—a refuge into which they can run when the world, the flesh and the devil prove too many for them. They do not seek a religion that has to do with life, but a religion that is an escape from life. "I know I do wrong to injure my health," said the self-sacrificing mother when urged that it was her religious duty to take care of her body, "but I don't mean what every-day matters of this sort have to do with one's religion." True religion is to the daily life what the blood is to the body. Set apart the blood from the body and both are worthless. If the body is to be kept in health, the blood must go to every part of it. If the life is to be what God intends it to be, religion must pervade every part of it.—Richmond Advocate.

Christian patriotism demands of evangelization. Reform will do away the external abuses, but regeneration must do its work for the heart and life. Our country needs nothing so much as the gospel of Christ. It is light and salt and leaven to the nation as to the individual. Christian living and Christian teaching are the hope of our land to-day. Evangelization is the short cut to national honor and happiness. A revival of religion instinctively a reign of righteousness, results in blessing to community and to the nation. The nations of the earth exist for the sake of the kingdom of Christ. God's plan is to make the nations into one kingdom, and to set his throne in the hearts of men and in the nations of the world, Jesus Christ.—Exchange.

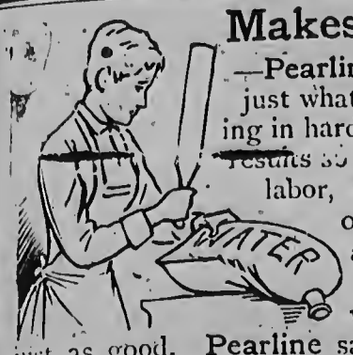
There are pious people who kneel down to God three times a day, but spend the rest of their time bowing down to their circumstances. They believe that God is powerful, but they are sure that their circumstances are omnipotent. "I could be a better Christian but for my circumstances." "I would do more, but my circumstances are so peculiar." "People don't know my circumstances." Yet if we could only realize that all our circumstances, however peculiar, are but a circumstance when laid alongside of God's almighty arm!

Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. And in every approach, in any kind or degree, to the spirit of persecution. If you can not reason or persuade men into the truth, never attempt to force them into it. If love will not compel them to come, leave him to God, the Judge of all.—John Wesley.

A Christian should never plead spirituality for being a sloven. If he be but a shoe cleaner, he should be the best in the parish.—John Newton.

There will be no Christian without Gethsemane, but every praying Christian will find that each Gethsemane has its angel.

A closer walk with the Spirit will save a man from much counteracting in his course to fall in step with Providence.



Makes hard water soft

—Pearline. Every woman knows just what that means to her. Washing in hard water is so difficult, and the results so poor. Pearline reduces the labor, whether you use soft water or hard. But use Pearline, and it's just as easy to wash with hard water as with soft water—and the results are just as good. Pearline saves more things than your labor, though. We'll tell you of these savings from time to time. Keep your eye on Pearline "ads."

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 444 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. T. Griffin: "Mayersville charge consists of only two churches twenty-two miles apart, on the Mississippi river, in Issaquena county. Membership is small, but loyal to the church. We have a nice parsonage at this place, missionary and aid societies in good working order. We expect a prosperous year for our Lord's kingdom. Our quarterly meeting will be held Feb. 15 and 16 at Filler's Landing. People seem to be as healthy here as in the hills."

Rev. C. W. Huff Nicholson, Miss.: "At the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference I was read out on Nicholson mission. We arrived here on Jan. 2, of this year. We were cordially received. The following is my report for January: We have six appointments, and met them all with the exception of one, the inclemency of the weather preventing us. Miles traveled, 95; sermons preached, six; pastoral visits, seventeen; prayer meetings, ten. Pray for us."

Rev. A. B. Nicholson: "I see in the minutes of the last Mississippi Conference that I received three hundred dollars from the Conference fund. I did not get that much in the last two years. I would be glad if it was so, for I am sure I need it. I would say nothing about it, but other claimants will think it so, and that partiality was shown me. I have been confined to my house five months, and confined to my bed two months. My wife is in the same condition. We took la grippe last Fall, and I do not hope ever to fully recover, but while the world is so dark outside, we have a little heaven of our own in our little humble home. I wish it can be so. We never loved Methodist preachers as we do now. They are so good to us in our affliction."

Rev. J. T. Nicholson, Newton and Hickory: "Bro. W. W. Simmons, our new presiding elder, was with us Jan. 11 and 12. He made a fine impression and did the people good. 'The right man in the right place,' is the general impression we hear about him. D. T. West was with us on the twenty-fifth and twenty-seventh instant. His delightful and irrepressible wit, pathos and logic captured the people, and they responded cheerfully to his appeal for Science Hall. Millsaps College was founded in wisdom, and the appointment of Dr. West, agent, is in keeping with its wise administration. He will do the church good wherever he goes. He will wield a wide and mighty influence for good among the young men of Mississippi. We have had some valuable accessions to our church since Conference. The work of the new year has opened hopefully."

Rev. R. A. Meek, Clarksdale, Miss.: "We are now beginning to feel at home in our new field. The people have been uniformly kind and courteous, and so far as I am able to judge, the outlook is favorable. The parsonage here is neat and comfortable. The best that can be said of the church is that it is quite picturesque. It is high perched upon an Indian mound, with the Yazoo river only a hundred or two yards in the rear. We greatly need a church here. Two weeks ago I thought I would have no trouble in erecting a seven or eight-thousand-dollar brick building, but since the assignment of the Clarksdale Bank and Trust Company the prospect for the enterprise is by no means encouraging. Many of our members lost heavily, and it is now doubtful whether they will be able to meet their subscriptions. This is my first experience with the Mississippi people. The conditions here are entirely different from what they are in the hill section of the State. Here we have but little moral sentiment. Worldliness dominates; wickedness is bold and defiant. The sanctity of the Sabbath is openly disregarded. The people are social, respectful and kind, but spirituality is appallingly scarce. We need a great religious awakening, a moral earthquake. It will come! This whole section will yet pay homage and fealty to our King! My predecessors Lacy, Wyatt, and Randolph—did much good here and left delightful impressions behind. The last-named in his honors as presiding elder graciously. Earnest, faithful, and capable, he is in high favor with the people. They would like to keep him four years more. Bro. McIntosh has been to see us. These evangelists will come where the grazing is good. Just can't be kept away. Bro. Hargrove's sudden death was a great shock to us in North Mississippi. We had no better man, no better minister more devoted to his calling. To know him was to love him. The charge to which he was assigned always prospered. Only two weeks ago I was in his home, discussing with him the subject of holiness. To-day he is in the home of the pure and holy above. Truly, we live on the borderland of eternity. May the God of all grace comfort and sustain his wife and children!"

Rev. A. J. Jones, Pleasant Hill, Miss.: "This is our fourth year with these good people of Pleasant Hill charge, and we have prospect of the best year of the four. The good people of this work have treated us royally ever since we first came to them. The substantial tokens of their appreciation have been shown in many ways. These are the best people in many respects it has ever been my privilege to serve. Pen nor tongue can't express my gratitude for their kindness. Dr. Wier, our new presiding elder, was with us last Saturday and Sunday at Baker's Chapel—that being the time and place of our first Quarterly Conference, where we had a good time together. I believe the impression made upon all was good—at least, I am sure the Doctor impressed us most favorably. All in all, it was about the best quarterly meeting we have had on this charge since my connection with the work. The pastor's report on Sunday-school interest and general state of the church was 'good,' and encouraging reports from the stewards of the charge. Nearly one-fourth of preacher's and presiding elder's salary paid. My health has not been good since Conference. Have tried to preach only twice. The friends have been very kind and charitable towards us in our affliction. The brethren in Quarterly Conference passed resolutions, granting us, at least, two months' vacation that we might go to some more congenial climate to try to recuperate for the Spring and Summer work. Dr. Wier also made a short visit to Pleasant Hill, preaching to a large and appreciative audience Sunday night, where he also united in matrimony Mr. Hayes Robinson and Miss Ella Collins. May happiness and prosperity attend this couple! Our community has had a shadow of sorrow thrown over it by the sad intelligence of the death of little Alma Ross, only daughter of our Bro. and Sister W. M. Ross, who on last Saturday morning, while stooping down near the fire, her clothing caught fire, and before it could be extinguished the little thing was so badly burned that she died in a few hours. Oh! how sad. May the good Lord sustain this heart-broken father and mother! Allow me to say that we have put the 'finishing touch' to the parsonage, and it is not only comfortable and commodious, but a thing of beauty inside and out. Let me say also that this was made possible by organizing a P. and H. M. Society, which was about the first thing we did three years ago when we came here. No preacher need fear to come to Pleasant Hill. I expect to leave for San Antonio, Texas, next week. Pray for us."

The Advocate.

Every neighborhood I go into I find in many homes Methodist papers that have not the endorsement of any Conference. I, of course, do not object to good literature, but I always ask two questions: 'Do you take the ADVOCATE? Who was canvassing for this paper?' and often the reply to the first question is "No," and to the second, "Our preacher." Now, I ask is it right or wrong for our pastors to substitute any paper for the one or ones authorized by our Annual Conference?

I have before me some of the reports of the Committee on Publishing Interests adopted by the Annual Conference. In 1889 the committee says, speaking of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE: "Every preacher and subscriber should use double diligence to make it (the subscription list) ten thousand."

The committee, in December, 1891, says of the same paper: "We urge pastors to give heed to two points: first, a diligent effort to raise the balance of subscription now due. Second, a persistent and earnest effort to obtain new subscribers on a cash basis."

In 1892 the Conference passed this resolution: "That we will use our best endeavors to increase the circulation of our Conference organ and to collect accounts of same."

In 1893 the committee reports: "We need the paper as a means of communication with each other. . . . Our people need it for the information which it alone supplies. . . . No paper can supply its place to us. We must sustain it."

In 1894 the Conference passed this resolution: "That we will earnestly endeavor to put the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE into every Methodist home within our Conference; and that we will do all we can to prevent the ADVOCATE being crowded out by certain other papers published at a distance, which, by adopting racy methods more diverting than commendable, or by stressing some controverted dogma, seek patronage from a wider area and can, therefore, afford to ask lower rates."

Now, I want in all seriousness to ask, Do these adopted declarations and resolutions mean anything? Can I sit on the Conference floor and allow such reports adopted and go to my work with another paper and press its attention upon the people? If I do, am I true to my Conference that gave me an honored place among its members?

Brethren, these are serious questions. Are Methodist preachers as forgetful of their declarations as some politicians are of their platforms? I have been reluctant about writing to the ADVOCATE, for I love to read what men of experience and talent, that are accustomed to write for the press, have written. H. B. TREVILION.

Take it Now.

The collection for the support of our Bishops, take it now, brethren. What is obtained at the beginning of the year is usually, so much clear gain. The subsequent collections will never procure what is due from them, and at the same time add what should have been gathered at the first. Will the presiding elders, and preachers in charge of circuits, stations, and missions, please, therefore, to take the Bishops' collection at once? There are two reasons for believing that the whole amount could be easily raised within the next thirty days: first, because the collection is in popular favor with our people, who love our chief pastors, and delight to honor them; and, secondly, because the Bishops' collection is the smallest collection of all. The Conferences are all over, and the preachers are in their respective fields of labor; we ask them, respectfully and kindly, to collect amounts assessed for Bishops' salary, and forward to the treasurers of their Joint Boards of Finance, that they may send to us. We are expected to settle with all claimants in monthly installments, and it will require money to do that. Brethren, excuse the urgency of our appeal. There is need.

Scrofula in the Neck

Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to February, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.50. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL, PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

Reducing the Waste.

The Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in Oklahoma have made an amicable adjustment of their work so as to lessen the former wasteful expenditure of men and money in that territory by the two organizations, in attempting here and there to sustain more church organizations than the people needed. It has been agreed that hereafter the Presbyterians will not enter a town already occupied by the Congregationalists, and vice versa; while concessions are also made whereby one or the other denomination will withdraw from certain fields which have been hitherto occupied by both of them. A similar agreement is needed in many Western States. The sight of six or eight starveling churches in a little town where only two are required is a spectacle far from edifying.—Central Advocate.

This is common sense in religion. It is to be hoped that it will prove contagious. Our own church at the last General Conference took steps in this direction, albeit the beginning was small. For our part we look forward to the day when we shall have federation not only with the other great family of Methodism, but with other ecclesiastical organizations as well. It is true that it will not do to shake the tree until the apple is ripe, but the apple will ripen after a while.

Sowing the Wind.

Speaking of the recent speech of Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, the Central Advocate makes the following sensible remarks:

Senator Tillman spoke for two hours in the presence of a large audience, indulging in almost one continuous stream of denunciation of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle. No such coarse harangue was ever heard in the Senate before, and the country may well hope that nothing like it will ever occur again. The worst feature of this outburst was not so much its personal abuse of the President as the dangerous and incendiary attitude which its author assumed. Such epithets as a "besotted tyrant," or "bullheaded and self-idolatrous," might provoke only a smile, but the man who stands up in the highest legislative body of the Republic, and declares that "agrarianism and communism will join hands;" that the millions now on the tramp "will some day take a notion to come to Washington with rifles in their hands to regain the liberties stolen from them," and that "relief must come, either by the ballot, or that an effort will be made in a few years to obtain it by bullets," is a dangerous character. He is sowing the wind, and unless he is suppressed the nation will reap the whirlwind.

Faithfulness in That Which Is Least.

Giving attention to small matters is a bore, and often seems like a waste of time; yet the difference between a bungler and a master workmen is mainly one of thoroughness. Some men do everything well, from the driving of a nail on up to the making of a steam engine. Others do nothing excellently, slight every small piece of work, and then wonder why success does not overtake them. In the search for great opportunities and lofty honors the tendency to despise the day of small things is almost irresistible.

Carelessness in the performance of trivial tasks and unimportant duties is undeniably sure to beget a habit of carelessness in executing all work. Habits are but the inevitable result of oft-repeated acts. Physiology teaches that no act we perform ends with itself, a tendency being left behind in the nerve centers to do the same thing again in the same way. As life is made up, for the most part, of commonplace tasks, rather than of extraordinary ones, the manner of their performance will be largely influential in the formation of the habits which fix character. It is impossible for a man, careless in ordinary affairs, to become suddenly faithful and attentive in matters of great moment as it is for an a-b-c-darian to read fluently. This attainment, like many others, comes only by patient practice.

The importance of the physiological law above stated can hardly be overestimated. A trivial act performed many times acquires great significance from its vital connection with habit. By observing, then, how a man acts under ordinary circumstances, by noting how he performs his every-day work, we may form a correct judgment as to how he will conduct himself under extraordinary circumstances. There is only one way in which to prepare for great emergencies and responsibilities, and that is to do our best everywhere and always. Hardly anything is more ludicrous than to see a would-be great man in a place for which he is incompetent. Scores, however, imagine themselves fit for the presidential chair, for the judge's bench, for senatorial honors, for an editor's chair, for the office of Bishop, whose sole claim to eminence is inefficiency in and discontent with present positions or occupations. By no law, human or divine, can unfaithfulness in lower duties and occupations fit a man for positions of greater trust and responsibility. "He that is unfaithful in that which is least will be unfaithful also in much."

It is said that Rufus Choate would plead before a shoemaker justice of the peace, in a petty case, with the same earnestness and careful attention to detail that he displayed when addressing the United States Supreme Court. This habit of thoroughness made him the great lawyer that he was. Michael Angelo was one day giving the finishing touches to a statue, when some friends, looking on, exclaimed that he was wasting his time, so exceeding delicate were the strokes of his chisel. His reply has become a proverb: "Trifles, such as these strokes seem to be, go to make up perfection, and perfection is no trifle." Accuracy characterized all that Sir Isaac Newton did. Carlyle's definition of genius as "the infinite art of taking pains" is certainly striking, even if not unqualifiedly true. Other things being equal, the accurate workman, be he man or boy, is the favored one. Men will not long employ those whose work has constantly to be revised. Blunderers are not wanted anywhere. According to Canon Farrar: "There is only one failure in life, and that is, not to be true to the best that one knows." Emerson was right in saying that "if a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

The Christian, if he be one in reality, must bring conscience to bear upon everything he does. The slighting of any duty involves spiritual danger and loss. A certain gilded sin may seem small; but its indulgence breaks the chain of communion with God. Christ, our great exemplar, said of himself, "I do always those things that please the Father." How earnestly we should strive to imitate him! Regularity in attending the services of the sanctuary, constance in prayer and Bible study, visiting the sick and ministering to the needy may seem unimportant; but faithfulness in these things is the price of spiritual health and peace.

Christians seldom backslide or apostatize suddenly. Defections, almost without exception, begin either with the neglect of such duties as we have mentioned, or with what are termed "little sins." Retrogression, slow at first, becomes rapidly accelerated. Churchmen let excuses keep them from the house of God that would not be the shadow of excuses for breaking a business engagement. The lives of criminals afford similar evidence. Evil doing on a small scale paved the way to gradually augmenting villainies till the cup of iniquity was full. "He that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much."

Punctuality may seem a trifle, but many a Sunday-school is languishing to-day because its officers and teachers are rarely on time. Some think church cordiality a matter of little moment, but the lack of such a spirit often drives valuable members to other denominations.

Our fidelity to God must extend also to small temptations, the faithful resistance of which prepares us to meet greater ones. The enticements to sin are petty and numerous rather than powerful and infrequent. The devil knows he could not induce the average Christian to commit murder or some other heinous crime, but how easily he leads us to say harsh things, to indulge the spirit of discontent, to yield to selfishness, to stretch the truth, to cherish feelings of hate towards those who have injured us. These are "the little foxes that spoil the vines."

The spiritual life of most Christians is made up of perpetual little sacrifices rather than of a few great ones. One swallow does not make a Summer; neither do occasional acts of self-denial make us godly. A grander epitaph can no man have than that inscribed on the tomb of Gen. Gordon in Westminster Abbey—"who always and everywhere gave his substance to the poor, his strength to the weak, his sympathy to the suffering, and his heart to God." Only by endeavoring to be in all things faithful can we hope to be like this Christian hero. We often magnify and dwell upon our crosses and sacrifices; yet how insignificant they are in comparison with what Christ suffered for us, how little they involve as compared with what thousands of poor Armenians are now enduring for the sake of the blessed gospel.

"There is no great and no small
To the soul that maketh all.
And where it cometh all things are,
And it cometh everywhere."

On last Friday, the seventh, President Cleveland attached his signature to the anti-prize fight bill. This means that hereafter the whole power of the United States government will be wielded for the suppression of pugilism in all the Territories. Poor pugilists! Where will they go? They are driven out of Territories as well as the States.

Miss Laura Haygood.

Miss Laura Haygood spent last Sabbath in this city, en route to China. Her vacation in America has completely restored her health. She gave an address, last Sabbath afternoon, at Carondelet Street Church. She is an interesting talker. Her address, more than an hour in length, was replete with information concerning mission work in China. She also made an able presentation of the cause of missions in general. In speaking of the progress of Christianity (Protestantism) in China, she said: "In 1842 there were only six or seven converts in the city of Canton; at the present time there are 53,000 communicants, 500 churches and several hundred schools and hospitals. Over 100 churches are self-sustaining, over 20,000 students are in the schools, and many hundreds of thousands of copies of the Scriptures are annually circulated in the empire. There are two large Sunday-schools in Shanghai, with a membership of over 300 each, which support a day school having twenty-five or thirty pupils. More is done now in one year than was done between 1842 and 1853."

The address was much enjoyed by an audience of representative Methodists. She left Monday morning for San Francisco, whence she will sail on Saturday for China. She was accompanied as far as this city by her sister, Mrs. Boynton, of Atlanta. The two sisters were entertained during there stay in the city by Col. F. L. Richardson.

On our first page will be found a communication from our correspondent, Miss May Russell, concerning Miss Haygood's departure from Atlanta.

Bay St. Louis.

We lectured at Bay St. Louis on Tuesday night, the fourth, for the benefit of our new church at that place. We had quite a good audience which gave close attention to what we had to say for about an hour and a half.

We reached the Bay about night, and left early next morning. During our stay we were pleasantly domiciled with our old friends, Bro. and Sister Toulme, at the Crescent Hotel. Bro. Harmon is occupying his church, but it is in an unfinished condition. Winter though it is, the house is still without windows. Moreover, it is unceiled, and there is much else to do before it is finished. The devoted little band of Methodists in Bay St. Louis have exhausted their own resources. They need help, and should have it. Are there not many of our readers who can spare a small contribution to help these worthy people in their laudable effort to honor the Lord by building a temple for his worship?

Ministerial Education.

We invite special attention to the communication of Rev. F. S. Parker. There is a universal demand for a higher standard of education in the ministry. In order to meet that demand money is needed. The assessment made upon the Conferences for educational purposes, even if it were all raised, is a mere bagatelle in comparison with the amount required to meet the demands at this point. This being the case, wide-awake, progressive preachers and laymen in the different Conferences have formed voluntary associations in order to raise funds for this purpose. While Bro. Parker is more especially interested in the Louisiana Conference, much of what he says is applicable to other Conferences. Every true lover of our Zion ought to be willing to contribute according to ability for this cause.

President Cleveland has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Princeton College.

The Belle Bennett Chair.

"Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates."—Prov. xxxi. 31.

In another column will be found a communication from the Program Committee on the Easter Offering for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. Brief mention was there made of the Belle Bennett Chair; but out of deference to Miss Bennett, the other members of the committee restrained their desire to enlarge upon that theme and to urge its speedy realization.

The proverb quoted above impels the utterance of some truths here and now. Saints have been canonized who did not perform half so great a labor for the church at so great cost of strength and natural feeling as the service rendered by Miss Bennett when she gave herself and her means unreservedly for years to the work of securing a training-school for the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the M. E. Church, South.

Conquering indifference and even antagonism by the warmth of her zeal and the earnestness of her purpose, Miss Bennett by private effort and public appeal roused the church to enthusiasm, and was used of God to accomplish marvelous results. In five years she had received in answer to her appeals $95,883.18. Scarritt Bible and Training-school—a work unparalleled in the history of our church—a pioneer work grandly accomplished!

Miss Bennett has been for years the able president of the Kentucky Conference Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and is also superintendent of mountain work in the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. At Easter there will be presented a fine opportunity for united effort on the part of both organizations in honor of this noble leader in woman's work. Shall not both societies share the privilege of endowing the chair in her honor? Do we not owe it to ourselves and to her? Nay, more; shall not all the people unite to give her the honor that is her due?

A New Book.

A WAIF—A PRINCE; OR, A MOTHER'S TRIUMPH. An Egyptian Story of Fiction and Fact. By Rev. W. T. Andrews, of the North Alabama Conference, M. E. Church, South. 344 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

Stories based upon Bible characters and incidents seldom attain the popularity of Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur." Still the field is an inviting one to the writer possessing imaginative genius enough to clothe bare facts and meager statements with the rich and pleasing drapery of historical realism. The volume before us is a well-written, entertaining, and profitable story of Hebrew life during the infancy and youth of Moses, the hero of the narrative. The other personages who figure most prominently in the story are Jochebed, Moses' mother, and Pharaoh's daughter, Thermuthis, whose kindness in rescuing and adopting the little Hebrew waif the author invests with new and sacred charm. The heroic faith and efforts of Jochebed, the cruel nature of the oppressions suffered by Israel, the domestic and social life of the enslaved Hebrews, the then existing status of Egyptian affairs—all are depicted with realistic and impressive touch. Though a few anachronisms appear, yet, on the whole, the harmonies of time and place have been carefully observed. Besides bringing into bold relief the Scriptnre facts and incidents clustering about the childhood of Moses, the story affords a measnre of historical information. It is a book that will interest and edify thoughtful readers, young and old.

M. M. B.

Dr. Hunt, of the firm of Eaton & Hunt, Book Agents of the M. E. Church, suddenly fell dead of apoplexy in a hotel at Cincinnati on Monday, the tenth.

NOTES.

The congregation at Carondelet Street Church, last Sabbath morning, were favored with a strong and deeply spiritual sermon from Bishop Keener.

Rev. H. T. Cunningham has been appointed to Coldwater and Hernando, in place of Rev. T. B. Hargrove, deceased. His address is Coldwater, Miss.

We regret that previous engagements prevent our acceptance of an invitation to address the literary societies of Centenary College at their anniversary on the twenty-seventh of March.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens, of Parker Chapel, has undertaken to buy or build a parsonage. Some funds are already in hand, and he expects to complete the work during the present year.

Rev. J. J. Smylie writes: "I am engaged in a meeting here with Dr. Hagler, and the 'tides of salvation are rolling on.' A wonderful meeting! I go from here to Jameson, Mo."

The meeting at Carondelet is still in progress with a good attendance and increasing interest. The pastor is assisted this week by Rev. J. M. Henry. The preaching so far has been clear, strong, and spiritual.

Frank R. Carloss, formerly of Jackson, Miss., has been elected superintendent of the Confederate Soldiers' Home in this city. A better selection could not have been made. The Board of Managers are to be congratulated upon the choice they have made. Mrs. Carloss has been elected matron of the institution.

A St. Louis man has made a proposition to Congress to do away with the Mississippi River Commission, and turn over the work of Mississippi river improvement to him. He thinks he can do the job better than the commission is doing it, and he only asks the modest little sum of twenty millions of dollars. Umph!

"The woman's edition" fad had a great run in its day; but its day is over. The fad now is to get out "man's edition" of papers that are edited by women. The women who edit Our Homes have the honor of starting this movement. The "man's edition" will appear the latter part of the present month.

Dr. J. J. Tigert spent last Sunday in New Orleans on his return from a two weeks' trip to Austin and San Antonio, Texas. He preached in the morning at Rayne Memorial, and at night in Carondelet. Each of the services was well attended, and both sermons were worthy of the book editor of Southern Methodism. This may not sound as eulogistic as some other phraseology that might be employed, but it is high praise, nevertheless.

The New Orleans District Convention of the W. T. C. U. held its annual session, last week, in Coliseum Place Baptist Church, in this city. The session was a very pleasant and harmonious one. Mrs. Mary R. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, was present, and contributed much to the success of the convention. The convention took strong ground against the repeal of the Sunday law. We hope the members of the organization will bestir themselves in this matter as well as along the various lines of temperance work.

There is a small room in an upper floor of a busy mercantile house in St. Paul's Churchyard, London, that is closely connected with the history of the Young Men's Christian Association. More than fifty years ago the association started with a band of twelve young men who had gathered for prayer meeting in this room. Two years ago, at the time of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the association, its founder, Sir George Williams, was knighted by Queen Victoria. Sir George has now written for The Sunday-School Times a very interesting sketch of the origin and marvelous growth of the Young Men's Christian Association, which, beginning with twelve members, now numbers more than half a million. The article appears in the issue for Feb. 8.

Dr. West, in another column, refers to a very reprehensible custom that prevails in certain journalistic circles, viz., that of reporting as present at a ball or a card party all to whom invitations have been sent. It is a well-known fact that many persons who never attend balls often receive invitations to do so. To report such persons as present is a gross injustice. We thought this silly practice of certain papers published about the lands of Jackson, Miss., was too well known for anybody to be misled thereby; but a communication on our second page in this issue shows that there are sensible people who accept the reports of these papers as true. The lazy reporters ought to be made to take the trouble to find out who are present instead of simply copying the names on the invitation roll.

To Our Preachers.

Our recent premium offers to agents promise to bear abundant fruit. We deem it proper at this time to call the attention of our agents to one of the conditions of these offers, viz.: that the full subscription price must be sent in. The unsuccessful competitors will have all their commissions returned in cash. The successful competitors will, of course, get no commissions, the premiums being more than an equivalent.

North Mississippi Conference History.

Attention is respectfully called to the following action of our last Conference:

Resolved, That our brother, Rev. G. W. Bachman, be requested to gather up and preserve for future use such facts as he can concerning the history of Methodism in the North Mississippi Conference. (See Minutes, page 16.)

Thanking the brethren for this compliment, I shall do the best I can to comply with the request. In this labor of love, gathering up memories of the past, "for future use," I shall need and expect the assistance of all the preachers and older church members in every locality within our bounds. We want the history of our church in every county, town, and neighborhood; where, when and by whom first organized, with any interesting reminiscences of incidents of persons, meetings, church-buildings, Sunday-school work, etc. Also biographical sketches and recollections of preachers, traveling or local, and useful laymen and good woman. We want to know who was the first Methodist preacher in North Mississippi, and where he labored, and where and when the first church was organized. Who will inform us?

Will each presiding elder and pastor in the Conference help us during this year, in this work, by eliciting the desired information from the elderly members of your charges, and from such Church and Quarterly Conference records as are accessible? Any facts, incidents or experiences of personal knowledge or tradition, whether long or short, that will help make up the history of the church's work, will be appreciated from any person.

I have a portfolio sweltering communications. Let us have them, written on one side of the sheet, or through the columns of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Let them come soon and rapidly, and receive due acknowledgment from, Yours in the work,

G. W. BACHMAN.

Kosciusko, Miss., Feb. 4, 1896.

A Correction.

Some time ago I stated publicly that I believed the spiritual condition of the church, or churches, in Jackson was about as good as at any churches of like size in the State, or something to that effect. What I said was afterwards published in the Clarion-Ledger. Shortly after the same paper announced that the daughters of three of the most prominent ministers in Jackson were at a card party. Now, last people should think that in the above statement I handled the truth rather carelessly, I will say that these young ladies were not at the card party, and never attended these kind of card parties. The editor simply publishes the report handed in. He does not know or care who was there. The party furnishing the report is in the habit of reporting as present all of the invited guests. I, for one, don't like that way of reporting. Others, doubtless, dislike it as much as I do.

I write this in justification of myself, for in the eyes of thousands my statement bears a lie on its face—if the best people here are card players. Many people don't think progressive euchre condusive to piety. T. S. WEST.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHRIST'S WAYS OF WINNING SOULS: BY HIS TEACHING.

(Matt. v, 1, 2; xiii, 1-3; Mark x, 13-16; Luke x, 29-36.)

In didactics the Master's method inimitable.

1. In the Sermon on the Mount we have in epitome almost the entire catalogue of Christian duty.

(1) The Savior says: Blessed are. In the present tense. That godliness is profitable unto all things and has also the promise of this life, not sufficiently emphasized. To be happy here below we must be pious.

(2) Additionally, undeserved, at death we shall see God. The happiness hereafter is the continuation of the happiness here below.

2 The parable of the Sower follows next in our lesson. Definitions of the word "parable" vary. This will suit best: It is thought-portraiture.

(1) The duty of fruit bearing is the central idea of this parable. Our religion is one of doing. The leaves of profession are good and even necessary, but the end sought is fruit.

(2) The hearers of an ordinary congregation appropriately classified. Poor soil, trodden pathway, a field full of thorns and weeds. But some fall on good ground. And you?

3 Christ blessing little children, and his utterance on that occasion significant.

(1) Of such is the kingdom of heaven. Adults may become citizens of that kingdom, but infants are such already.

(2) All the same, parents should not neglect to have the sacrament of baptism administered to their offspring. Neglect will not injure infants, but the parents assuredly.

(3) Though baptized as infants, their parents must see to it and make it the burden of their prayers that said children, when they attain to the years of accountability, receive also the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Of this baptism that with water was but the sign and seal.

4 The parable of the Good Samaritan explains our kinship.

(1) Suffering ones are our neighbors. The helpless must be helped. The distressed relieved.

(2) True Christianity spurns narrow exclusiveness. A Samaritan assisted a suffering Jew. Charity disregards the boundary of denominationalism.

Important Notice.

To the Presiding Elders and Pastors of the Mississippi Conference—

BRETHREN: By reference to Items II. and III. of Report No. 2 of your Board of Education (page 27 of Minutes), unanimously adopted by our Conference both last year and the year before, you will find provision for the appointment of District and Local Boards of Education. Will you please send me the address of each member of your several Boards? If they have not been appointed or elected, will you attend to this at once? Yours fraternally,

B. F. LEWIS, Sec'y.

Important.

To the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference:

Mrs. Charles B. Galloway having tendered her resignation as president of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference, Mrs. R. J. Turner, of Bay St. Louis, the first vice-president elected at our last meeting, will act as president of the society.

By order of the Executive Committee. MRS. B. F. LEWIS, Sec'y.

5 GALLONS FOR 25¢

Not of the preparations of coloring matter and essential oils so often sold under the name of rootbeer, but of the purest, most delicious, health-giving beverage possible to produce. One gallon of Hires' is worth ten of the counterfeit kind. Suppose an imitation extract costs five cents less than the genuine Hires; the same amount of sugar and trouble is required; you save one cent a gallon, and—get an unhealthful imitation in the end. Ask for HIRES and get it.

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot-ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings; thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

THE FAMILY BIBLE.

How painfully pleasing the fond recollection
Of youthful connections and innocent joys,
When, blessed with parental advice and protection,
Surrounded with mercy, with peace from on high,
I still view the chairs of my sire and my mother,
The seats of their offspring as ranged on each hand,
And that best of all books, which excels every other,
The family Bible that lay on the stand—
The old-fashioned Bible, the dear, blessed Bible,
The family Bible that lay on the stand.

That Bible, the volume of God's inspiration,
At morn and at evening could yield us delight,
And the prayer of our sire was a sweet invocation
For mercy by day, and for safety through night:
Our hymns of thanksgiving with harmony swelling,
All warm from the hearts of the family band,
Half raised us from earth to that rapturous dwelling
Described in the Bible that lay on the stand—
The old-fashioned Bible, the dear, blessed Bible,
The family Bible that lay on the stand,

Ye scenes of tranquility—long have we parted;
My hopes almost gone—my parents no more;
In sorrow and sadness I roam broken-hearted,
And wander unknown on a far-distant shore.
Yet how can I doubt a dear Savior's protection,
Forgetful of gifts from his bountiful hand?
Then let me with patience receive his correction,
And think of the Bible that lay on the stand—
The old-fashioned Bible, the dear, blessed Bible,
The family Bible that lay on the stand.

The Decadence of the Family Sitting Room.

BY HELEN EKIN STARRETT.

It is a great defect in a large proportion of our modern houses that no room is specially designed and reserved for the family sitting-room. We have reception-halls and reception-rooms and parlors and libraries—all needed, and all well enough in their places—but we have few sitting-rooms; and no home where there are children is complete without the good old-fashioned sitting room.

In the reaction against the stiff, old-fashioned parlors of our forefathers, with their cold, formal, company air, an attempt has been made by many to transform the parlor into a sitting-room. It has become a popular theory of household arrangement and architecture that all parts of the house should be "for use, and not for show." This sounds well in theory, but does not work well in practice, especially where there are children. We need the parlor, as a place to be kept always in order for the reception of the chance or formal caller whom we do not care to introduce into the privacies of our family circle. A parlor is a defense of the housekeeper, and a source of comfort to the busy mother, who must allow a certain amount of freedom and disorder in other rooms in the house. On the other hand, the chance or formal caller feels that there is an element of incongruity which causes a sense of embarrassment when he or she is ushered into a parlor, and finds the children's playthings on the floor and evidences of household occupation scattered around. One feels as though he was intruding under such circumstances, and is disposed to beat a hasty retreat, for fear of interfering with family affairs. No, we can not give the parlor to be used as a sitting-room.

Then, again, the library is the place where quietness should reign, and from which general conversation and noise should be excluded. It is the place where one should always be able to find quietness and repose and opportunity to write and study. Nearly everyone who leads an active, busy life needs such a place and opportunity for a little resting period every day, and the library should afford it.

But the sitting-room! This should be the largest, best lighted, best warmed and most comfortable room in the house. It should be somewhat retired from the front part of the house, so as to prevent the uninvited entrance of strangers who are not entitled to its privileges by their relation to the family. Here may be allowed the children's playthings; here should be the big center-table, ample enough to hold the evening lamp, or lamps, the school books, the daily papers, the mother's mending-basket, the games and the drawing materials. The furniture of the sitting room should be comfortable and most substantial—for wear and use, rather than show. Here should be the wide, comfortable lounge, on which the indisposed or tired boy or man may stretch himself, and be soothed or entertained by the hum of family voices and the sight of family doings going on around him. Here should be a few chairs so substantial that the kind-hearted, but unsophisticated relative from the country may be permitted to tilt them back on two legs, or against the wall, without danger of an embarrassing crash.

Into the inner sanctuary of the home, the mere stranger, the tedious gossip, the dangerous talebearer of the neighborhood affairs should never be admitted. It should be sacred to the privacies of home life and to friendship. Here should the mother make her headquarters during the day, as long as there are children to run in from school, or boys and girls to gather within its walls for mutual companionship. Here in the evenings, when the day's work and business is over, should parents and children, brothers and sisters, gather to talk over the events of the day; to inform one another of the incidents and interests of each one's life, to read aloud from the interesting book or magazine, and to exchange sentiments and confidences, which bind families together, and keep their interests one.

The house which has no family sitting-room lacks one of the most important elements of the true home. It is too true, especially of city homes, that there is altogether too much of individualization in the modern family. It is a good thing, if possible, for every member to have his or her own room; but the having of a room to one's self, and the preference for staying there apart from the family life, tends to develop a selfish instinct, tends to make members of the family impatient of interruption, self-absorbed in personal affairs, and indifferent to the affairs of others. Such selfishness loosens the bonds of family life, weakens the ties of family affection and tends to the disintegration of family life generally. The best possible remedy for this lamentable state would be a return to the good old institution of the family sitting-room.—Interior.

The Value of Drudgery.

Much of the work done in this world—however the case may be in other spheres—may justly be described under the general name drudgery. The great mass of the labor performed, in any department of industry, is done by men and women who may rightly be styled drudges. This term has, unfortunately, a discreditable meaning, and therefore, even by those who are fairly entitled to be characterized by it, is at once discounted. Multitudes whose lives are devoted to the humbler and more exacting forms of labor do not realize the value of their services. They do not see that their work is of inestimable worth to their fellows and to the world; that the labors of the drudges, under the current constitution of things, are among the most important and invaluable forms of industry that can be achieved by any portion of the human race.

Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations without. Hence, to cure the disease the cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure ever be effected. Warner's SAFE Cure is established on just this principle. It realizes that of all diseases arise from deranged Kidneys and Liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and, by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for all Nervous Affections, and physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Its past record is a guarantee of continued performance.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO.,
London, Rochester, Melbourne, Frankfort, Toronto, Paris.

The largest part of the work done on earth is performed by drudges. The labor by which the primary forms of wealth are actualized is to be depicted most vividly by the word drudgery. Those who spend many hours of the day and the night under ground, delving after coal, silver, zinc, gold, or lead; who plant, cultivate, and gather the cotton crop, the harvest of corn or wheat, or barley; who man our ships and toil in our manufactories, and manage our railroads, and build our houses, and excavate our sewers, and carry on the tasks of the household, are inevitably laden with burdens of irksome toil. Civilization itself is built upon the achievements of the drudge, and all progress depends upon his industry and fidelity.

The tasks whereby educational discipline is secured, and raw, uncouth, ignorant boys and girls are developed into self-reliant, observing, well-trained men and women are of like character. In schools of all grades pupils are required year after year to do work which is onerous and oppressive. To master these school tasks those who would secure an education must needs do many things which are a weariness to the flesh. Indeed, a part of the discipline secured in school life consists in the acquisition of the power to work, patiently and persistently, at unpleasant and burdensome tasks. No man ever became a great scholar except by drudgery.

The example of the Master, during his life on earth, shows that he was not exempt from the operations of this principle. He was a carpenter, and knew by personal experience the burdens and exactions which are the heritage of the toiler. He felt the sting of poverty and need, and "learned obedience by the things which he suffered." His ministry was a most laborious one, passed largely in the midst of the poor, the sick, the oppressed, and the toiling. Many a day was occupied from beginning to end with labors of the most absorbing and exhausting kind. Surely we miss one of the lessons of his career if we fail to see in it the fact that he gave dignity to toil and the toiler by his spirit and example. His life is a supreme instance of the value of drudgery.

It should encourage all toilers, especially those in the more humble, lowly and laborious spheres, to consider the example of the Carpenter of Nazareth, and to reflect that a loving and dutiful spirit will exalt and glorify the most menial service.—Exchange.

Economy.

Economy is one of the chief duties of a State, as well as of an individual; it is not only a great virtue in itself, but it is the parent of many others; it preserves men and nations from the commission of crime and the endurance of misery; the man that lives within his income can be just, human, charitable, and independent; he who lives beyond it becomes, almost necessarily, rapacious, mean, faithless, and contemptible; the economist is easy and comfortable; the prodigal, harassed with debts, and unable to obtain the necessary means of life; so it is with nations. National character, as well as a national happiness, has, from the beginning of the world to the present day, been sacrificed on the altar of profusion.—John Taylor.

HYGIENE.

Fruit Diet and Neuralgia.

Mr. A. Strickland who had suffered years with neuralgia and had years of treatment for it without effect writes to Natural Food that he has cured it by the fruit diet. He says: "I gave up all hopes of ever being well; but finally hearing about the fruit diet, I thought it might help my sick wife, never thinking it would touch my old enemy, neuralgia, but she got along so well with it, and improved so fast, she thought what might be good for the goose would be good for the gander. It was a very hard thing for me to think of, who had always been so temperate, never taking tea nor coffee, or any kind of stimulant in all my life; but I always believe in oatmeal porridge and took plenty of it, and I could not see how that could hurt me; but seeing my wife so well and me always so miserable I became ashamed of myself, and finally began on the fruit: and I can tell you right here I do not know what pain or ache is since I began. I believe that the fruit will not only knock rheumatism and neuralgia out of you, but every other ache and pain to which man is heir. I am a man of fifty-seven years old, and I believe I could do a better day's work than ever I did, for I feel like a boy, and have a boy's appetite, and I only take two meals in twenty-four hours."—Journal of Hygiene.

What Sleep Will Cure.

The cry for rest has always been louder than the cry for food. Not that it is more important, but is often harder to get. The best rest comes from sound sleep. One hour of profound sleep is more refreshing than a whole night of dreamy sleep. Sleep will do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, uneasiness. It will sometimes cure insanity. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will go far to cure dyspepsia, particularly that variety under the name of nervous dyspepsia. It will relieve the languor and prostration. It will cure hypochondria. It will cure headache. It will cure neuralgia, and help to cure a broken spirit. It will help to cure sorrow.—Selected.

Health.

Drink plenty of pure water—hot or cold. Breathe deep draughts of fresh air. Bathe frequently. Exercise freely. Walk to the woods; nature will soothe your mind and refresh your body. Do not worry. Do not eat too much. Eat slowly. Eat digestible food. Eat nourishing food. Don't forget to bathe. Conserve your strength; you will need it all. Keep clear of gluttony, dyspepsia and the blues.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CHICKEN CROQUETTES.—This is a Boston cooking-school recipe: A four-pound fowl will give a little less than three cupfuls of chopped white meat. Dress the fowl and put it into a kettle with seven slices of carrot, two slices of turnip, one small onion, a stalk of celery, one bay leaf, and three sprigs of thyme. Add three pints of boiling water and cook until tender. Remove the fowl, strain the liquor and cool. Take off the fat and make a sauce, using two tablespoonfuls of butter, four tablespoonfuls of flour, one and one-third cupfuls of the chicken stock and one-half cupful of cream. Add a few grains of cayenne, a slight grating of nutmeg, salt to taste, and one beaten egg. This makes a thick sauce to hold the chicken together. Take the white meat from the breast and second joints and chop, but not so fine as to be a paste. Moisten with some of the juice and spread on a plate and chill. Shape into little rolls, roll in dry bread crumbs, dip in an egg beaten with two tablespoonfuls of water and then roll tightly again in the crumbs. Have some hot fat, using one-third beef suet and two-thirds lard; put five or six croquettes in a frying basket and lower slowly into the fat. The slightest defect in egging and crumbing will allow the fat to enter the mixture and cause the croquette to burst open.—Exchange.

FLOWERS—Mrs. Irene L Flowers died on the eighth of September, 1895, near Jackson, La. The daughter of Mr. Simeon Gibson, she was born in Pine Ridge neighborhood, near Natchez, Miss., June 23, 1854. Her parents were earnest Methodists, and taught her the way of life. At eighteen years of age she united with our church, and experienced conversion in the act of joining. Whether service was held in the Methodist or Presbyterian Church in the neighborhood, she was always present when practicable. On the eleventh of January, 1887, at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr George Clark, near Kingston, she was happily married to Rev. A. C. Flowers, of the Mississippi Conference, who was then pastor on the circuit embracing her home. Both parents had been called to the heavenly home. She proved an helpmeet indeed to the dear brother, who is now left sorrowing with one dear little girl to cheer and stimulate him to high and noble living. The other little one, a bright boy of above five years (Albert, Jr.), had died a few days before the mother went. This sore affliction, finding her already nearly exhausted with sickness proved more than she could endure. She seemed to see the fair young hand beckoning her away to the better land, and with patient resignation she said from her heart, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly." She had suffered much and with the utmost patience, seeming more deeply concerned in her earnest prayers for those around her than for herself. She was truly an unselfish and devoted friend and companion. The day preceding her death Bro. H. R. Singleton kindly visited her. She expressed to him the fullest confidence in the blessed Savior and his wondrous, redeeming love. She asked those about to sing, "How firm a foundation!" responding to those precious promises with hearty "Amens."

Her great delight had been to read God's Word, and to transcribe many of its most helpful verses for easy and frequent reference. Two of her favorite golden texts were: "He knoweth the secrets of the heart," and, "Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth." Her conversation was highly and sweetly seasoned with such quotations. Ah! this world is poorer far by her removal, but our real home is richer. God alone can truly comfort the widowed and orphaned hearts. May the fullness of his consoling grace be their portion!

A former pastor, J. F. Drake,

HOWARD—William H. Howard was born in Pontotoc county, Miss., April 5, 1813, and died in Vernon parish, La., Jan 8, 1896, aged sixty-two years nine months and three days. At fourteen years of age Bro. Howard was converted and joined the Methodist Church. As he grew to manhood, he also grew in faith and usefulness. The community in which he lived so long have realized much good by his influence and godly walk.

Bro Howard was married Oct. 4, 1855, to Miss Mary A. Brown, in Attalla county, Miss. She also becomes his helpmeet and a useful maid-servant of the Lord's. From this union there were three children. Only one lived to years of maturity, and she, with his beloved wife, survives him. Bro. Howard moved from Attalla county, Miss., to Vernon parish, La., reaching the place at which he died Jan. 8, 1871, being exactly a quarter of a century he lived in this community, having lived a consistent member of the church, always attending regularly up to about two years prior to his death, when he was struck down suddenly with paralysis, from which he never fully recovered.

At the commencement of the war between the States he enlisted as a private in the Confederate Army, remaining in the service until its close, participating in many important battles.

Bro. Howard lived in faith, worked faithfully for his church and pastor, ever giving God the honor and glory. At his death he was Sabbath-school superintendent and church trustee. The last thing he did was to hold family prayer (which was his custom evening and morning), retired for the night, and at two o'clock A. M he passed out, gone to rest—that rest that knows no breaking.

Weep not, loved ones; we have an assurance that the one so loved here is at rest with the Lord, who gathereth his flock one by one, and doeth all things well.

JOHNSON—Ina M. Johnson (nee Pitte) was born Sept 13, 1862; married to David H. Johnson, August, 1880, and Dec. 30, 1895 (at the home of her parents Waynesboro, Miss.), she entered into rest.

Sister Johnson's parents being Christians, her early childhood days bore the impress of a Savior's love. At the age of thirteen years she assumed the vows of discipleship in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and ever afterwards took a lively interest in all church work. God blessed her with a pious, godly husband, and the few years of married life bet cemented more firmly her attachment to Jesus, so when the hour came that removed her loved companion from her side (December, 1892) she found herself strangely strengthened to endure the separation, and to continue life's battle alone.

It soon became apparent to her that her physical life was to occupy but a limited space of time. She, therefore, brought her mind and heart into sweet subjection to the will of God. With her prayers, visitors and [illegible] she spent the closing days of life, realizing God's presence very near. The sting of death was removed, and she patiently waited the hour of release as one to be welcomed. As the year 1895 was expiring she calmly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. Her body rests beside that of her husband at Ellisville, Miss. To know was but to love this sweet-spirited, lovely Christian woman.

May the Holy Spirit guide and preserve the dear little son, Walter, in his lonely path through life, and comfort the loved ones of her childhood home as he only can!

Robt. B. Downan, Ex-Pastor.

WILLIAMS—To the Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, Sardis, Miss.:

Your committee appointed to draft suitable resolutions touching the death of our late lamented brother, Eugene F. Williams, respectfully submit the following:

God, in his inscrutable providence, has removed from his place among us our well-beloved assistant superintendent, teacher and friend, and has taken him to himself. The community have sustained a loss that it is impossible to measure. We have no adequate conception of the great loss his family has suffered. But we rejoice that he has not lived among us in vain, that his godly life and example are our heritage, and that they still live to remind us of our duty to nurse us, to each other, and to our God; and to admonish us that in the path of duty trod by him we may find joy and peace here, and a blissful immortality in the world to come.

Resolved, That we will earnestly strive to emulate his lofty example, and be true in all the relations of life—true to ourselves, true to our family and friends, true to our Sunday-school, true to our church, and true to God.

Resolved, That we, in our hearts, throw around his bereaved widow and fatherless boy our arms of sympathy and love, and with them mingle our prayers and tears, asking the Father of mercies and God of love to comfort and sustain them in this dark season of their affliction.

J. B. Booth,
for Committee.

Sardis, Miss., Jan. 26, 1896

McKENZIE—Sister Catherine McKenzie has gone home. We do not say, dead; for God's children do not die. Nore Catherine McSwain, Jan 15, 1823; married to William McKenzie Feb. 12, 1846, and fell on sleep Jan. 5, 1896. She was the mother of thirteen children, four of whom, with her husband, had gone home.

Several months ago she had been paralyzed, and knew the end of the journey was near, but years before she had "put her house in order," joined the Methodist Church, and, with eight children settled in life, she only awaited her Lord's summons. How calm her face was in that coffin, with those frosted locks around it—a sheaf ripe for the Master's harvest.

Though the rain fall on Jan. 7, a host gathered at the burial, and when the funeral had been preached kind hands tenderly bore the casket to the grave. The rain ceased, the sun shone through a rift in the dark clouds, and whispered afresh to sad hearts the blessed hope of immortality.

The dear old veterans are going home. May her mantle fall upon her children!

H. B. Travilion.

MONTGOMERY—Mrs. Julia A Montgomery was born in Frank in county, Miss., Aug. 4, 1839; was married to Mr. W. H. Montgomery, Sept. 7, 1860; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Salem Church, Amite county, the Summer of 1861, and 'tis said she lived a consistent Christian life until her death, which occurred Sept. 9, 1895.

The writer was privileged to visit her several times during the last two years of her life as her pastor, and found that though she was a great sufferer, yet she was always trustful and patient. During her last illness she expressed herself as being ready and waiting the Master's call; that there was not a cloud to dim her spiritual sky, and thus she passed away, quietly and sweetly trusting Jesus.

She leaves her husband, four children, besides brothers, sisters and many friends, to mourn her departure; but we feel their loss is her gain. The Lord abundantly bless and save all the bereaved ones, that they may have a happy entrance with her in heaven.

The St. Paul Rail Way Company has summarily dismissed eleven engineers and thirty-five firemen from its division running into Fort Howard, Wis. These men are all former employees of the Milwaukee road, recently absorbed by the St. Paul. The cause of this wholesale dismissal is said to be due to the men frequenting saloons when off duty, and the recent determination of the company to discontinue the practice.—Exchange.

A Chance to Make Money.

In the past three months I have cleared $680 75 selling Dish Washers. I did most of the work, my brother helped some. I expect to do better next month, as every Dish Washer sold advertises itself, and sells several more. I don't have to leave the house. People hear about the Dish Washers and send for them, they are so cheap. Any lady or gentleman can make money in this business, as every family wants a Dish Washer. Any of our readers who have energy enough to apply for agency can easily make from $8 to $10 per day. You can get full particulars by addressing the Monnd City Dish Washer Co., St Lewis, Mo. Try it and publish your success for the benefit of others. C. A. L.

The day is long past when any, except the ignorant and prejudiced, speak of foreign missions with a sneer. The century now drawing to a close has no prouder laurel than that which it wears as distinctively the century of missionary effort and progress recorded in the evangelization of the world.—Harper's Bazar.

going to school

Do the children go to school? And are they joyous and happy? Is school-life a pleasure? And is progress being made? Or is the opposite true? Does the close of each day bring a headache? There is no appetite and sleep is imperfect. The color gradually leaves the cheeks and only a little effort is followed by exhaustion. To continue school means to come to the end of the year with broken health. What is the best thing to do? Take

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.50. (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to February, '97. (A little later it will be March, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.50, $1.75 and $2 45.

The Proper Time

When the most benefit is to be derived from a good medicine is early in the year. This is the season when the tired body, weakened organs and nervous system yearn for a building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many wait for the open Spring weather and, in fact, delay giving attention to their physical condition so long that a long siege of sickness is inevitable. To rid the system of the impurities accumulated during the winter season, to purify the blood and to invigorate the whole system, there is nothing equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Don't put it off, but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will do you good. Read the testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people. They tell the story.

Before you waste your money on think hard, and several times, and keep at it.

Reflection and investigation will surely convince you that it is not and never can be true economy to buy a cheap organ. Cheap things are always poor—can not be otherwise: and the most unsatisfactory and vexatious cheap thing on earth is a cheap inferior organ.

Every dollar put into such organs is simply money wasted.

OUR STRENGTH.

BY S. JOHNSON.

Savior, in thy mysterious presence kneeling,
Fain would our souls feel all thy kindling love;
For we are weak, and need some deep revealing
Of trust, and strength, and calmness from above.

Lord, we have wandered forth through doubt and sorrow,
And thou hast made each step an onward one;
And we will ever trust each unknown morrow:
Thou wilt sustain us till its work is done.

In the heart's depths a peace serene and holy Abides, and when pain seems to have its will,
Or we despair—oh, may that peace rise slowly,
Stronger than agony, and we be still!

Now, Savior, now, in thy dear presence kneeling,
Our spirits yearn to feel thy kindling love:
Now make us strong; we need thy deep revealing
Of trust, and strength, and calmness from above.

Handle the Word Reverently.

If the Bible be what it purports to be, the Word of God and a revelation of his holy will, then it ought to be handled reverently. This is true of the book as a bound volume, and specially true of our dealings with its divinely inspired contents. Any rough or careless handling of the bound volume will tend to lessen or destroy our respect for its contents. The act is a good index to the thought and to the state of the heart. All literal and actual handling of the Word of God ought to indicate respect and reverance for it.

The contents of this book—holy book—claim and demand reverent handling at our hands. Puns and plays on the words and terms of this message from God are quite common in social and every-day life. This is exceedingly hurtful to the parties who indulge in it, and it is hurtful to those who hear and enjoy such puns and plays. Everyone present who has a proper regard for the Holy Scriptures is pained by it.

Lawyers at the bar and politicians on the stump are much given to irreverent use and handling of God's Word. There could possibly be no objection to a serious and correct use of the Scriptures by an attorney at the bar, but often it is far otherwise. The Word of God may often be safely, wisely and reverently used in pointing a moral or fixing a thought in an address or speech on political subjects. When a foul-mouthed politician makes use of the Scriptures to stir a laugh or to justify an obscure anecdote, all decent people are stirred by a sense of outrage. It indicates, on the part of the speaker, an utter disregard for sacred things.

Among professedly Christian people, and by some ministers of the gospel, there appears, now and then, a deceitful and profane handling of the Word of God. Passages are taken out of their connections and made to mean what they do not mean in support of some theory or peculiar view. Often a single phrase or a word is distorted and made to teach something contrary to the general tenor of the Holy Scriptures. This is a great evil and sin, and all tends to destroy the mental and spiritual vision of the man, preacher or layman, who indulges in it. It is a perversion and misuse of the inspired Word of God.

Some ignorent, but clever and well-meaning, people have fallen into this by thinking that the verses and chapters of the Bible were given by inspiration, and that each single verse contains a whole truth. Others, not so ignorant, but more prejudiced, read and study the Bible to confirm and sustain views and theories they have already adopted. Such persons like that openness of mind and heart that is so essential to a clear and full understanding of the deep spiritual import of the Holy Scriptures. They wrest, twist and distort passages of the Bible out of all proper shape, and so announce as the doctrine of God what, in fact, is only the opinion of men. This evil and sin is more common than one might at first be disposed to think. Examples of it are abundant in histories of doctrines, and they are not wanting in the religious periodicals of the day. Great and grave theories and doctrines are made to hang on exceedingly slender threads of Holy Writ. As a general rule, the less real support there is for any view or theory in the Holy Scriptures, the more tenaciously it is held and the more vociferously it is proclaimed by its advocates. What they lack in scriptural support they make up in persistent affirmation. Some even come to believe a lie by continued advocacy of it. Illustrations of the truth of this statement are not wanting in our own country and among our own people. If anyone has the time and the mind for such study, let him take some doctrine, theory or view that is constantly and persistently advocated, and quietly and calmly submit it to the test of God's Word, and he will soon see that what is so confidently and boldly asserted has but slim, if any, support in the holy book. This statement is true of some views of some parsons in all the churches.

It may readily be conceded that these persons are honest and earnest in what they hold and advocate. This is manifest. But honesty and earnestness are not the proofs of correctness and soundness in doctrinal beliefs. Whatever we are required to believe as an article of Christian faith must be clearly proved, or as clearly inferred, by the Word of God. No list of honored names of men, living or dead, will supply the place of texts of Holy Scripture. The Word of God is our only guide in divine truths. If any speak not according to this Word, receive them not.

It would be well for Christian men and Christian ministers to try their creeds, written or held in solution in their minds, by this divine standard. This would be a healthful and spiritually helpful exercise. If entered upon in the proper frame of mind and in humble dependance on the Holy Ghost, it would greatly strengthen one's faith and it might remove some films of error that have long obscured mental vision. It is a most painful fact that we may deceive ourselves in matters of the most vital concern to us. This should keep us humble, watchful, and open to the truth. GILDEROY.

Bro. McVoy Speaks.

MR. EDITOR: I noticed in a communication from Rev. J. L. P. Shappard, concerning the change that has taken place in the presidency of Mansfield Female College, the statement that the Board "thought a change necessary." This is a surprise, not only to me, but to all my friends and former patrons. I can not believe that it is the opinion of even a majority of the Board, and the publication of such a statement, or even its utterence in private circles, is not calculated to do the institution or the retiring president any good, and only gives coloring and encouragement to the damaging statements referred to in the communication that the friends of the college wish to allay. In all deference to the opinion of some, I do not think that any discredit can, in justice, be cast upon the management of the last eight years. And the new Board would have been wise, and met the expectation of the friends of the institution, if they had embodied in a resolution suitable recognition of the labors of the retiring president. Such appreciation would have been an encouragement that would have cost nothing but good feeling and pleasant courtesy, considered by many as justly due, as is found in the pleasant communication of the secretary, A. F. Jackson. Eight years ago I followed President Grace, who successfully carried the college through five eventful years, and who indeed saved the institution to the church by his careful management. The institution sprang at once into renewed prosperity under my management, and for three years the patronage was increasing, and prospects favored enlarged facilities. At this time many permanent and extensive repairs were made, and the institution was fully equipped for larger work. Then came the financial pressure upon the country, felt so keenly by church institutions and private schools. This condition rendered the securing sufficient patronage to maintain the school exceedingly difficult; and it is a matter of surprise to those who were acquainted with the situation that the institution was maintained at all, for they knew it was done at great sacrifice. Then the establishment of a free high school in the town drew off nearly the whole of the local patronage, and the school had to be maintained alone by the foreign patronage. Yet if you take this period of eight years and compare it with any period of the same extent in the previous history of the institution, you will find that during this last period there has been, on an average, a larger attendance; a greater number of graduates, who compared favorably in point of scholarship with previous graduates; a decided advance in enlarging curriculum and in methods of teaching, with as great a confidence in the administration, felt and expressed by patrons, as towards previous ones; and during this period also the college has made great strides in allaying old prejudices and in winning the favor of a larger class of people. There have been difficulties that in some quarters formed almost insurmountable barriers, but which have gradually given way, and patronage that had been drawn off had been won back.

The only hindrance to a larger prosperity during the last three years has been the unfavorable financial condition of the country. To have conducted the college through such a crisis has required a large outlay of energy and all the means at my command. I hardly think that any previous president has traveled over this State more extensively than I have, using my best judgment as to where to go to secure the largest success. Then these years of depression left the president without sufficient means to canvass as thoroughly as he desired. But as far as a limited time and means allowed, I have gone over this State, securing, in a large measure, what patronage the institution has had, and, in fact, all the patronage that could be controlled for the institution. I sought out all the Methodist patronage of the State, and could tell its drift and the influences swaying it hither and thither. I have either visited or written urgent letters to every Methodist family of this Conference where there was a prospect of patronage. I have labored faithfully, ardently, devoutly, and continuously to promote the interests of this college. I have left no stone unturned. I have won friends for the college all over the State, and have done my utmost to discharge the duties devolving upon me, the greater portion of the members of this Conference being my witnesses. The great improvement in the condition of the country last Fall began to restore prosperity, and a larger patronage was secured than during the two previous years. Prospects brightened rapidly, and if the price of cotton had not declined, many promises and pledges of patronage would have been secured to have filled every vacancy. I regret that some have withdrawn on account of this change, for I have labored earnestly to protect and preserve the patronage for the incoming president. I could, if necessary, secure testimonials of appreciation from every patron of the institution during the past eight years, and I have no better friends to-day than these patrons. I do not think that my patrons, and the friends of the college who know my work in the past, will argue "that a change was necessary." Certainly the people of Mansfield will not. Then in regard to the statement that the rents were not paid in full for several years. I desire to state that for only two or three years was there any abatement in rent, if I recollect aright, and this was done from necessity, as has been done often by other institutions under similar circumstances. The showing of the article discloses the fact that about $1,200 was paid for rent in the purchase of the equipment at a low valuation. The insurance has been kept up except for a short interval. The college has not suffered for the little abatement in rent of about $300 in all. More has been done during my term in repairing and protecting the buildings than during any previous administration. I took the bare walls, and leave the college with a satisfactory equipment, and in better condition than when I took charge. I care not for thanks for doing my duty, but every man wants justice and proper consideration. A. D. McVOY.

Our College.

Millsaps College was not built too soon. I was among those who thought the movement unwise or, at least, premature when it was first sprung upon us, and hence did not favor it. My love for Centenary biased my judgment. I feared the new college would hurt my honored alma mater; but it has not done so. The importence of Millsaps College to Mississippi Methodism is incalculable.

A very prominent Baptist says, Clinton College is the brightest jewel in their crown in the State, and so it is. The strength of the Baptist Church in this State is largely due to the widespread influence of their college at Clinton.

The Hand Book of Mississippi, published in 1895, puts the number of Baptists in the State at 237,600, and the Methodists at 162,195. Next in size and numerical importance comes the Presbyterians, numbering 12,490. Now, Millsaps College ought to do for us what the college at Clinton is doing for the Baptists. Appreciating the importence of their college, they keep an active agent in the field all the time, who electioneers for students and is constantly adding to the financial strength of the institution. And every preacher of the Baptist denomination in the State and every student that leaves her halls of instruction sings the praises of the college. Why should it not be so with us? We have an agent who has been an energetic and successful worker in every field he has yet tried, and he has never had so fine a field for the display of his excellent gifts as the agency affords him.

The general opinion is, that Dr. West is the right man for the place; and every Methodist preacher in the State ought to afford the Doctor all the assistence he can, for the glory of God and the good of humanity, the ultimate end of all our labors. We preachers have a personal interest in Millsaps College; for our sons are educated there free of tuition. We can not afford to be indifferent. I trust we are not. Dr. West ought to be able to raise the $6,000 that will insure us Science Hall; and if he does, Major Millsaps will immediately add the other $6,000.

Brethren, let us help. Let every pastor in the two Mississippi Conferences feel himself an agent for Millsaps College. If we promote the interest of Millsaps College, we promote the interests of Methodism, not only in Mississippi, but far beyond her borders. Millsaps College has a fine faculty, presided over by the cultured Dr. W. B. Murrah, and is represented by the genial, wide-awake, industrious agent, Dr. T. S. West.

Our Opportunity.

In the providence of God, the Methodist Church in Louisiana has an opportunity for educational work it has never had before. Without costing us a dollar, we have come into sole possession of a college which for seventy years has been doing good work for the State and Church. In the matter of buildings we are so well equipped that, with the expenditure of a few hundred dollars in repairs, we will need no more buildings for a score of years, no matter what our enlargement may be. This is an item of great value, for college buildings are expensive and difficult to obtain. In the matter of prestige the work of seventy years has given Centenary College a prestige second to no college in the South. Her students and graduates are all over Louisiana, holding first places and leaders in everything pertaining to the general welfare. In putting this college entirely in our hands, God puts a larger trust in us than ever before. Heretofore we have shared this trust with our Mississippi brethren; now God says to us: "I put this college entirely in your hands. Take it and work out the educational destiny of your young people."

If there has ever been a case of providence analogous to this in the history of the church, I don't know of it. Now, the question for the Methodists of Louisiana is just simply this: Will we honor the trust God thus reposes in us by taking vigorous hold of the college and helping in all legitimate ways to sustain it and enlarge its influence? Every Methodist and every well wisher of Methodism has an interest and a responsibility in this matter. You can not shift that responsibility. To say, as some say, "The president of the college is the one to work up the interest of the college," does not release you of your work on the same line. The president is responsible so far as his influence extends, and so are you. The president, no matter how efficient and faithful he may prove, can not do, nor is he expected to do, your work. What God has laid upon you, as a duty, you must do, or reap the reward of disobedience.

Now, as I understand the matter, what the college needs is money to carry on its work. Experience proves that money in the form of endowment is the best. The church must give this money, for who else cares anything for Christian education. I do not mean the rich people of the church, but I mean the church people, as a body, must give this money, each giving what he or she can. No other giving will do. Every Methodist is responsible for help in Christian education, so let every Methodist discharge part of his or her obligation in gifts of money. No matter how small the gift, send it forward. A good way to begin is to endow a professorship. That would be a good work for the year 1896. The amount necessary to endow a professorship is twenty-five thousand dollars. Is that too large an amount for thirty thousand Methodists and their friends to raise and send forward in one year?

The idea is to induce everybody to do something. I am sure the good women of our church can do a good deal for us, and those of New Orleans are already at work. And why not those of all other places join in this great work? The young people who are to receive the benefits of the work of the college can help us much through their Epworth Leagues if the pastors will bring the matter to their attention. The preachers in charge, if they will go at it heartily, can raise any amount of money they want to raise. Indeed, I think the preachers themselves, by a little self-denying effort, can raise during this year enough money to endow a professorship. Then why not make the effort? There is no better cause to work for than this cause of Christian education. I trust the preachers will go to work immediately and keep it up continuously. Do not wait for me to visit you. I may not get there. The railroads have refused to afford me any facilities of transportation, and I can not pay traveling expenses out of a half salary.

The object of this communication is to induce every Methodist in Louisiana to go to work for our college; but, alas! how many Methodists will never see it! I trust, then, the pastors will take special pains to inform those who do not read the church paper of the purport of this communication.

Is the Living Present.

Photography of hidden objects a recent discovery. Thus portraiture of physical inwardness possible. Physicians are enabled to see what organ is abnormally affected. Can show it to the invalid. Envelopes no longer keepers of secrets. Opaque cover of treasure does not prevent inspection. The instrument brings to light what transpires in a house, though the doors and blinds are closed.

The London Sunday-school Chronicle exposes manifest "Dangers of Public Prayer." Says that too often public prayer is speech making. Are addresses to fellow-worshipers. Are not unfrequently nauseating laudations, ornate castigations, political vituperation, or general information. Reformation in this respect imperatively necessary. Public, no less than private, prayer should be solely designed for the ear of God.

Caricaturists will, no doubt, portray Prince Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, as a suppliant at the feet of the Czar, presenting his young son, Boris, as the price of coveted recognition. Said son, having previously been baptized a Roman Catholic, was, on the thirteenth instant, re-baptized as an Orthodox Greek. Maria Lampe, the wife of Prince Ferdinand, has applied to the Pope for a divorce. But it has been refused. Shame. Things sacred made subservient to accomplishment of political ends. 'Tis sacrilege.

The secularization of things sacred continues. The new depot at the Jerusalem station has been located in the Vale of Hinnon, the exact site of the New Testament Gehenna. Think of it!—at Bathlehem station the conductor, with stentorian voice, informing the hungry passengers, "Bethleham: twanty minnies for dinner!"

The Baptist Beacon assures that, if you give a negro the Bible, and no white man to explain it away, he has no more sense than to be a Baptist. That, whenever a negro is caught also than a Baptist, you could rest assured that a white man had been about with his explanations. No more sense. 'Tis hence that Methodists furnish the necessary information.

When, at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, composed mostly of negroes, voted by a very large majority for admission of women to the General Conference, the enthusiastic victors sang: "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." A white preacher, who had not joined in the exultation, was asked by Bishop Fitzgerald, president, why he had not joined in the Doxology. The preacher replied he was sorry that apparently the ignorant negro vote would decide the woman question in their church.

Prohibition is popular in Arkansas. The local option law has been so peculiarly framed that the saloon can be readily defeated. Besides, the Supreme Court of the State, having decided that the saloon is a nuisance, even a minority can undo the machinations of the whisky men by having recourse to court proceeding.

Selections.

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church preach social, educational and religious equality between the whites and negroes in the South, and then contradict their own gospel by establishing separate churches for whites and blacks, and separate schools for their children. Then they turn upon their basis and abuse the churches of the South for doing as they do, and not as they say. Perhaps they can not see the contradiction, but everybody else can.—Central Methodist.

Judge Roger A. Pryor, of New York, has several times announced that he will naturalize no applicant who is not able to read and write the English language, and who does not know something of the Constitution of the United States, and how the country is governed. Within the past week three-fourths of the applicants have been rejected. The foreigner only knows that this is a "free country," and the politician pushes him in to get his vote, and the country is crowded with ignorant agitators.—Wesleyan Advocate.

FAITH.

BY ANDREWS NORTON.

My God, I thank thee! May no thought
E'er deem thy chastisement severe;
But may this heart, by sorrow taught,
Calm each wild wish, each idle fear.

Thy mercy bids all nature bloom;
The sun shines bright, and man is gay;
Thine equal mercy spreads the gloom
That darkens o'er his little day.

Full many a throb of grief and pain
Thy frail and erring child must know,
But not one prayer is breathed in vain,
Nor does one fear unheeded flow.

The various messengers employ,
The purposes of love fulfill;
And midst the wreck of human joy
Let kneeling faith adore thy will.

A Tribute to Our King

The ADVOCATE is to me like a personal friend. Its editors have been my friends since my childhood, when dear Bishop Parker put one of my letters written to the ADVOCATE in a prominent place, adding an editorial commendation. So, since I have been a Christian I have wanted to write an article for the ADVOCATE, telling of my happiness in belonging to Jesus. Three years ago, when in great sorrow, Jesus spake these words to my aching heart: "You need not despair; I'll come to you." Hallelujahs of praise burst from my lips as I welcomed Jesus to my heart. Then in adoration I sang hymns to him. Since then Jesus has been the supreme thought of my life. In him I find my longing for happiness satisfied and every idea of beauty realized.

Earth's beauty has always had a strong hold on me. Easter lilies springing stately and pure from the dark earth; the lips of a dear one, tremulous with loving words; the graceful beauty of white fingers—all these things and others have deeply moved me. But it was an emotion closely allied to pain, by reason of its very intensity. How it delights me to find that in loving Jesus there is happiness, even sometimes ecstasy, but with no pain attached.

Satan often tempts me severely; I do things that I deeply regret; but I take it all to Jesus, and he comforts me and sends me on my way rejoicing.

One of the greatest delights to me in being a Christian is the joy that people show when we talk to them about Christ. Once a man for whom I had prayed a great deal suddenly came to me one morning and began talking to me of Jesus. He talked on for a long while, and gradually I began to see that the Holy Spirit was working on his heart. It was then just a few days to Christmas. Finally, with a radiant face and with the definite Christ-like ring to his voice, he burst forth with this: "Do you know how I am going to spend Christmas Day? I am going to eat very little breakfast, very little dinner, and talk about Jesus all day long." It was a wonderful experience to me, watching his face and noting the different accents of his voice as Jesus came nearer and nearer to him. Truly, "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

The other day I read of two persons who had been close friends spending much time together. One of them died; the other, in her loneliness and grief, turned to Christ. Then she said, referring to her dead friend: "I remember that when he spoke of Jesus of Nazareth, it was in a reverent spirit of grateful and loving allegiance; but so much time was spent in the arrangement of scientific proof concerning an unseen world and a higher governing intelligence, that he scarcely touched upon the story of the cross." Thus we often speculate and discuss and forget to talk about the cross and the precious blood of Jesus. In a recent illness, as by prayer and hymns of praise, I kept the physical pain down, I learned more fully the lesson of giving all to Jesus. During this sickness misfortune came to several of my friends, and had I been well, I would have gone to them or written to them. At first I was a little restless that I could not minister to them in their sorrow, but soon the Holy Spirit assured me that they would understand my silence, and that some one else would speak the very words of comfort that I had wanted to speak. The great peace to me was when I could at last say that I wanted my voice strong, simply that I might the better praise Jesus. And now the nervousness has left my hands, and I shall be the better able to do everything for the honor of Jesus.

Yesterday the Lord's Supper was administered. Taking the broken body and shed blood has always been a benediction to my soul, but it was especially precious at this time, and I felt like voicing my joy by shouting: "He was crucified, He is risen, He dwells among us."

I have sometimes thought that I ought to have written this, my testimony, when the blood of Jesus was first applied to my soul. But I think now it was best to have waited; it has a richer tone after my having tasted, then proved the efficacy of the power of Jesus to illumine the world. I have told my experience to so many people, and never without having an especial blessing from each telling. In our journey upward let us talk much with each other by the way. Let our songs of triumph rout the enemy; our notes of praise resound through all the earth.

In Memoriam.

REV JOHN B HOLLOMAN.

Rev. John B. Holloman grew old in the service of God and of his fellowmen, and passed from an honorable probation here to the rewards of the upper kingdom. He was born in Missouri in November, 1812; joined the Methodist Church in 1837; was married in 1838, came to Mississippi in 1842, and died at home, in Yazoo county, Jan 25, 1896, in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

He recognized both worlds in all the plans of his life, and was an untiring worker. Few men, perhaps, have labored more for family, for neighbors or for God than did he. His whole being focalized its powers on the work in hand, and hence the results were apt to be abundant, whether he toiled in the fields of earth or in the vineyard of the Lord. Even in old age his energies seemed never to flag. When deafness and other infirmities precluded him from many social employments and enjoyments, he still found constant pleasure in doing daily enough work to tire down two ordinary men, in providing for the wants of his family, the claims of his church and the welfare of his friends. He was an affectionate husband and father, and made ample provision for the education and maintenance of his children and grandchildren.

Bro. Holloman was eminently a pious man. As was said of Phillips Brooks, "He was very sure of God," and worshiped and served him daily. When I first knew him the period of his activity as a preacher had passed, but not the period of his devotion to the church, nor of his earnest, practical religion at home and in society. He was one of those local preachers who considered it a privilege, as well as a duty, when he could no longer stand on the walls of Zion himself, to uphold with his presence at church, with his prayers and with his purse, the itinerant messengers of God. The preacher's horse got corn and the preacher's heart got comfort at his house. He was a man that was felt while he lived, and will be missed now that he is dead. He subscribed for church papers, and felt an intelligent interest in all the work of Methodism and of Christianity in the world.

This faithful servant of God was not a stranger to affliction. It came upon him in many forms, but under all he lost neither faith nor patience—he was purified in the furnace. His declining years were not exempt from the "labor and sorrow" which are a part of the inheritance of the aged, yet he bore all with the courage of a soldier and the fortitude of a saint. Often when apparently unconscious he quoted correctly passages from the Holy Word, and amid the throes of dissolution he cried, "Hallelujah!" He died triumphant in the faith. His aged wife and three of their five children and several grandchildren live to enjoy the fruits of his life and to extend the influence of his godliness.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Drop the Subject.

I had no intention of getting into a controversy with Bro. Miller on a subject that has been exhausted by abler pens than ours. I simply wished to object to going out of the church, as he suggested, because we are unwilling to submit to the edict of a Bishop or presiding elder on a strained interpretation of a rule. Going out of the Union to fight for our rights was a mistake, and going out of the church would be a greater one.

Bro. Miller says I misunderstood or misrepresented him. I did not mean to misrepresent him. It may be that I do not understand him. I have carefully read his article of Jan. 2, and if it does not mean what I stated, I do not know what it does means. Bro. Miller says it seems hard for some to understand plain English. I think it is equally hard for some brethren to understand themselves and what they write. He fears I have not that charity that thinketh no evil. That may be so. Some men's charity hopeth all things, and believeth many things that I do not. My charity allows me to believe nothing that is disproved by positive evidence, however much I may desire to do so. If Bro. Miller will reread his article of Jan. 2, and mine of the ninth, he can make anything he chooses out of them. We will drop the subject, and not fall out, because neither of us seems to understand the other.

Visits made, 197; Bible read, 16 times; prayer, 41 times; food and groceries furnished 61 times; doctor procured, 7 times; medicine furnished, 26 times; 5 prescriptions filled by Mr. George S. Brown; garments distributed, 203; hats distributed, 8; shoes distributed, 4 pairs; wood and coal bought, 7 times; money given, $3.40; papers distributed, 25; books loaned, 7; sheltered and fed in mission, 2; average attendance at meetings, 45; average attendance at Sunday-school, 60; average attendance at Industrial School, 30.

DONATIONS RECEIVED DURING THE MONTH.

One trunk of clothing from Mrs. Keplinger. Packages of clothing from Miss Werlein, Mrs. Russ, Mrs. Rayne, Mrs. Finney. A box of soap from Mr. Haag. Coal and wood from Mr. R. N. Wilmot.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF MONEY TO BE USED IN WORK.

$1.95 from Miss S. Bloomfield; 50 cents from Mrs. Mullen; 50 cents from Mrs. T. H. Holmes; 25 cents from Mrs. Hogan.

Mention should have been made in my last report of the kindness of Mrs. Botbick in giving the use of a carriage for the removal of a sick man from one house to another. He had been notified to vacate the room he had been occupying so long, and was too weak to walk. I shall never forget his smile of satisfaction when told of this arrangement for his comfort. He has since gone to heaven.

On Christmas Day the mission was visited by representatives of Parker Chapel Epworth League, laden with baskets containing materials for Christmas dinners. After obtaining the names and addresses of some of the most needy ones, these dear young workers for the Master started out through the rain and gloom, and carried much sunshine into some of the homes they entered that day. A similar work was done by a delegation of young people from the King's Daughters of Coliseum Place Baptist Church. A donation from Dwyer Bros. of fifteen dozen assorted toys was made to the Christmas tree.

We have so much appreciated the kindness of Dr. Black in sending the ADVOCATE to the mission.

I had been but little over a month in the work when my last report was made. Since then my labor for the Master in this portion of his vineyard has grown nearer and dearer to my heart all the way. The work has just seemed to multiply, and doors of opportunity opening continually. As I have gone into the homes—if indeed they could be called "homes"—of some of these people, my heart has been filled with love and sympathy for them, and there is such a longing in my heart to lead them to Christ. I have had some blessed experiences in some of the dark, miserable rooms in which some of them live, and have realized such great compensation in the labor of love. The rooms are so bare of comforts, and scarcely even the necessities. In one room I visited in the last few days there are seven persons living, one a very sick old man. There are so many unemployed ones begging for work; thinly clad children; the rooms so cold, being barely able to procure bread, and can ill afford the luxury of a fire. Oh, how I have felt and known that something must first be done to satisfy the needs of the body before I could break to them the blessed "Bread of Life." So many of these people can not read at all, and even when led into the blessed light of salvation, they are deprived of the help they would have from reading their Bibles, and they need much instruction. I pray for wisdom and guidance, and have realized in my great weakness that He was my strength, and that He said: "Be strong and of good courage, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

Since last report I have been at the deathbed of two, and privileged to witness these strong evidences of the saving power of Jesus Christ, and the sustaining grace in the dying hour. While spending the night at the bedside of one of these, she talked much of heaven, and seemed to have glimpses of the blessed shore. I have since thought, oh! what a change was her's as she left that dark, old room, where she had suffered so much from cold, privation and pain, to enter the blessed home "where there shall be no night, nor need of a candle, neither light of the sun."

I have found it an advantage to be living in the mission building, and thus much easier minister to the wants of many by supplying some warm meal and preparing food for the sick. And just here I would speak of the comfort and convenience of the dear little stove so kindly furnished to me; and I feel that it, too, while proving such a comfort to myself, has had its mission in thus helping in the work for the Master.

We feel so grateful to our heavenly Father that Bro. Lallance has been sent to this work. Never was pastor sent to people who was more loved. His earnest labors are being crowned with success, and his influence seen in the lives of many.

My heart was made to rejoice a few days ago while conversing with the wife of a man who had been led to Christ through Bro. Lallance's efforts, while she told me of her husband's changed condition, and of their happier home life. I knew so well how sad and miserable that home was before. Bro. Lallance has now the hearts of these people by his sympathy for them in their temporal needs, and the help he has given many of them in this way. The old mission building seems to have a more cheerful atmosphere since the little family came into it, and as Bro. Lallance goes about singing the sweet songs of Zion, his heart overflowing with Christ's love, it has helped me so much; and the happy prattle of the sweet baby boy has brought much sunshine in the building.

I thank God for all of his blessings, and desire and pray to be used of him, "a weak vessel," to lead souls "out of darkness into light."

New Work—W. F. Missions.

The following communication will surely thrill all hearts, calling forth praises and gratitude, with renewed consecration to our heavenly Father for permitting us to extend our work and give more help to the Parent Board:

MY DEAR SISTERS: More than half of the year allotted to us for Conference work has passed. The time for redeeming our pledges is fast drawing to a close. How has the work progressed so far? Is our faith strong to go forward in the work already undertaken as well as to meet new obligations that may be placed upon us?

Of course, our McNemar fund should take the precedence of every other consideration. I sincerely hope our district secretaries are urging this claim on their several districts. It is gratifying to know that we were not much behind with it a few weeks ago. I hope the "not much" has become "not at all" ere this.

Then we must remember the pledges made at our last annual meeting for helping the fund for sending out new missionaries, and for procuring subscribers to The Evangel. All these are solemn obligations, which we should have always in mind, and toward meeting which we should bend all our energies.

Now, we have presented to us another opportunity for aiding in the general work. The following extract from a letter written by Mrs. S. C. Trueheart to our corresponding secretary will explain the object:

"The sum of two thousand dollars left Mrs. Hayes, the late beloved president of our Board, by Miss H. Wilkins, of Baltimore, for foreign work, is now at the disposal of the Board. The daughter, Miss Julia Hayes, after consulting with Miss Haygood and Mrs. McGavock, prefers to use the amount to open work in Sung Kaong, China. Mrs. McGavock and all the Local Board desire this amount supplemented, and with it to erect a suitable memorial at Sung Kaong, to be called The Hayes-Wilkins, in honor of these elect ladies. I am sure the plan finds a ready response in your heart. Will you not seek to secure fifty cents from each of the adult members of your Conference society for this purpose?"

Since the above appeal was written Mrs. McGavock has passed to her reward, and it comes to us, as it were, as a dying request. Let us so regard it, and earnestly endeavor to do our part toward accomplishing the object desired. Let the president of each auxiliary bear this in mind at the next regular meeting and solicit the fifty cents from each member of her society, and let the auxiliary treasurer send same to Miss Mary Andrews, Vicksburg, Miss., specifying the object for which it was collected.

With sincere desire and earnest prayer for success in all our efforts, I am, Yours faithfully,

ADDIE V. MARSHALL,
Pres. W. F. M. Soc., Miss. Conf.

Those familiar with the work in China will recognize this as in Shanghai district, with Rev. R. A. Parker at the station, and W. B. Burke and wife (nee Addie Gordon, whom we rightfully claim as well as the North Mississippi Conference) on the circuit. Encouraging reports came from them last year, with pleadings for help, the former saying: "The great garnering-time is near at hand. But where are the reapers?" Miss Haygood recommended this place at the Board meeting in Meridian, and Bishop Galloway especially commended it "as a prepared and most desirable station for occupancy" in his inspiring and encouraging address to the Board.

May the following from Bishop Hendrix, while in Shanghai, to Dr. W. R. Lambuth encourage the whole church to help the W. F. M. Society, especially at present, in this enterprise: "The excellent condition of the hospital work and that of the woman's work, for which there is an increasing demand, is a matter for rejoicing. The greatest results have come to our work where the women have co-operated, and where the Bible women and teachers have, with the work of the hospital, helped to prepare the way."

We are anxious to have reports from juveniles, as well as adult auxiliaries.

MRS. E. D. JONES.

Selections.

A Question of Character.

The supreme distinction of man, the characteristic that marks him out from the mere physical universe, is that there is in him a self-energy, an inner freedom, a fundamental liberty and strength of soul, by which he triumphs over the unfriendliest conditions in pursuit of his ideal. By virtue of an inborn power, man bursts the tyranny of circumstance as the athlete by his swelling muscle bursts the iron band on the arm. We see this illustrated in the lives of intellectual men, in the way in which they mastered eminently unfavorable conditions. How Demosthenes, in spite of his stammering, became an orator; how Huber, in his love of science, triumphed over blindness; how Beethoven created splendid music despite his deafness! And so we constantly see men achieve wealth, and learning, and greatness in defiance of poverty, illness, illiteracy, persecution. And we always delight to witness this inborn intellectual force asserting itself against circumstances, laughing at fate, and reaching the crown which fortune seemed to have absolutely denied. We smile at or turn away with contempt from the dead fish which swim with the stream; but clap our hands in rapture when we see men of power breast the current, as the leviathan does when he makes the great deep to boil like a pot, to shine like fire. It is the same in the moral life of man; victory is from within, no matter what may be the state of things without. The patriarch struggling with the angel until he overcame is the picture of man's ability to overcome all difficulties in the way of the highest life, to realize purity and peace and uttermost salvation. And so we constantly see men getting goodness and exemplifying goodness in circumstances which seem altogether to forbid moral excellence. Climate triumphs in the landscape, determining all its growths and forms, but character triumphs over climate, over what is outside marvelously. In the world about us we see lilies of moral purity springing in foulest gutters; loveliest graces like Summer roses blooming through cruel forests of trial; flowers of patience and meekness and hope springing in dark depths of temptation and sorrow into which no beam of sunshine penetrates; the orange, the grape, the pomegranate of spiritual fruitfulness ripening in regions of barrenest wilderness.—W. L. Watkinson.

What has been will be. The purest have been chosen for loftiest ministries. Matthew, the publican, became the biographer of the Son of God; Peter, the fisherman, who was at one time a traitor, became an apostle, and will live forever in the world's gratitude; Luther, the miner's son, the beggar boy, revolutionized Europe and the world; Wesley, the son of an obscure preacher, led the evangelical revival; General Booth, who was no longer desired in his own church, led in the formation of new activities which are well called the "Salvation Army." Turn from the things which are unattractive and discouraging; fix your eyes on the glory of that to which we are called. There are drudgery, sacrifice, misunderstandings, contumely, defeat, death; but what are these in comparison with the joy that is set before us? What Christ was men are intended to be—not simply bundles of passions and frailties bound to things unworthy, but in those whom divine life is growing. This message thrills its way down the centuries—we are to be fellow-workers with the Eternal Father, with those who dwell in spheres of light, with the Master, whose holy feet walked the valleys and trod the hills of Palestine, with the prophets and martyrs of all ages. He was the world's Savior; according to our ability and opportunity we are to be saviors. To all men, all women, all children, everywhere, who make a place in their hearts for the Master to dwell, come the great words of the Savior himself: "As the Father hath sent me into the world, send I you. Receive ye the Holy Ghost."—Amory H. Bradford, D. D.

His love! What manner of love is it? What should be quoted to prove or describe it? First the whole Bible with mysteries and marvels of redemption, then the whole book of Providence and the whole volume of creation. Then add to these the unknown records of eternity past and the unknown glories of eternity to come, and then let the immeasurable quotation be sung by "angels and archangels, and all the company of heaven" with all the harps of God, and still that love will be untold, still it will be "the love of Christ that passeth knowledge."—Miss Havergal.

If you are persuaded in your own soul that the path of duty lies in a given direction, follow it until it leads you into the sunlight of truth and happiness; or until you find you were mistaken—and then retrace your steps, own your mistake, and rectify it. Be brave enough to follow your inner voice or leading. It will generally be right. Let not policy, that offspring of selfishness, deter you from your duty. Ask not, "Will it pay?" but, "Is it right?" That is the question of all questions that concerns you.—Epworth News.

The Rev. Selah Merrill most emphatically denies that there has been any considerable increase of Jews in Palestine during recent years. Jerusalem has but twenty-seven thousand in a population of forty-seven thousand and the whole land but forty-two thousand. He affirms that the reports of a rapid influx of the seed of Abraham originate in the minds of good people in America, Great Britain, and Germany, who judge that from prophecy thus it ought to be.

If you want to succeed in the world you must make your own opportunities as you go on. The man who waits for some seventh wave to toss him on the dry land will find that the seventh wave is a long time coming. You can commit no greater folly than to sit by the roadside until some one comes along and invites you to ride with him to wealth or influence.—Selected.

To me this is the profoundest of all truths—that the whole of the life of God is the sacrifice of self. God is love: love is sacrifice, to give rather than receive—the blessedness of self-giving. If the life of God were not such, it would be falsehood to say that God is love. . . . All the life of God is a flow of this divine, self-giving charity.—F. W. Robertson.

In looking forward to future life, let us recollect that we have not to sustain all its toil, to endure all its sufferings or to encounter all its crosses at once. One moment comes laden with its own little burden, then flies, and is succeeded by another no heavier than the last. If one could be sustained, so could another and another.—Jane Taylor.

A Salvation Army man was urging a brother to observe family prayers. The derelict brother said, "God don't expect it of me." "Perhaps he don't," was the reply, "since he knows you so well; but wouldn't it be a pleasant surprise to him if you should do it?"—Arkansas Methodist.

A man may be apparently in perfect indifference as to the condition of the poor in his neighborhood, but just let the preacher call on him for a contribution for foreign missions, and immediately he will begin to plead the needs of the "heathen at home."—Baltimore Advocate.

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Honor to the true man ever who takes his life in his hands, and, all hazards, speaks the word which is given him to utter, whether men will bear or forbear, whether the end thereof is to be praise or censure, gratitude or hatred.—Whittier.

Who is a greater fool than an old man trembling on the verge of the grave, and yet as thoughtless about the future world as the most giddy youth around him? He is a very pigeon of recklessness and folly.

Do not fret when the rhapsodies and outbursts and exuberant manifestations of earlier days have ceased. It is better to live by the ordinary laws of human life than by the abnormal and miraculous.—F. B. Meyer.

The gospel of the Lord is like the bread of the miracles; it grows when it is used and multiplies when it is divided.—D. H. Bauslin.

FROM THE WORK.

ON THE MOVE.

Well, Mr. Editor, I am still perambulating among the brethren looking after the interests of Grenada Collegiate Institute. And, oh! how she is booming. Just think of it: We now have about sixty boarders, and more on the way. The town is elated over our success, and already talking of enlarging the building that we may be able to provide, at least, for one hundred and twenty-five boarders by the opening of the Fall term. There is no reason why we may not have that number, if all of the pastors will preach on the subject of Christian education and the importance of supporting our own institutions. We have enough Methodist girls in North Mississippi to crowd our own college, and then have enough left to fill Maione College—and also to support two Cumberland Presbyterian schools.

Dr. Steele says (so I have been informed) that the friends of Malone College propose to make it an institution for the girls of North Mississippi what Millsaps is for the boys of Mississippi. Now, the Doctor need not do that, for Malone and I have already done that right here in Grenada—or, at least, we think so, as also many others do.

This is the finest place for a college in the State of Mississippi. It is such a healthy place. This is proven by the fact that during the present college year there has been no case of severe sickness, but each girl has gained, on an average, ten pounds. Our grounds are beautiful, and are amply large for all purposes, and lie far above the height to which any microbe has been seen to crawl. Now, if I did not believe these facts to be true, I would be elsewhere to-day, working for another college. We propose to make this the Vassar of the South within the next ten years.

We want to add one hundred thousand dollars worth of improvements shortly, and then some of you boys will with you had been among the "truly loyal" to our institution. (Come again, D. Steele.)

While I've not held any revival meetings since Conference, still I have preached many times for the brethren here and there.

I was over, not long since, to see my old friend, Dr. Price, and his good people. The Doctor holds a warm place in the hearts and affections of the people of Greenwood. He has not been very well, part of the time, since Conference. He had a slight stroke of paralysis in his face that interfered with his speaking; but I believe he has about recovered from it. Bro. Price is very happy (in his new parsonage) over his appointment, and well he may be, for it is one of the best in the Conference. Ah, me! but I wish we had more laymen like Thayer, Austin, Johnson, Jones, and others I might mention.

While I was in the bottoms—I mean Delta—I spent one day and night, at Indianola, with that sweet-spirited, consecrated man, Bro. Eugene Johnson. He made me take up a collection to pay off a church debt of long standing, and in a few minutes we had in money and good subscriptions the desired amount, which was about $200. And I am going over in a few days to dedicate the church and deliver a lectors. My subject for lecture is "Kaleidoscope," and I "catch em gwine and comin'."

I spent third Sunday in January with Bro. Lowe and Bro. Thames at Verona, and, oh! what a blessed time we did have. I don't know when I ever enjoyed a quarterly meeting occasion so much. The Lord was there in great power. Bro. Thames was very tender and mellow. He preached on Saturday a sermon of great thought and of Holy Ghost power. How his words did stir our hearts! His voice did not worry me at all, though I think I have an ear for the mellifluous. It is a great mistake that we preachers magnify one another's faults till we sometimes embarrass a brother and put him at a discount, at least, with a new congregation.

The "extinguished evangelist" preached on Saturday night, and also Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. That quarterly meeting struck me as being like some of those we read about during the early days of Methodism. There was a time when the quarterly meeting was indeed an occasion. The people expected something, and they were not often disappointed. And there is no reason why it should not be a time of great occasion now, if the pastor would only get ready for it. But some pastors are just about as big failures along there as many are in preparing the way for a brother who is to assist him in a revival. So much depends on a live pastor. Bro. Lowe is a fine man and a strong preacher, and he had talked the meeting and prayed for it till he had talked and prayed it into the hearts and consciences of the people.

That Sunday afternoon I rode through the country four miles and preached for Dr. Sullivan's people at Tupelo. The house was crowded, and I tried to give them some sound gospel. We held a great meeting in Tupelo last Summer, and many of the Doctor's people received an allopathic e religion that has lasted till this day—and I hope it will cling to them through eternity. We found Dr. Sullivan happy in his work. He is doing a great work in Tupelo, and the good people there appreciate him. It is worth a trip across the State to come in contact with that cultured Christian gentleman. I would as soon risk my reputation in Dr. Sullivan's hands as with my own wife. He is utterly incapable of doing a mean thing.

It seems to me that since Bro. Hargrove's transfer to heaven, that Bro. Sullivan might be truthfully called the Nathanael of our Conference. May the Lord spare him to us many more years, that like Elijah, in the evening of his life, he may be a great blessing to our young prophets who may come into the Conference.

The next day I spent with Bro. Sage and his good wife at Booneville. I preached to an immense crowd in the new Baptist Church. The people of Booneville were very much disappointed in not having Bro. Park returned. But they are all right now, and the stewards have made the same assessment for Bro. Sage as they had promised to pay, provided Bro. Park was returned and the town made a station. We predict a new church for Booneville this year, for Bro. Sage is noted for building new churches.

But I must close this lengthy epistle. I have only one more of this kind that I expect to write, and I'll give that to your readers a little later.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

Rev. Jas. L. Bowling, P. C., Thayer station, St. Louis Conference: "Although I am away off up here in Missouri, I still feel I have a place in the dear old ADVOCATE, and hence I grant myself the liberty of writing in her columns a report of our meeting here feeling that many of my near and dear friends in North Mississippi Conference will be glad to hear from me, and it may cheer them on the way. On Jan. 19 I began a meeting here, and continued for eighteen days and nights, resulting in 43 conversions and 32 accessions, with more to follow. Family altars have been established, 'Woman's Foreign Missionary Society,' and our people are alive to close Bible study and reading—in fact, it was a revival along all lines. Bro. H. P. Crowe, of North Mississippi Conference, came up and helped us nearly two weeks, preaching with power and in full demonstration of the Spirit. The Lord was with him, and we all feel happier, stronger and much benefited by his coming. After his leave myself and Bro. Soore took hold and run the meeting for several days. I used to wonder if the same shouting religion existed everywhere as it does in Mississippi. Now I can say it is verily the same grand hallelujahs and rejoicing, old-time religion in Missouri that I enjoyed in Mississippi, and I think truly our Lord blesses his children here as elsewhere. Yes, I thank God that, although we have a live town here of 2,000 inhabitants, we also have a good supply of 'the old-time religion,' and it's good enough for me. Doctor, it would do you so much good to come up and see us. Can't you take a vacation and come up? I will desist from telling you of this grand country, though I would like so much to do so, but my letter would be too lengthy. The ADVOCATE reaches me regularly, and I am always, more than ever, eager to scan its pages. It is like a letter from home. Continue to let it come to see this preacher, and if arrearages pile up too high, bundle them up and ship them up here, and I will send you something that will be more handy for you to make room for. Say to all inquiring friends, that I am here, not in an altogether, sunny South, but in a mixture of sun and snow, and at this time of year more snow than sun. Am doing all in my power to promote the cause of God and the church. Have a nice good place to work, and God is mightily blessing me in every way. Pray for us and come to see us. More anon."

Rev. S. B. Beall, Abbeville, La.: "We are, indeed, most fortunate in being sent to this charge. During our stay here, since Jan. 2, we have had many substantial proofs of the kind regards and brotherly love of many of our parishioners. Almost every day has brought some token of kindness and appreciation from our neighbors. Our snug little cottage, the parsonage, had its larder filled with a great variety of good things that strengthen the inner man and bid defiance to the howling wolf that crouches at so many doors during these so-called 'hard times.' I have preached to large and increasing congregations, and the general outlook is encouraging. We anticipate large and glorious results in this part of the Lord's vineyard during this year, and we solicit your earnest prayers. We daily invoke the richest blessings of the Divine Father to rest upon the hearts and homes of all in our midst. Our first Quarterly Conference was held here the twenty-sixth and seventh of last month. Our presiding elder (Bro. H. O. White) gave us two soul-stirring sermons, and encouraged us generally by his good words and kind advice. May God give us grace and strength to minister to these dear people, spiritually, as they have to us, temporally. Success to you, Mr. Editor, and the much-beloved ADVOCATE."

Rev. Thos. W. Flowers: "I must tell what the Lord is doing for us here in Victor, Mont., where I have been preaching for twenty years off and on, and now the good seed that has been sown begins to produce fruit to the honor and glory of God. Bros. Kauffman, Stanley, presiding elder, and D. B. Price commenced preaching here on first Sunday in January with small attendance, and have continued the services every evening up to this writing, and we expect to continue as long as souls are being converted. The preaching has been in power and unction from on high, accompanied by the Holy Spirit to the hearts of unbelievers, and many have been saved from their sins. Up to the present writing 20 have joined the church, and a goodly number have been converted. The people in this vicinity are more powerfully stirred and concerned about Christianity than I have ever seen here before. God be praised! The Bitter Root Valley belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by pre emption, and we intend to occupy it, and by God's grace save just as many souls as possible. Pray for our success, and, if possible, send us two or three preachers who are not afraid of hard work and are willing to make some sacrifice for the salvation of souls for whom Christ died."

Rev. W. M. Williams: "This is our fourth year at Decatur. Our people have received us well for the fourth time, which shows that they are long-suffering and kind. We had our first quarterly meeting the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh of January. We had done more even in that one month than we had last year at the second quarterly meeting. Our people have paid about one fifth of their assessment. We have bought the lumber to ceil the church at Union, and paid for it. Have made needed improvements on the parsonage. We are planning now to build a new church at Conehatta. Our stewards have adopted a new plan this year, which I think suits the country better than any plan I have ever tried. The plan is for every member to pay at the beginning of the year half of his assessment, and the balance in the Fall. Farmers have more supplies and money now than they will have again till Fall. We have now about enough corn, fodder, molasses, meat, lard and meal to last us till Fall. If the stewards of every country appointment were to adopt this plan, it would relieve the country preacher very much. Our people are kind, helpful, and appreciative. We are all, both people and preacher, trying to do better this year than we have ever done. Our people need to read more, think more, do more, and pray more."

I Had Coltre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

Read This.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confound this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

The Holman Bible in Three Sizes.

$1.25, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to March, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.25. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

You may use this letter if you see fit for the benefit of suffering humanity. Yours truly,

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL, PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

M. D. BARBER.

Dr. Edson's Cure for Consumption.

Since the modern discoveries in bacteriology, eminent scientists have been experimenting on remedies for certain prevalent diseases. The most remarkable discovery lately made is that of the antitoxin cure for diphtheria. It has been a marked success. Probably no other disease has attracted so much attention or called forth so much effort as consumption, due, no doubt, to the wide prevalence and usually fatal character of this malady. Since the announcement of the lymph of Doctor Koch, the celebrated German scientist, some years ago, interest in this subject and efforts to reach this end have seemed to increase. Last week a most important publication was made on the subject by Doctor Cyrus Edson, of New York, formerly health commissioner of that city. He has been experimenting for months, and believes that he has made a valuable discovery. He has published the principles on which he bases his treatment, and the formula, in the Medical Record. It consists of the introduction of "aseptolin" hypodermically into the circulatory system. This remedy, which he minutely describes, acts as a disinfectant in the blood, removing the destructive bacilli.

This publication has attracted wide attention in the medical profession, and it will be thoroughly tested. It is not wise to receive every new discovery in this line at its claims, but certainly this one seems well worthy of careful study.—Pittsburg Advocate.

A Marvel of Science.

For the past two weeks the papers have teemed with accounts of a new development of the photographic art by which a picture may be made of an object encased in a wooden box, or of goods enclosed in a portmanteau, or even of the bones in a man's body.

As we write we have before us a printed copy of a photograph of the bones of a man's living hand, taken in the physical laboratory of Hamburg. The plates on which the photograph were received were at the moment within a closed photographer's box. In order to make the picture the rays had to pass through the hand that was photographed, and also pass through the wooden cover of the box. Yet the photograph distinctly depicts every bone of the man's hand.

The Office of Fear in Religion.

Though sinners dislike to hear the terrors of the law dwelt upon, yet the ambassador for Christ must preach the whole truth, picturing in vivid colors the justice as well as the love of God. Preachers not infrequently hear the cry for "more love and less law, for more about heaven and less about hell;" but faithfulness to the gospel commission and, more than all, intense interest in the spiritual welfare of one's hearers, demand the disregard of such a call. True repentance always has its foundation in fear of the righteous judgment of God. It is only by appealing to fear that the careless and impenitent can be wakened out of the sleep of death. Though not the only motive that influences men to forsake evil and work righteousness, it is the first that operates.

Perhaps this phase of Scripture truth has been unduly emphasized by some preachers. Nevertheless, the powerful convictions which attended the preaching of the Wesleys and of Methodist itinerants a generation or two ago would never have been produced by the diluted gospel now occasionally heard from some so-called evangelical pulpits. It is and ever will be true that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." The thunders of Sinai preceded the giving of the law. Even so the threatenings of God's judgment prepare the heart for repentance and righteousness. Sometimes, it is true, men become so abandoned as to be destitute of godly fear, being thus no better than the brutes. Criminals about to be executed have time and again manifested this stolidity. We hold, as did Mr. Wesley, that "to preach Christ is to preach all that he hath revealed, either in the Old or the New Testament; so that you are then as really preaching Christ, when you are saying, 'The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the people that forget God,' as when you are saying, 'Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.'"

To suppose that after conversion the Christian has nothing to do with fear is very erroneous. While there is no longer a sense of dread on account of uncanceled guilt and unaverted judgment, a deep feeling of reverence should possess the whole heart; nor should it ever fade out of our experience. This kind of fear manifests itself in seriousness of conduct and speech, not a sobriety, however, unbroken by mirth, or foreign to cheerfulness. Our lives ought to be pervaded by the spirit of reverence that levity in the house of God and flippancy in talking of sacred things at no time characterize our behavior. It could never be told, however, from the conduct of some churchmen that the church is a sacred place, for they talk and jest in it immediately before service as if it were a public parlor. There is a wide gulf between the spirit of prayer and the spirit of jesting; yet some are foolish enough to try to bridge this gulf in a single moment. Since the saints and angels in worshiping Jehovah prostrate themselves before the throne, crying, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty," how much greater should be the reverence and humility with which we approach the Divine Majesty!

There is no surer sign of spiritual deadness than habitual levity. It is well to be able to appreciate a good joke, but to seek the ridiculous in everything is harmful in no small degree. An inveterate jester is hardly capable of serious thoughts and impressions, or of appreciating grandeur and sublimity. Those who regard life merely as a joke are not the ones to undertake grave enterprises.

Not the least among the evil tendencies of the times is that towards cynicism. Nothing is too sacred to escape the ruthless brush of the caricaturist or the criticism of the would-be savant. It is high time to call a halt in this direction.

True reverence is accompanied by the fear of offending, or, in other words, by a sense of our conditional liability to displease God. This form of fear is not cast out by "perfect love," but is its inseparable companion. Says Dr. Adam Clarke: "We are not to suppose that the love of God casts out every kind of fear from the soul; it only casts out that which has torment. A filial fear is consistent with the highest degrees of love; and even necessary to the preservation of that grace." If after receiving forgiveness and the earnest of the Spirit, we have little or no anxiety about falling into sin and coming short of the glory of God, ours is a presumptuous, unscriptural trust. The exhortation of the Apostle Peter applies to every Christian: "If ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons, judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear."

How much more circumspectly we would live, if daily and hourly we felt ourselves in the immediate presence of God, as did Elijah and other Old Testament worthies. The astronomer Mitchell, it is said, was one day viewing a sunset through a large telescope, when he noticed two boys stealing apples from a tree on the summit of a hill seven miles away, over which came the rays of the sinking orb. One of the boys was gathering the fruit, while the other was watching, both feeling certain they were unobserved. But the astronomer through the great eye of the telescope saw it all. Likewise, when we imagine that no one knows of our selfish plans and defections, God is looking on. If the words, "Thou, God, seest me," could constantly ring in our ears, we would be kept from many a sin, from many an omission of duty.

The Christian, then, is not under the dominion of a cringing, tormenting fear; but, deeply impressed with God's hatred of sin, he is anxious to please him in all things, knowing that in due time he shall receive a glorious reward. "In the fear of the Lord," says the writer of Proverbs, "is strong confidence; and his children shall have a place of refuge." "Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."

Bishop Keener and the Evangelist at the Texas Conference.

For the past two months a great deal has been said in several of our church papers concerning a ruling of Bishop Keener during the last session of the Texas Conference. It was said that the Bishop declined to put a motion to locate a brother at his own request for the reason that he had announced it as his purpose to engage in evangelical work. In the last issue of the Alabama Advocate, Bev. G. C. Rankin, of Houston, Texas, makes a different statement of the matter. We quote as follows:

"When the request for location was made, the Bishop made substantially the remarks upon the merit of the cause as published; but, in conclusion, said that he would pass the matter by for awhile, in order that the brother might think the question over a little further, in the light in which the chair had presented it. The Bishop did not refuse to put the request for location to the Conference at all, but merely passed it by for the time being. In a day or so the brother of his own accord arose and stated to the Bishop and the Conference that upon reflection he had determined not to locate, but go on in the regular pastorate, and thus the matter ended. The entire Conference, so far as I heard an expression, thought the Bishop acted wisely in the case, and thus saved a valuable man to the regular work of the church. The brother himself took that view of the Bishop's action, and is now perfectly satisfied with and happy in his pastoral charge. Had he persisted peremptorily in his request for a location, I have no doubt but that it would have been granted. The good Bishop showed no disposition to act arbitrarily in the matter, but stated his views clearly and kindly and temporarily postponed the matter. And not only did the Bishop thus act wisely and in an eminently Christian spirit, but his whole attitude toward the question was that of a loving spiritual father toward his children."

The Salvation Army.

A few weeks ago we noted the recall of Commander Ballington Booth and his wife from this country by General Booth. On last Monday evening a meeting was held in Carnegie Hall, New York, to protest against this action. The hall was crowded, not a seat being vacant. Dr. Channcey M. D pew presided and made an address. Other addresses were delivered by Josiah Strong, D. D., Mayor Strong, Bishop Andrews and William E. Dodge. Letters were read from a number of persons unable to be present, and a series of resolutions was passed. All these spoke in the highest terms of the work of the Army, and of the skill and ability of Commander and Mrs. Booth in directing its affairs. It was in many ways a most remarkable meeting.

Attention is now called to this meeting, not because of its immediate object, or any effect it is likely to have on the recall of the American commanders, but rather as indicating the present estimate of the Army by leading Christians of the several churches. It was spoken of on this occasion as one of the important religious forces of the country—one which should be encouraged and aided. And such it has no doubt come to be. Its methods are unusual, some of them grotesque and offensive to refined taste; but they are adapted to the work to be done and the classes to be reached. It is true, as stated at the New York meeting, that there are people, especially in the great cities, who are not reached by the ordinary methods of church work. Some extraordinary means must be devised to attract them. For these the Army is intended, and to them it is adapted. Among them it is doing great good, and for this reason it is indorsed. General Booth is a remarkable man, and his wife was a still more impressive personality; and they started a movement which will not stop until the world shall have been converted. It is pleasant to see this work receiving indorsement from the highest walks of social, ecclesiastical and official life.—Pittsburg Advocate

Turkey.

The Government of Europe are a spectacle to make angels weep. They guard the gates of Turkey, so to say, solemnly declaring that whatever may happen to the Christians, however diabolically they may be tortured to death, nothing shall happen to the Turks. They, at any rate, must and will be preserved from hurt or harm. Is it a wonder, then, that the Turks should set about fulfilling their threat of wiping out Armenia in Armenian blood? Everyone knew that that threat would be fulfilled; consuls reported to their Governments that the departure of the European delegates from Moush would mark the beginning of the blood-bath, and newspapers gave the prophecy publicity. Appeals to the public to insist on precautionary measures were multiplied, and at last verbal warnings gave place to unmistakable signs and preparations—but diplomacy turned a deaf ear.—Truth.

A New Book.

HOW TO STRENGTHEN THE MEMORY; or, Natural and Scientific Methods of Never Forgetting. By M. L. Holbrook, M. D., editor of "The Herald of Health," author of "Hygiene of the Brain," "Parturition without Pain," etc. 12 mo. 153 pp. Cloth. M. L. Holbrook & Co., New York.

Convinced that most mnemonic systems are cumbersome and unsatisfactory, the author of this work, some years ago, set himself to discover the simple and natural methods of memory culture, and now gives to the public a statement, clear and forceful, of the principles which govern the exercise and development of the memory. A strong and tenacious memory, the author asserts, is largely the result of patience and perseverance in observing the laws of association, comparison, attention, repetition, and the securing of a vivid first impression. In the outset is shown the intimate and vital relation subsisting between a good memory and robust health. Much useful hygienic advice is given. All persons desirous of improving their memories will find this a helpful, practical treatise on the subject, containing in small compass the product of long and careful investigation by an able authority. "Suggestions for Clergymen" is the title of one of the closing chapters. There is a short appendix by the author's friend, Mr. John Fretwell, of Eisenach, Germany.

Millsaps College Notes.

Bishop Galloway was present at the Missionary Service of the Y. M. C. A., Sunday, the ninth, and made an address which was greatly enjoyed.

Bishop and Mrs. A. W. Wilson have been welcome visitors to the home of Prof. W. L. Weber. The Bishop preached a great sermon, Sunday morning, to an immense congregation at the First Methodist Church.

The appearance of our gymnasium building has been greatly improved by the painter's brush, and work now being done on the college grounds will enhance the attractiveness of our campus.

The third anniversary of the Lamar Literary Society will be celebrated with appropriate exercises, March 27. Mr. D. G. McLaurin will represent the society as anniversarian, and Hon. R. H. Thompson, of Brookhaven, Miss., will deliver the annual address.

A memorial service in honor of the late Bishop Aticus G. Haygood was held in the college chapel, Wednesday afternoon, Jan 22. Presiding Elder Norsworthy read the Scriptures and offered prayer, and addresses were made by President Murrah, Bishop Galloway and Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt.

NOTES.

The address of Rev. H. M. Banks, pastor of Centerville circuit, is Jena, La.

Revs. C. C. Weir and J. M. Tucker recently made a brief sojourn in the city.

Rev. A. E. Clay held a very interesting children's meeting at Carondelet last Sunday afternoon.

Rev. F. S. Parker gave his congregation last Sunday a strong and timely sermon against worldliness.

Moody is holding a meeting in Nashville. Large crowds are in attendance and great interest is manifested.

The Presbyterian Church Extension Society of St. Louis has undertaken to raise $100 000 to carry on its work.

The ladies of the various Methodist Churches in the city will carry on a restaurant for the next two weeks at 1025 Canal street, for the benefit of Centenary College. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage.

The governor of Chihuahua ordered out 1 000 troops to prevent, on Mexican soil, the prize-fight announced for last week.

In the great fire in Philadelphia, Sunday morning Feb. 2, the Baptist publication society lost $400,000 worth of property.

Rev. Samuel P. Jones is to hold a meeting soon in the auditorium in Atlanta, in which Moody held his meeting during the Exposition.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin presented the claims of the American Bible Society last Sabbath at Carrollton. Bishop Keener also made a strong speech in its behalf.

A Roman Catholic priest, J. M. Fitzgerald, was convicted at Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 5, of conspiring to set fire to a parochial school to secure insurance money.

Rev. J. Victor Penn, of the Mississippi Conference, is spending a few days in the city. He preached an excellent sermon at Rayne Memorial on Sunday night.

In speaking of the University Association, in a recent issue, we omitted the names of the faculty for want of space. Our readers will find the list on our fifth page in this week's issue.

By the will of Ezekiel J. Donnell, nearly all his estate, amounting to $630 000, is bequeathed to the New York Free Circulating Library, for the purpose of erecting a building and maintaining a free reading-room.

It is said that a boy in New York invested 2 cents in a postage stamp, and made $6 000 on that capital. He sent in a bid for $150 000 of the government bonds at a price which insured his getting them, and then sold his bid for $6 000.

Rev. A. J. Jones, of the North Mississippi Conference, paid an appreciated call at the ADVOCATE office last week. He was en route to San Antonio, Texas, whither he goes for sanitary reasons. He will remain about two months.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Tennessee, at its session held a few days since, passed resolutions instructing local lodges to refuse to confer degrees upon liquor dealers. Mississippi took similar action a few years since. This is an indication of rapid progress in the right direction.

In the case of the United States against Joseph R. Dunlop, publisher of the Chicago Dispatch, Feb. 4, the jury decided the defendant guilty of violating the law prohibiting the circulation of obscene literature through the mails. Dunlop was fined $2,000 and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Good for Uncle Sam!

Miss Anna Lee Parker, daughter of Rev. J. A. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, was married, Dec. 11, to Mr. T. B. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins is a son of a prominent physician of Lafayette, La. The ADVOCATE'S best wishes accompany the young couple as they embark upon the sea of matrimonial life.

Something new in the way of religious work has been recently projected in this city in the shape of a non-sectarian Sunday-school. It is domiciled in the W. S. I. A. Hall, corner of Hilary and St. Charles streets. The meetings are held in the afternoon between four and five o'clock. The Dunning-Medina Music Co. have furnished a piano for use in the school free of charge.

Some years ago both North and South undertook to suppress crime by the use of lynch law. Has the lynch law increased the respect for human life? Has it led the lawless to desist from crime through fear? The statistics, as we find them in an exchange, show that in 1890, in this country, there were 4,290 murders; in 1891, 5,908; in 1892, 6,794; in 1893, 6,615; in 1894, 9,800; in 1895, 10 500. Do not these facts add to the public condemnation of all mob violence?—Exchange.

The increase in the number of churches keeps tally with the increase of communicants, and so, also, does the increase in the number of ministers. The addition of 19,400 churches in five years is a remarkable indication of the activity of the Christian forces. This increase means new centers of religious influence and religious work, new societies, and new and large investments. If the belief in Christianity were less vital than we believe it is, we should hardly expect the number of churches to be multiplied. If fewer and fewer people were uniting with the church, or believed in the objects of the church where would the church obtain the means for these additional houses of worship, and where would the demand for them come from?—The Independent.

Clarke's Commentaries Free.

We will give a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions, in six volumes, to any preacher who will send us fifteen new cash subscribers at the regular rate. Every new subscriber so obtained will be entitled to our Bibles at premium rates. Here's your chance. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

To Our Preachers.

Our recent premium offers to agents promise to bear abundant fruit. We deem it proper at this time to call the attention of our agents to one of the conditions of these offers, viz.: that the full subscription price must be sent in. The unsuccessful competitors will have all their commissions returned in cash. The successful competitors will, of course, get no commissions, the premiums being more than an equivalent.

To the Preachers of the Petrolzieg Conferences.

In keeping with our motto, "Better and better," we make the following offers: (1) To the preacher who sends us the largest number of new cash subscribers at the regular rate between now and the first of July we will present a handsome parlor organ catalogued at $225. (2) To the preacher sending us the second largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present either a handsome gold-filled watch, guaranteed to be a perfect time-keeper, and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, or an Arlington B Sewing Machine, whichever may be preferred. (3) To the preacher sending the third largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, the same described in our offer elsewhere.

Notice that these are to be cash subscriptions at the regular rate. No commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Then, every unsuccessful competitor will have his commissions returned to him in cash.

Brethren, here is a chance to help yourselves at the same time that you help your Conference organ, and also render a service of incalculable value to the people whom you serve. If any brother does not need an organ, that need not prevent his entering the list, as the organ can be sold. Should the successful competitor wish to convert his organ into money, we will advertise it for him two months, free of charge. Those who wish to compete for this premium should notify us at once.

REV. W. C. BLACK,

The label on your paper indicates the date of expiration of your subscription. If the date is Jan., '96, or any time earlier than that, then you are in arrears. Don't wait for us to send you a dun, but send us the money at once. If you wish to discontinue your subscription, you have only to say so, after paying up to date.

Notice.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the Louisiana Conference "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society" will be held in Ruston, March 13, 14 and 15 1896. Auxiliaries will elect delegates at once, and send names to Mrs. Anna Guthrie, chairman of Committee on Entertainment, at Ruston. We trust that each auxiliary will send the Conference secretary a complete annual report by March 1, 1896. We hope to make this convention of more interest that any yet held. Pray that the annual meeting may prove a grand success for time and eternity. Mrs. Elizabeth R. Kennedy has been elected editor of our F. and H. M. column in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please send items of interest connected with our work to her. Address, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, No. 1476 Magazine, near Race streets.

Bro. Ellis' Correction.

As statistical secretary of the finance table, Mississippi Conference, I wish to say that I have no means of learning what was paid on any charge but by the reports of the preachers, and these I tried to faithfully record.

The report of Bro. Ellis, which lies before me, shows that Port Gibson paid $96 to foreign missions, and not $102 as stated in his correction. The Minutes exactly correspond with his report.

If accuracy is worth so much to Bro. Ellis, he should learn to be accurate, and not rush into print and try to throw the blame of his own inaccuracy on some one else.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

Notice.

Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference:

Will you make an effort to raise your foreign missionary assessment this March? If you will raise it, you will help us in two ways at least: 1. Lighten the burden at the end of the year. 2. Relieve the Board of Missions that are striving to answer the cries for bread that is coming from beyond the seas. Preach, and pray, and work, and the assessment will be paid in most places. W. S. SHIPMAN, Tr.

Notice.

To Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents of the Mississippi Conference:

The Sunday-school Board has money with which to aid your schools, if you can show to the Board that you need, that you desire, that you will use help. I have sent to all pastors blanks to be used in applying. Superintendents may secure them from their pastors. Act promptly, even though it be at the expense of accuracy.

H. G. HAWKINS, Sec'y.

Money for Women!

In these hard times ladies as well as men should improve every opportunity to increase their bank accounts; and any man or woman can make from $10 to $20 a day, if they will only try. I have not made less than $20 clear any day the past year, and I had no experience and not very good health. My husband assisted me evenings. I put notices of the Dish Washer in the papers, but do not canvass any. I have examined particularly all the Dish Washers made, and find the Climax decidedly the best. Address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you just how to run the business. Every family wants a Climax Dish Washer, and will buy as soon as they get a chance, as you can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes without wetting the hands.

A READER.

Notice.

To the Pastors of Jackson District, Mississippi Conference:

At the recent meeting of the district stewards, a small assessment was made on each pastoral charge for repairs on district parsonage. The secretary has furnished each pastor with the amount asked of his charge. These amounts are small. Will you please collect and forward to me at once? The money is needed now.

Holman Bible at $1 25

By buying in wholesale quantities we are able to make the following reduction in our Emerald-type Holman Bible. This Bible we have sold heretofore at $1 50 We now offer it at $1.25 to those who pay their subscription a full year in advance—that is, to March, '97. We do not advise any person who has passed the meridian of life to get this Bible, on account of the smallness of the print. For young persons, however, it will answer as well as the more expensive styles. It has all the helps of the larger sizes. Address

"Perfectly Delighted."

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "My wife is perfectly delighted with the Sewing Machine, and says it is equal to any she ever used." This is a sample of dozens of letters received from those who have bought our premium machine. Those who need a machine should order soon, as the price may be slightly increased.

Keep Salvation Oil in the gymnasium. It is a sovereign remedy for cuts, strains, bruises and sprains, to which acrobats and athletes are liable at all times. It is the greatest cure on earth for pain. 25 cts.

We invite special attention to our offer on another page of Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, and Conybeare & Howson's Life and Epistles of St. Paul. These are books that ought to be in the library of every preacher, every Sunday-school teacher, and every person who aspires to be a well-posted Methodist. This is one of the best offers we have ever made.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have made $1 640 clear money in 87 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass at all; people come or send for the washers, and every washer that goes out sells two or three more as they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now and I am sure I can clear $5 000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 140 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money, its your own fault. Mrs. W. H.

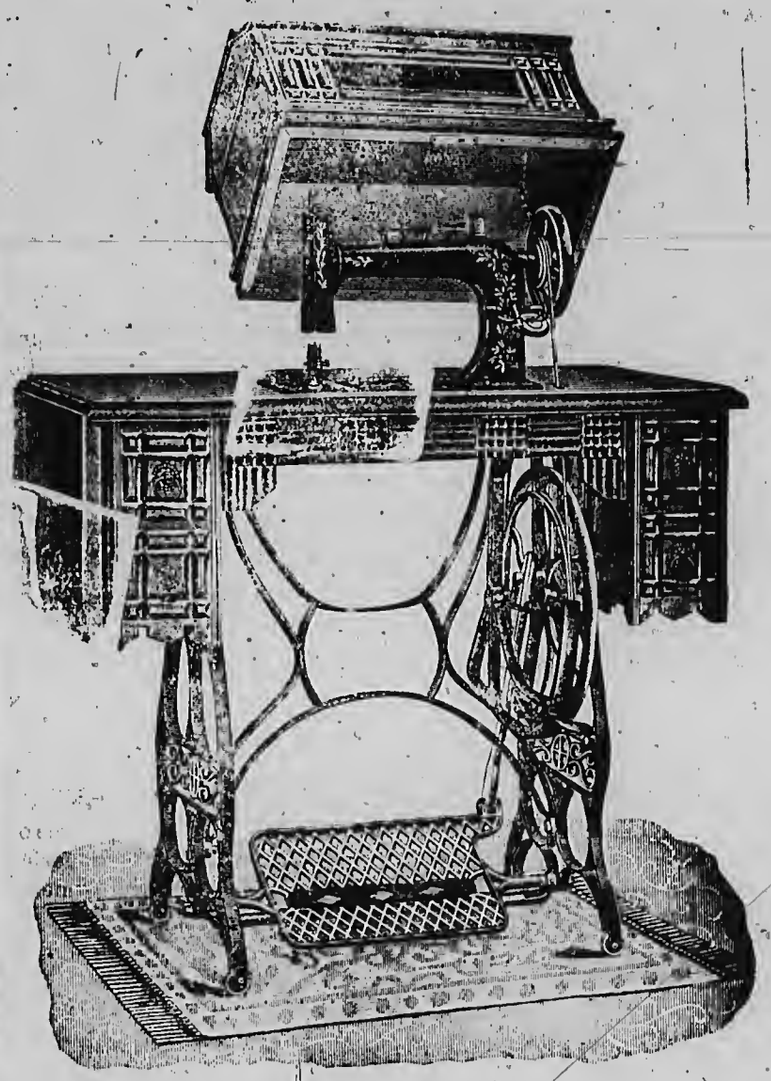
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one roder-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

TRUST IN GOD AND DO THE RIGHT.

Courage, brother, do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble;
"Trust in God and do the right."

Let the road be rough and dreary,
And its end far out of sight,
Foot it bravely! strong or weary,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Perish policy and cunning!
Perish all that fears the light!
Whether losing, whether winning,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no party, sect or faction;
Trust no leaders in the fight;
But in every word and action
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no lovely forms of passion,
Friends may look like angels bright;
Trust no custom, school, or fashion,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Simple rule, and safest guiding,
Inward peace and inward might,
Star upon our path abiding,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight;
Cease from man and look above thee,
"Trust in God and do the right."

A Difference.

A distinguished lady of wealth and influence, noted for model specimens of children, was asked by a friend and mother, "Why are my children sickly and croupy, and yours always free from such conditions?" The reply was: "You rest your children indoors, I mine out; yours are educated to be waited on by your servants, I discipline mine to wait upon themselves; my children are early to bed, you give parties for yours with late hours, and allow them to attend parties and keep late hours from home, fashionably dressed; my children have plain, wholesome food, adapted to their years, yours eat sweetmeats, rich and highly-seasoned dishes, and are overfed generally; I teach mine to love nature and to feel that there is nothing arrayed so finely as the lily of the field, the bees, and the butterflies; that there is nothing so mean as a lie, nor anything so miserable as disobedience; that it is a disgrace to be sick, and that good health, good teeth, and good temper come from plain food, proper clothing, plenty of sleep, and being good."—The Medical Age.

Early Converted.

The brightest lights in the churches were converted in early life. Adam Clarke, the commentator, was converted at four years of age. His influence will shine in the moral heavens while the sun shines in the natural heavens.

Alfred Cookman, the great revivalist, was converted at ten years of age. He will shine in the kingdom of God as the stars in the firmament of heaven forever and ever, and thousands will rise in the judgment and called him blessed.

Isaac Watts, the great poet, was converted to Christ at the age of nine years. The influence of this great man of God, in tuning the golden harps, will be felt through the endless ages of eternity.

Robert Hall was converted at twelve.

Jonathan Edwards at seven.

William Penn at nine.—Harvester.

This was the sage conclusion of the late Dr. Muhlenberg: "The man who finds no interest in those beyond his own family will soon have a selfish household; the rector who confines his appeals and labor to the work of his own parish will soon have a selfish congregation; the Bishop who, by absorption in his particular field, becomes indifferent to every other claim, will soon have a selfish diocese. Selfishness, whenever and however fostered and developed, must eventually work the ruin of the home interest which it attempts to serve by this narrow policy."

Righteous Skipping

It used to be considered a bad habit to skip, when one was reading a book. But times have changed; opinions, prejudices, codes of ethics, standards of conduct—almost all the old things have suffered more or less from that transforming process which always follows the sudden access of more light. It is no longer a sort of breach of morals to skip whole paragraphs and pages of books. Indeed, it has become the finest art of reading to skip wisely! What scholar nowadays reads a book doggedly, mechanically through and then draws a sigh of satisfaction at the close, because he hasn't skipped a word? The modern reader must skip, ought to skip. There is at least an intellectual obligation upon him to do so. The art is, to know what to skip. When one skips wisely in his reading he develops mental judgment, adds to his store of knowledge wheat unmixed with chaff, and saves something of God's most priceless gift—time.

So there is a certain virtue in skipping portions of books. That is one kind of righteous skipping—but only a small part of the whole.

There is a moral obligation resting upon us to skip certain records of experience—"forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto the things which are before." Skip the old depressing thoughts—drop them out of memory—lighten the wings of the spirit, seeking higher levels of life and hope. Don't carry a dummy of the burden which Christ has taken off your shoulder. Sing on your upward pilgrim path—don't sit down to mope. Skip the memory of old, forgiven, conquered sins and faults. It is righteous skipping.

Skip old sorrows. What good does it do to weep over them? If they have brought you any living inspirations or lessons, dwell on these. If you must needs keep your bottled tears, keep them where the sunshine may paint rainbows in them.

Skip vexations. Nobody ever profited by dwelling upon them. If your friend, your brother, your wife, your husband, drops a hasty word—for which, no doubt, in their secret hearts they are sorry immediately—forget it. If you do not cherish it, it is gone; it is as if it had not been. Oh, the Christ-likeness of forgiving and forgetting!

Skip temptation, skip impure thoughts, skip complainings, skip the angry thought and word, skip everything that you are better without. What a good thing skipping is! How strange that people do not count it more of a virtue, as well as an accomplishment! There is a good deal more righteousness than we have thought, perhaps, in that simple, negative thing—a hiatus.—Zion's Herald.

If you and I, under God, are called to attempt the work of soul-saving we must certainly borrow divine strength if we are to succeed, for what power to save can dwell in an arm of flesh? . . . . O servant of the living God, see that your loins be girt with omnipotence for such a task as this, for to save the soul of the smallest child in the Sabbath-school will need the same power that raised Christ from the dead. . . . . As Mr. Great-heart is described by Bunyan as conveying the women and children to the celestial city, and fighting the giants for them, even so should we.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Satan seldome does a bigger day's work than when he convinces a young girl that she ought to read the unclean literature of the day so that she may know how to avoid the snares and pitfalls which beset her life.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

WITH WARNER'S SAFE Cure.

Look for the Best.

Cultivate the habit of looking for the best in human nature. Don't fall into the easy and disagreeable habit of always seeing and speaking of the worst. There is some good in every life, and to appreciate it is an evidence that there is some good in us.

In this connection a famous poet tells of a critic who with great pains gathered all the faults of an eminent poet and presented them to Apollo, who received them graciously and resolved to make him a suitable return for his trouble. He gave him a sack of wheat, and bade him pick out the chaff and lay it to itself. When the complainer had finished his tedious task, Apollo gave him the chaff for his reward, and threw the wheat away. This the critic had done in giving him the poet's chaff; and this we all do too often in life. The purest and best hearts are disposed to see the good in others, and to admire it. Little souls can see only little things; great hearts can appreciate the good. As Dryden says:

"Errors, like straws, upon the surface flow;
He who would search for pearls must dive below."

—North Carolina Advocate.

The Woman Who Laughs.

For a good, every-day household angel give us the woman who laughs. Her biscuit may not always be just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread, and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long, unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the matter has no bright side, of polishing up the dark one, is a very important faculty, one of the things no woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Exchange.

Kind Words.

Kind words do not cost much. They never blister the tongue or lips. We never have heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They make other people good-natured. They also produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used.—Pascal.

Persons looking about for ways of doing good, can make no mistake by investing such sums as they see proper, in sending their favorite newspaper to their neighbors who are unable to take it, or to missionaries, pastors and others, who have to give it up on account of hard times. Many could thus set apart as a special or Christmas donation, five, ten, twenty, or even a hundred dollars to the greatest advantage. No one can estimate the educating, quickening, comforting and saving effect of fifty-two visits a year of a sound, evangelical newspaper to a household. Who among our numerous readers will try the experiment? If you do not know to whom to send The Presbyterian, place what sum your heart and judgment prompts you at our disposal, and we will send the paper to those who will gladly receive it, and who will bless the donors for their generous thoughtfulness.—Presbyterian.

It does not pay to have the mothers and children of twenty families dressed in rags, and starved into the semblance of emaciated scarecrows, and living in hovels, in order that the saloon keeper's wife may dress in satin, and her children grow fat and hearty, and live in a bay-window parlor.

HYGIENE.

Glycerine.

Glycerine is one of the most useful and misunderstood of every-day assistants. It must not be applied to the skin undiluted, or it will cause it to become red and hard, but if rubbed well into the skin while wet, it has a softening and whitening effect. It will prevent and cure chapped hands; two or three drops will often stop the baby's stomach ache. It will allay the thirst of a fever patient and soothe an irritable cough by moistening the dryness of the throat. Equal parts of bay rum and glycerine applied to the face after shaving makes a man rise up and call the woman who provided it blessed. Applied to shoes, glycerine is a great preservative of the leather, and effectually keeps out the water and prevents wet feet. A few drops of glycerine put in the fruit jars, the last thing before sealing them, helps to keep the preserves from moulding on top.—Lutheran Observer.

Turpentine's Many Uses.

Turpentine is an article so widely used in the arts, and so easily obtained, that its virtues as a domestic remedy have, in a great measure, been overlooked, says the Boston Globe.

In the early stages of croup, or any throat or chest trouble, it is well-nigh a specific. The writer has seen the most obstinate cough disappear after its use, as follows: Rub the chest and throat until the skin is red, then tie a piece of flannel or cotton-batting over the chest, moistened with a few drops of the oil, and inhale the vapor. By rubbing on sweet oil, irritation of the skin may be avoided.

For burns it is invaluable, applied either with a rag or in a salve. The pain vanishes, and healthy granulation soon begins. Its use is at first attended with considerable smarting, but the permanent good more than compensates for it.

Treatment for Burns

For the masses of people, many of whom live some distance from drug stores and doctors, there is nothing better than the old-time application of pure lard and flour. It is well worth while for every housekeeper to buy some pounds of pure leaf lard, render it with the utmost care, and put it while piping hot into pots or bottles which may be hermetically sealed. A cupful of lard mixed with flour to form a soft paste may be applied to a burn without loss of time. The experience of years has demonstrated that if this application is followed up, there will be neither scar nor irritation following the healing of the injured part.—New York Ledger.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SNOW EGGS.—Six eggs, one quart of milk, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Separate the yolks carefully from the whites and beat the latter to a stiff froth. Put the milk in a saucepan over the fire, add the sugar and let come to a boil; drop in the snow, a tablespoonful at a time. Cover the saucepan for two minutes, turn the snowballs around, let remain for two minutes longer, then take out with a skimmer and lay in a glass dish. Remove the milk from the fire; let cool off a little; beat up the six yolks, add four tablespoonfuls of cold milk and stir slowly into the hot milk. Place the saucepan with the milk and yolks again over the fire, stir constantly until just before the boiling point. Remove, add the lemon extract and pour it over the snowballs in a glass dish; dust over a little sugar and cinnamon. Serve when cold. Vanilla may be taken in place of lemon.—Selected.

Hope Holly writes in the Ladies' Home Journal these directions:

"RAISED GRAHAM MUFFINS.—Mix two cups of graham, one of cornmeal, and one of white flour with one tablespoonful of sugar, one-half tablespoonful of molasses and enough warm water to make a soft batter.

"Dissolve one-half a yeast cake in water; add it with one-quarter of a teaspoonful of soda to the batter and let it rise over night. In the morning mold with a very little flour into biscuits and bake in a rather quick oven."

The entire tour made in Pullman Private Cars. A journey in which the tourist will be in Mexico and the South-twenty-five days, spending but a few hours over six of these days in travel, and those at broken intervals. Hence glorious hours of sight-seeing in "the most novel land on our continent, and one of the most attractive on any continent." The excursion leaves Chicago Jan. 20 and St. Louis Jan. 21. Arrangements will be made to transfer tourists from points south of Cairo or Memphis to a connection with this excursion at San Antonio, thus obviating the necessity of their going to Chicago or St. Louis. But of their going to Chicago or St. Louis. Send $275 for all expenses of the round trip. Send for illustrated pamphlet giving all particulars.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

A cloud of sorrow rests on the home of our beloved president, Mrs. Hargrove.

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

He has seen fit in his mercy and goodness to send upon our dear sister a deep affliction; to suddenly darken the brightness and sunshine by which her happy life was surrounded. Her husband, by whose side she journeyed so happily and hopefully on her way to heaven—he who was the hope and pride of her life—God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call up higher; has bid him to pass "through the gates into the eternal city of our Lord." We are stunned at the unexpected call, and mingle our tears with the tears of our stricken sister—our dearly beloved president.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Starkville auxiliary have heard with pain and sorrow of this sad affliction, and we desire to give some expression to our feelings, called forth by this mysterious providence; therefore,

Resolved, That we tender to our distressed sister our deepest and most heartfelt sympathy in this, her hour of sad bereavement.

Resolved, That while we deplore the deep affliction, we recognize God's hand in it, and bow submissively to his will.

Resolved, That we will pray that God's richest blessings may rest on the bereaved wife and family; that our beloved president may be sustained and comforted in this great sorrow by the infinite tenderness of our gracious Father, and may find sufficient grace for all her future needs.

Resolved, That the above preamble and resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved wife and family, and to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.

Mrs. E. D. Yeates, chairman; Mrs. R. K. Wier, Mrs. Helen Woodward, committee.

Miss Susie Harrington, Miss Allie Lampkin, Miss Sophia Halbert, Juvenile Society.

WRIGHT—WILLIE J. WRIGHT, the subject of this sketch, was born in Drew county, Ark., June 22, 1867, and died in October, 1895, at his home in Copiah county; was buried at New Hope Church, in Lincoln county, near the scenes of his boyhood. At the age of six years he was adopted by Mr. J. O. Fairman and wife, and remained with them almost continuously for twenty-two years. He was devoted to his adopted parents as well as his own, his mother being yet alive, and was almost idolized by them. He was happily married to Miss Reed, and leaves a wife and small children, and many other near relatives, to mourn his death. He was of a cheerful and social disposition, and was a general favorite with all who knew him. He professed conversion only a few days before his death. Had a bright experience, come from deep repentance into the light of Christ, and desired to live to honor his Savior. But the disease was too much for him to recover from, and he passed peacefully away, surrounded by his loved ones.

The blessings of our heavenly Father be upon the sorrowing ones.

W. T. GRIFFIN.

Mayersville, Miss.

KIDD—Died, on Thursday, Jan. 28, 1896, at 10:30 P. M., in Ruston, La., JAMES I. KIDD. He was the son of James H. and Betsey Bailey Kidd; born in Shelby county, Ala., Dec. 19, 1834. When quite a youth he professed religion and joined the Baptist Church. During the war he went back to the world; but at a camp meeting in Jackson parish, La., he was renewed and united with the Methodist Church, in which he lived until his death. He was twice married: first, to Miss Martha R. Sims, Jan. 27, 1870. She died Aug. 25, 1871, leaving one son, Ernest Sims, now a young man of fine promise. On Feb. 28, 1880, he was married a second time to Miss Zue Mitchell. Five children were the fruit of this last marriage, one of which died in infancy. The widow and five children survive.

He was one of the most successful merchants in Ruston. He was respected and loved by all who knew him. He was upright and just in all of his business transactions. He was hospitable and loved to entertain his friends, a good neighbor, a true and fast friend. He was liberal and unostentatious in the distribution of his charities. Many of God's poor will rise up in the judgment and call him blessed. His family circle was his throne, where peace, love and harmony reigned. He was ever kind, loving and just. His coming in was always a benediction to the household. He was for years a great sufferer from "Bright's disease," of which he died. His last sickness was protracted through many weeks, and he suffered much; yet he bore up under it with great Christian patience and fortitude. All that human love and medical skill could suggest was done for him. His devoted wife seldom left his bedside, day or night. To the last he testified, "My trust is in Jesus." His funeral services were in the Methodist Church on the twenty-ninth. The house could not accommodate the crowd. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bros. T. B. White and J. A. McLeod, the latter pastor of the Presbyterian Church in this place—all old friends of the deceased. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias, and the members of these orders were out in full procession. God bless the bereaved family!

JNO. A. MILLER, Pastor.

CHANEY—An only and idolized son of great promise and noble aspirations was dying. As he looked at the faces of his mother, father, and other loved ones, he forgot his own agony and said, "Another home made desolate." He seemed to see the broken home circle as it would look when he was gone.

And so it could have been said of one sweet home that nestles amid the pines near Bluff Creek Baptist Church, in East Feliciana parish, La., on the seventeenth day of October, 1895, when Miss OLIVE J. CHANEY did "lay her down to die." Fully conscious of her approaching dissolution, "she feared no evil," for she had "remembered her Creator in the days of her youth," and dedicated herself to his service. To her there was no shadow of turning, for she had set her face as a flint to serve the Lord. She mapped out her life-work to give all within the scope of her influence an uplift. Self was forgotten in her eagerness to benefit all with whom she came in contact, and especially those of her own loved circle at home. As she lived, so she died—full of faith and trust in her Savior. To the earnest inquiry of her only sister (Mrs. G. H. Gause, of Slidell, La.), whether there was any cloud that obscured the light from her soul, or gave her any troubling thoughts, she joyously replied: "No, my sister; my Bible has taught me differently from that. Jesus said: 'I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also.'" Often in her long and painful illness did she quote this and other blessed promises that had sustained her in health, and said she was glad to lay aside the mortal for the immortal life. Meekness, patience, and all the Christian graces the dear sufferer displayed, served to lessen and ease the bereaved hearts of the dear, devoted mother and other loved ones.

Ollie is gone, but the world is made better for her having lived in it, and her influence will never die. The mourners go about the house made desolate. "The pitcher is broken at the fountain, the wheel at the cistern;" but when the day breaks and the shadows flee away, then shall we see again

... "these angel faces smile
Which we have loved long since and lost awhile."

SIMON—ALPHONSE L. SIMON, son of R. G. and M. J. Simon, was born in Caldwell parish, La., Oct. 22, 1891, and died at the home of his parents, in Vermilion parish, near Abbeville, La., Jan. 6, 1896.

The subject of this sketch had never made a public profession of religion by uniting with any church, but was reared by pious parents who are members of the Methodist Church. He was always a good, obedient son, observant of the laws of God and men. Had no enemies. All who knew him loved him. "To know him was to love him."

He said to his anxious father and mother when first stricken with the illness that ended his earthly life, "I may not get well; but if it is the Lord's will for me to go, I am ready."

Thus another is called from the home circle in early manhood. He was laid to rest in the Henderson Hill Cemetery near Boyce, La., by the side of a brother who, like him, had died in early manhood but a few years previous.

May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved family!

ALFORD—Mrs. PHILONE C. ALFORD (nee Carson) died very suddenly at her home, Oct. 18, 1895. She was born Feb 27, 18—; was married, Jan. 7, 1875, to J. L. Alford, who, with several children, live to mourn her loss.

Sister Alford was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South. Living a quiet, Christian life, she endeavored to train her children in the way of righteousness.

As her death was so unexpected she left no dying testimony as to spiritual condition; but we die as we live, so we feel assured that the "pearly gates were opened wide" for her entrance. May the bereaved husband and children live so as to meet mother in the home above!

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round-Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.25 (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to March, 97. (A little later it will be April, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.25, $1.75 and $2.45.

THE DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages printed on excellent paper, is finely illustrated, and handsomely and strongly bound in cloth, measuring 9¼x6½x2 inches.

It contains every name in the Bible and Apochrypa, of which anything can be said. It gives an account of each of the Books of the Bible; it explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs of the Jews, as well as of the various nations mentioned or alluded to in the Scriptures, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves, and worthy of separate publication.

It embraces the results of the most successful and approved Biblical labors and researches, including those of Layard, Rawlinson and others condensed for wide and common use, and constituting an indispensable aid to Ministers, Teachers, Families, Sunday-School Superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

This is undoubtedly the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The publisher's price of the above work is $4.50. We will send it to any address on receipt of price, or we will send it free to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate.

REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF SAINT PAUL.

By the Rev. W. J. CONYBEARE, M. A., Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and the Rev. J. S. Howson, D. D., Principal of the Collegiate Institution, Liverpool.

Contains 1014 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality of paper and is the same in size as Smith's Dictionary of the Bible and bound in uniform style.

It eloquently portrays the early Life, education, conversion, teachings, labors, travels, sufferings, perils, persecutions, and missionary career of St. Paul, thus constituting a Living Picture of the great Apostle himself and of the circumstances by which he was surrounded.

The work also embodies the results of a profound and appreciative study of the true inner life of St. Paul exhibited in his letters which delineate the motives which impelled, and the faith which sustained him in all the troubles and sorrows of his twenty year's conflict, and from which we learn what is told of Paul by Paul himself, and which will continue to live upon the lips and in the hearts of all the faithful until the final consummation of all things.

It is NOT an ABRIDGEMENT but an EXACT RE-PRINT of the greatly improved "People's Edition," prepared with much care and labor, in pursuance of an original plan of both writers, "for a wider circle of readers," and differs from all other editions by the SUBSTITUTION OF ENGLISH for the Greek, Latin and German quotations.

Dr. Howson in his preface to this edition says,—"Those readers have, throughout, been kept in view who, though well educated, would not find it easy to refer to Greek or German books." "The text (he also says) is unaltered, with the exception of a slight verbal change suggested in the course of a thorough re perusal."

The publisher's price of the above book is $4.50. We will send it free of charge to any person who will send us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.00. We will also send it to any address at the publisher's price.

How mankind defers from day to day the best it can do, and the most beautiful things it can enjoy, without thinking that every day may be the last one, and that lost time is lost eternity.—Max Muller.

The past week has been a busy one in politics both at home and abroad for the manipulators of British diplomacy. The Transvaal question took the first place in the parliamentary debates, although the chief event in foreign politics was the baptism of Prince Boris, eldest son of Prince Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, into the orthodox Greek Church, the significance of which is that it is generally admitted to be a prelude to Russia's recognition of Prince Ferdinand. It also shows that Russia and Turkey are now hand in hand, and this is proved by the fact that the latter country has already asked the powers to recognize Prince Ferdinand.

CHRIST'S WAY OF WINNING SOULS: BY HIS DEATH.

(John x, 11; iii, 14-16; xii, 32; Luke x, 33-35.)

In the death of Christ roots the Christian's life. He gave himself, the just for the unjust.

1. Christ speaks of himself as the Good Shepherd, who gives his life for his sheep.

(1) He is not a hireling who cares only for his wages, without further interest in the safety of the sheep entrusted to him.

(2) He is the owner. Their destruction his loss. To risk his life for his sheep when exposed to danger, perfectly natural.

(3) He saw that the wolf of guilt caused devastation. Ruin gained. He at once ran to their relief. He intervenes. Throws himself in the breach.

2. Next, Christ speaks of the elevated brazen serpent of Moses as typical of his own sacrifice.

(1) The Jews had sinned. Disease and death the penalty. Distress great. Lamentation.

(2) Sack a remedy. Apply to Moses to intercede with God in their behalf.

(3) Moses manufactured and raised in the camp a brazen serpent. Look. Look and live.

(4) Faith only could cure them. No intrinsical, remedial quality in the exposed brass. Faith.

(5) Unbelief entailed ruin. Argument, death.

3. In the third section of our lesson Christ indicates his intercessory work at the right hand of God.

(1) His self-debasement, his suffering and death, the means of elevation. A name above all names.

(2) A wonderful attraction. He draws all men to himself by his Word, the holy ministry, and the woolings of the Holy Ghost.

(3) Some have been drawn. Nearer, higher! "More light," cried dying Goethe. Said Augustine: "The heart is restless till it rests in God."

4. Lastly, Christ speaks of himself as the Good Samaritan.

(1) Had fallen among robbers. Sin had caused wreckage. Moral laceration.

(2) He had compassion. Love led to his incarnation and crucifixion.

(3) Gave relief. Whosoever believeth on him shall have everlasting life.

(4) Gave shelter and attention at the inn. Thus we are cared for in the church. Will ultimately reach heaven.

Notice.

To My Ministerial Brethren and Friends of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences:

In 1892 I was unable to attend our Conference at Meridian on account of my wife being very sick; also I had to abandon my work at Carthage circuit on same account. My wife has been an invalid almost ever since, and on account of this and the loss of time and great expense, I am not able to help my son and daughter, who are at school—Millsaps and Whitworth. Now, what I want you to do is to help me secure a school each for them only a little time, and a kind word will help them to a school, and thereby enable them to continue at school. My daughter is in the junior class, and I am sure is competent to teach. My son is at Millsaps, and doing fine work. May God put it into the hearts of my friends to help me! Write me at Gloster, Miss.

Numerous unsolicited testimonials daily received by its proprietors clearly demonstrate the fact that the reputation of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the infallible cure for all affections of the throat and chest, has suffered no diminution in the last quarter of a century.

UNANSWERED PRAYERS.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Like some schoolmaster, kind in being stern,
Who hears the children crying o'er their slates
And calling, "Help me, master," yet helps not,
Since in his silence and refusal lies
Their self-development, so God abides
Unheeding many prayers. He is not deaf
To any cry sent up from earnest hearts;
He hears and strengthens when he must deny.
He sees us wearying over life's hard sums;
But should he dry our tears and give the key,
What would it profit us when school were done
And not one lesson mastered?

What a world
Were this if all our prayers were answered! Not Intimate Pandora's box were such vast ills
As lie in human hearts. Should our desires,
Voiced one by one, in prayer ascend to God,
And come back as events, shaped to our wish,
What chaos would result!

In my fierce youth
I sighed not breath enough to move a fleet,
Voicing wild prayers to heaven for fancied boons
Which were denied; and that denial sends
My voice to prayers of gratitude each day
Of my mature life; yet from those prayers
I rose always regirded for the strife
And conscious of new strength.

Pray on, sad heart!
That which thou pleadest for may not be given,
But in the lofty altitude where souls
Who supplicate God's grace are lifted, there
They must find help to bear thy future lot
Which is not elsewhere found.

"Search the Scriptures."

It is the duty and the privilege of every Christian man and woman to search the Scriptures diligently and regularly. The Scriptures were given by inspiration, and they were meant for information, for edification, and for salvation. They are all important. Whatever else we neglect, we dare not neglect the Word of God. The reading and study of God's Word is infinitely more important than the reading and study of any other book or science known among men. Some people do not know this, do not care to know it.

Sometimes, specially with some persons, the reading and study of the Scriptures fails of the best results, because the reader and student lacks that openness of mind so essential to the apprehension of spiritual truth.

This was the special trouble of the Jews generally, and of the Pharisees specially, in the times of our blessed Lord. They read the Scriptures and searched them diligently, but found nothing more than a confirmation of their preconceived opinions. For this the Savior rebuked them firmly and sharply. He said: "Ye search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." This passage is not a command, but a rebuke. The context shows this plainly. The new version so renders it. A little further on the Savior says: "For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?" The trouble with them was, not that they did not read and search the Scriptures, but because they would not believe them—not even when the truth was pointed out to them. If such mental and spiritual blindness fell upon the Jews, the chosen people of God, to whom were committed the oracles of God, may we not fear lest our preconceived opinions and our prejudices hinder us in our reading and study of the Bible?

If any think I am tampering with the Scriptures in this rendering and use of this passage, so long and so generally regarded as a command, or an injunction, let him read the context, the new version, and some good commentary.

The inward state, the purpose, the desire, the intent of the reader and student has much to do with what the reader finds, or fails to find, in God's holy Word. The Jews might easily have found Christ in the law and in the prophets. They all testified of him, and described him with a minuteness of detail that left no room for doubt, and made the discovery of him an easy matter to any and to all who really wanted to find him.

The great body of the Jews were expecting the Deliverer, were looking for him at the time he came, but they had already determined in their own minds what sort of a preach he should be, and what he should do, and what sort of a kingdom he should establish. They would accept no one and believe anything that did not accord with their views. They had their theory, and God's theology must conform to it. It was a waste of time to quote Moses, David and the prophets to them.

In all this many of us are much like the Jews. We have accepted our creeds, formed our opinions, and made up our minds as to what the Word of God ought to teach, and we are no longer open to conviction—to the discovery and apprehension of truth. We search the Scriptures to find what we think ought to be in them. This renders us blind to the truth, and prevents growth in grace. It leads to perversions and misinterpretations of God's Word—to a twisting of the Scriptures to fit and to prove the theory we have in hand.

When we come to the reading and study of the Bible, we ought to pray God to open our understandings, and to free us from prejudices, and preconceived opinions, and all theories, that we may be in an apt and receptive state of mind, ready to grasp and to hold firmly whatever truth the Holy Ghost may point out to us. Then the Word of God will be sweet to us, and it will be a storehouse brimful of the richest spiritual food.

Let me say again that the simple act of reading the Scriptures, even of searching them diligently, will not save a soul unless it is mixed with simple, trustful, child-like, obedient faith. The study of God's Word should be preceded, accompanied and followed by prayer for Divine help and guidance.

GILDEROY.

A New Book.

THE JOHANNINE THEOLOGY. A study of the doctrinal contents of the Gospel and Epistles of the Apostle John. By George B. Stevens, Ph.D., D. D., Professor of New Testament Criticism and Interpretation in Yale University. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. (From Messrs. Geo. F. Wharton & Bro., New Orleans.) 8 vo., 380 pages; indexes, etc.

This is the second of two valuable contributions of Dr. Stevens to biblical theology. American productions in this line have been inconsiderable, although in systematic theology and biblical introduction works of eminent scholarship and usefulness have been contributed. Biblical theology has to do only with the teachings of the Bible viewed in itself. It is not concerned with the relations of the teachings of the book to the postulates of religion or philosophy; nor does it endeavor to construct a system out of the material at hand. Biblical theology assumes the correctness of the text studied, and does not concern itself with questions of criticism. It is well for the investigator to know all such things; but the essential thing for him to know is the language of the book he is studying, and collateral facts that may throw light upon that language. Biblical theology may take a broader or narrower course. It may investigate a particular subject in the order of its development in the Scriptures, or it may seek to deduce clearly what are the teachings of any one book or group of related books of the Bible. The first method has been followed by Dr. Briggs in his "Messianic Prophecy;" the latter is that followed by Dr. Stevens, and has the obvious advantage of bringing one into more perfect sympathy with his author, and thus affords a presumption of greater insight into the mind of the writer. A study of the work before us will convince one of the very great value of this method. The author seems to be guided by an unerring instinct to the truth as taught by the "theologian" in the gospel and epistles. The confirmation of dogmatic theology is all the more valuable because attained by an independent process. Here the author has to do only with the contents of the writings under investigation, and does not stop to test them by the so-called analogy of faith or by the articles of creeds; but, in summing up the results, we find nothing but the truth as it has been delivered to us. It appears not to have been suspected until the Reformation that the teachings of Scripture could have been different from the teachings of the church; but the reformers have not themselves avoided altogether the errors of the school men, and set to work to form a new scholastic theology. Since the introduction of the biblical method, which is now taking the precedence over all others in Germany, the unsparing comparison has been going on, and we trust will go on.

Dr. Stevens' book demonstrates the teachings of Wesleyan Arminianism. He shows that redemption proceeds from the nature of God itself. "God is love." Theology has never been able to construct a better definition of the ethical nature of God than is contained in these words: "The limitation of the meaning of love, by which it is made a name for benevolence or goodness, and is then set in sharp contrast to righteousness and made secondary and inferior to it, is a procedure in theology which can find no warrant in John's conception of the subject. To his mind love and righteousness are inseparably intertwined—in fact, they are essentially one. Love is holy in its very nature; the life of love is the righteous life. . . . The apostle contends that a man can not be a Christian, and refrain from helping a brother in distress; yet it is gravely argued in theology that it is optional with God to withdraw mercy or grace from his creature without impairment of his perfection. It is denied by none that the exercise of pity, grace or compassion is good. Yet it is held to be optional with God whether to be good to that extent or not. . . . If it is true in dogmatic theology, it is certainly false in John's whole philosophy of revelation and life."

We should like to quote the whole passage, but must rest content with earnestly commending the book to our readers. The author shows that the Johannine idea of life eternal is that of a present possession, and that judgment is a present process to be consummated at "the last day." His distinction of aitein and erotaw, and of pAitein and agopow in the usage of John, is the nearest we have seen. Not the least benefit we have obtained from a careful study of every page of this book is an insight into the marvelous accuracy of John's use of language. We are taught to find light upon many soul facts by carefully regarding the exact significance of words and constructions. Yet the book can be read profitably by those who know very little Greek, and by those who know none at will be found helpful. The richness of the sources of Dr. Stevens' book will be demonstrated to a careful study as never before; and if its perusal by young ministers lead them to adopt the author's method of investigation, they will do themselves and their congregations great service in the ministering of the Word. Fresh, perennial truths—treasures new and old—they will be able to bring forth.

Responsibility.

It is written, "Every man shall bear his own burden," and we might certainly conclude as much from the perfect justice and absolute impartiality of God, who is no respecter of persons. What God requires of one he must, under like conditions, require of all. Each will have to be weighed in the balances of eternal rectitude and right, and will be weighed by the standard of ability and opportunity. Another reason confirmatory of the statement that every man shall bear his own burden is that all accountable men have the same capacity in kind, though not in degree. All have perception, understanding, memory, and will. Some have quicker perceptions than others; some have stronger and clearer understandings; some more capacious and retentive memories, and some greater will-power and force of character; but all who are sane have these endowments in sufficient measure to make them responsible to the extent that God shall see to be just and fair.

It is matter of comfort that, though no man can escape bearing a burden of responsibility, he has no burden but his own to bear. The man of one talent does not have to bear the burden of those who have two talents; nor does the man who has only two talents have to bear the burden of him who has been endowed with five talents. We are required to do just that that we have capacity and opportunity to do. Nothing could be fairer or more just. Now let us remember for our comfort that the honor that cometh from God does not depend upon the greatness of our possibilities, but rather upon the faithfulness and heartiness of our doing. When the Master said of the grateful woman, "She hath done what she could," it was the highest statement of commendation.

The imperative statement, "Every man shall bear his own burden," is a statement that should come with the most profound impressiveness to us all. We can not shirk, nor by any possibility escape, responsibility. To shrink from one responsibility is but to assume another equally weighty and perilous. We may seek by occupations or amusements to escape the sense of responsibility, but in vain. It is with us, it is upon us. We can no more fly from it than from the omnipresence of God. It's in vain to say: "I will be a hermit, and dwell alone in some dark wilderness, and mingle with men no more." No, no; we can not escape. We are responsible for the good we have left undone, and the evil we might have prevented. That you are not a Christian, nor a member of the church, does not in the least exonerate you from the duties which these relations involve. You ought to be a Christian; you ought to meet the obligations of an open profession of Christ. In failing to do so, you will have to meet the appalling responsibility of the wicked and slothful servant who hid his talent in the earth. In the last tremendous day you will read your awful doom in these fearful words: "Ye knew your duty, and ye did it not;" "Depart from me, ye worker of iniquity."

In the Living Present.

The wife of a German barber at Plainfield, Wis., has fallen heir to $150,000, but it is believed that the barber will still retain his position as speaker of the house.

Several young people of Eastbrook, Me., have organized a dramatic club, and will give entertainments to raise money for a hearse, the town undertaker not having one. We trust the entertainments will not prove a grave affair.

Asbestos towels are among the curiosities of the day. When dirty, it is only necessary to throw them into a red-hot fire, and after a few minutes draw them out fresh and clean. Would be well if several newspapers offices in which we have been recently would purchase such towels.

Ex-President Harrison receives a larger sum for his articles on "This Country of Ours," which he is writing for the Ladies' Home Journal, than has been paid to any public man in America for magazine work of a similar nature. His first article in the Christmas number of the Journal sold over 100,000 extra copies of the magazine, of which 725,000 copies were printed as a first edition.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, in answer to the question, "May I read a Sunday newspaper?" says: "Certainly, if that is the best literature you can find to develop reverence and faith and hope and love; if that queer modern melange of ball games and politics and horse races and theatrical criticisms and portraits of dancers and records of crimes and criminals, with a little literary criticism, and occasionally a religious editorial thrown in to sanctify it—if that is the best thing you can find to help make you more reverent, more hopeful, more full of faith, certainly read it. I do not find it so myself."

The prefect of police of St. Petersburg has just granted permission to a lady to ride a bicycle in the streets of the city. This is the first occasion on which such a privilege has been accorded. Before getting the permission the lady had to satisfy the authorities that she could ride a bicycle with safety to the public.

Paris is said to be the cleanest city in the world. Every morning 2,000 male and 600 female scavengers, divided into 149 brigades, turn out to perform the toilet of the capital. The men work from four in the morning to four in the evening, less two hours off for meals, or ten hours a day. The women are engaged in the morning only.

Georgia Letter.

I read the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE every week, and, as a small compensation for the pleasure I receive from it, I ought now and then to write a line. When one retires from the active pastorate, and is still able to do some work, he ought not to consent to cease his effort to do good altogether, and there is no medium through which one can work which is superior to the weekly church paper. There is a disposition on the part of some scholarly man to ridicule newspaper readers, and to intimate that such a use of time is a waste; and one fresh from the study of the last Bampton Lecture, or the last discussion on the Pentateuch, or a philosophical study as to whether "life is worth living," looks complacently down on him who humbly confesses to having read none of these books, but having pretty well devoured the news brought by the religious journals. I have more than once seen a question settled by a good, well-timed sneer, or by a manner of vast and superior wisdom; but somehow these things never settle matters with me. Take, for instance, a week's issue of our church papers, and see what is in it. Take at a venture—relying merely upon one's own memory for it—what one found in the last week's budget. Travel. Here was a letter from Miss Kearney, giving an insight into Ireland, which, to every man who is interested in the Irish question, gives a flood of light. Here is Bishop Hendrix, giving a view of China and its present stages, which reveals the necessity of our work and the promise there is in it. Here are the tributes to Bishop Haygood, telling what the world has lost in him. Here are a dilonesion from Dr. Buckley on "Personal Liberty," an account from Dr. Riggs of Methodism in England fifty years ago, a number of articles on "The Extension of the Pastorate;" and here are details of religious experience, and interesting obituary notices, in which I find much that is profitable and comforting. I have, in reading my weekly mail, studied philosophy, theology, biography, polemics, travel, history, and literature; farming, law, medicine, and lighter literature; and my complacent pedant, who has read the heavy books, in which he alone can find wisdom, has decided that, perhaps, Moses did not write the Pentateuch, that life is worth living, and that there is much to be said in defense of the divine origin of Christianity. The fact is, as my dear old friend, Bishop Haygood, used to say, there is in this affectation of high culture much that reminds one of an ox gravely chewing the bagasse of a sugar mill, and supposing, because his jaws move, he is getting something. Our periodical press was never stronger than it is now, and never more independent. This last quality is a very important one, for we have no such protection against undue centralization as in an independent weekly press. In the early days of Methodism the one dread of the preacher was episcopal tyranny. Until 1808 there was, to all intents, only one episcopal mind, for Dr. Coke was only a nominal Bishop; and it was during the period before 1808 that the agitation which led to the O'Kelly secession, and which led to the effort to make the presiding eldership elective, came to birth. But after the election of Gray and Roberts it became apparent that it was impossible for the Bishops to ask as a unit; and our later history, both North and South, has shown that where there is equal power and an itinerancy among the Bishops, such is the diversity of view that there is no danger of oppression continuing long. There are things to be remedied, however, which can only be properly considered in the press. The General Conference is continually encroaching on individual rights, and it holds too short and too hurried a session, and is too much under the dominion of the red-tapists to give all matters which, by law, come under its survey proper consideration; and the way for action or non-action must be prepared by the press.

Reading, as I do, the New York Advocate, I have been much interested in the discussion on removing the time-limit. I was sitting with Bishop McTyeire on the lawn in front of his house, some years ago, and said to him: "Bishop, you led the progressives in the General Conference in 1866. Since you have been a Bishop, have you had reason to change your views?"

"Well," he said, in his slow, solemn way, "some of them—not all, but some. I am very sure now that the removal of the time-limit would have been a calamity to people and preachers. If a place had a man who did not do good work there, but was popular and influential, he could never be moved; and if a man had a place he did not want to leave, or a church had a man it did not wish to give up, it would have been impossible to have moved the men, and as impossible to provide a place for one worthy who had to be changed, and thus the wheels would have been stopped."

This is about what he said. If the itinerancy is a good thing, the time-limit is a necessity. I do not think any Methodist Church was ever permanently injured by a change of pastors, and many have been greatly bettered; and there is no question in my mind that while the time-limit might sometimes be disregarded with profit, that its general working is decidedly good, and the evils complained of by these correspondents are not to be traced to this source.

We are having little stir in Georgia in any way, but all things are moving on quietly.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The Board of Trustees of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, at a called meeting on the eighteenth instant, took steps looking to the enlargement of the boarding capacity of the college, and to general improvements. Scientific apparatus will be supplied, and a post-graduate course added. Our girls must have the same advantages afforded them by the church that the boys have. Why not? We have an excellent plant here, and all that is needed to make this a really great school is the undivided, fostering care of the church.

A wing to the main building is now needed, with capacity for fifty or sixty boarding pupils, and a music department. We need and must have endowment, if the best results are ever accomplished. The school has steadily grown in interest and attendance since the first of last session, and we are making our plans for the accommodation of over 100 boarders for the session beginning next September.

The Board of Trustees and the president of the college take great pleasure in announcing that Mrs. T. B. Hargrove has been added to the faculty, and will begin her work with the opening of next session.

Sister Hargrove is now at the University at Oxford reviewing and preparing herself for her special work.

The future of the college is very promising. Let the brethren of the Conference rally to the support of their school, and we will give them one of which they will be proud.

J. W. MALONE.

P. S.—The Board of Trustees adjourned to meet again on March the thirteenth. Please take notice, brethren, and be in attendance, if possible.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.

I am in the field striving to do the work assigned me by Bishop Fitzgerald, upon your recommendation. During the three months since Conference nineteen pastoral charges have been visited with encouraging success. Greater results are aimed at this year than hitherto attained, and with your co-operation we shall, by God's blessing, be able to make a better report next Conference than ever before. This will be done by attending strictly to the action of our last Conference, which reads as follows: "As we get books from the colporter at the same rates as from the Publishing House, we urge the preachers and people to patronize him. This, indeed, is the design of his appointment, and is also the desire of the book agents. In order to success, the colporter must have our hearty support. The preachers ought to invite the colporter to their charges, and recommend the Epworth Leagues and Sunday-schools to get their literature from him." (See Minutes, page 39.) As you have thus said, brethren, so let it be done—

1. By letting your colporter know when his services are needed in your charges, or when there is an auspicious time for his work, and by opening the way for the same by commendatory mention to the people.

2. By sending him your orders for books, accompanied, when practicable, by cash, or with the understanding that bills will be settled in thirty, sixty or ninety days, at farthest.

In conclusion, let each and everyone who owes any amount, even the smallest, on this or last year's account remit at an early day. Please do this without fail. Brother, the amount you owe may be quite small, but know thou that it is part of a total that is much needed just now to enable me to arrange for the Spring campaign.

Your fellow-laborer in Christ,

G. W. BACHMAN.

MY PENTECOST.

BY REV. EDGAR L. WARREN.

I prayed for power. The answer came,
Not in the whirlwind's rush and flame,
But in a sorrow, vast, profound,
That bent and bowed me to the ground.
And, lo! I found, when awed and dumb,
That power from on high had come.
That sorrow was my Pentecost,
The baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Bro. Crymes Speaks.

Dr. H. Waller Featherston, in the ADVOCATE of the thirtieth ultimo, says: "Bro. Crymes had said some sharp things to his presiding elder and set his superior at defiance, and we asked him to say that he would be subject to his official superiors." This he writes to correct certain erroneous and unjust impressions that have gone abroad. It is not to defend myself that I take this up, but that, having the facts in the case, everyone may form a correct opinion of the matter.

It was in the Spring, after prayerful consideration, I decided to have Mrs. Snell assist me in a meeting at Rolling Fork. Soon after this, during the second quarterly meeting occasion, in the home of a friend, where my presiding elder was being entertained, the subject of lady preachers was casually brought up, and my presiding elder said emphatically that he would not allow one to come in his district to preach. I replied that the invitation was already extended to Mrs. Snell. In an excited manner and sharp tone, the reply was, that my character would be arrested at the Annual Conference. My reply to this was somewhat spirited, and to this effect: that if he sought to injure me, it would result only in injury to himself. After this, to the close of the year, not one word was uttered or written to him that might be called a "sharp thing."

In further interview with my presiding elder on the above occasion, he gave me to understand in plain language his official position gave him authority to say who was to help in meetings in my charge; and he further forbade me to labor with her in a meeting if she stood in the aisles, corner, or anywhere in the church.

I felt that it was necessary to have a meeting, but that it was not essential to have it in the church, so I suggested the idea of getting the opera house, or a tent, and to this he objected, and said the results would be just the same—my character would be arrested at the Conference. To continue: The meeting was held in the church, and, as a result, some of the most hardened sinners were converted, and are now the leading members of the church. After this the presiding elder made several attempts to have the matter settled; but he would agree to nothing that did not imply an admission on my part that I had done wrong in having this meeting. I felt that to comply with his wishes would grieve the Spirit of God, who had been my guide through the whole affair.

In regard to the latter part of Dr. Featherstine's statement, "We asked him to say that he would be subject to his official superiors," a correct statement of the affair is the following: When my name was called my presiding elder made objection to my conduct, and read the following questions, which were answered as follows:

1. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, recognize the employment of women as preachers of the Word, with authority to occupy its pulpits in reading the Holy Scriptures, and in preaching the same, as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ?

Ans.—It does not.

2. Does the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, authorize a pastor in charge of a station, circuit or mission of said church so invite a woman claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ to occupy the pulpits of said church to expound the Scriptures as a preacher of the Word?

Ans.—It does not.

3. And do not such invitations given and services so rendered offend against the authority and order of said church and teaching of the Holy Oracles?

Ans.—It does.

My character was passed upon the condition that I accept the episcopal decision, and conform my conduct to it. Several days after this, just before the close of the session of the Conference, I was approached by some of the official brethren, who informed me that the Bishop expected me to make a public statement that I accepted the action of the Conference; otherwise, in answer to the twentieth question of the method of procedure of the Conference, note would be made that my character was conditionally passed. I replied that I was willing for this note to be made. The official brethren now thought my actions had assumed the form of obstinacy. I felt there was nothing in the ruling of the chair that would prevent my having a consecrated layman, or lady, to help me in the work of saving souls, as I had formerly done. I never had, nor ever expected to invite them to assume the office of an ordained minister, and do those things peculiar to the orders; but to make a public statement would be admitting guilt in my former actions, and promising to do differently under similar circumstances in the future. I could not thus grieve the Holy Spirit.

I told the brethren, however, I could make the public statement to Bishop Key, as I had been in the past, so in the future, I would be subject, in the Lord, to all the authorities of our church. And I made this statement, and my character passed.

Now, in conclusion, there is no way in the Methodist Church to prevent a good woman, called of God, with gifts and graces, laboring with a minister who invites—unless the General Rules be altered. I read, "It is expected of all who continue in these societies that they should continue to evidence their desire of salvation . . . by doing good . . . of every possible sort, and, as far as possible, to all men: . . . To their souls, by instructing, reproving or exhorting, all we may have intercourse with." The woman who labors with us in the gospel is simply keeping the vows she took when she came into our church.

And, second, there is a limit to all human authority. The Scripture puts it thus: "Wives, obey your husbands, in the Lord. Children, obey your parents, in the Lord. Servants, obey your masters, in the Lord."

Whenever there is a clash between the divine and human, St. Peter says we ought to obey God rather than man. Should a parent command a child to commit a theft, or master a servant to commit a murder or arson, or a husband, a wife to abstain from devotional duties, they must not obey.

The command of my presiding elder was in the same category with the supposed cases above. I felt to obey, the Holy Spirit would be grieved, and might depart from me. Many souls might have to suffer the bitter pangs of eternal punishment thereby. God set his seal of approval upon my actions, and through all that season of insubordination (as some call it) we were passing from one glorious revival to another!

J. D. CRYMES.

A Few Questions.

Can you allow me a little space in your most excellent paper for a few questions concerning the article written by Bro. "Gilderoy" on "Sound Doctrine," in the ADVOCATE of Jan. 30?

I must confess that I admire Bro. "Gilderoy" as a writer, and usually agree with him in his views, but it seems to me that he has rather departed from his text. The first question I want to ask is, Why do you think the sound doctrine slow in its process of development? Should we not expect immediate results from a pure gospel when preached in power and demonstration of the Spirit? If not, why not? Bro. "Gilderoy" says in his article: "The effect may not be seen immediately, but it will be manifest in the end." It seems to me the purer the gospel, the more powerful its effects on the children of men. My Bible says in I. Samuel: "The king's business requires haste." And why not be in haste? So much work to be done for the Master, and to-morrow may be too late; sinners are dying daily, without God and without hope. Oh, that the church of God may be imbued with power and expect results from her labors daily, and immediate results!

Then again, brother, do you mean to intimate that a weeping congregation indicates unsound doctrine, or that a pathetic and tender voice, though it should be tremulous, is an evidence of heresy or unsoundness? He says in his article: "The good done by a sermon is not to be fairly estimated by the tears shed in the congregation." Where is the preacher who estimates the good done by the number of tears shed in his congregation? I see no necessity for alarm, my brother. I do not know of any congregation that's worrying itself weeping. The way they are weeping on my work now they will hold out for a good while, for they are taking it one at a time; every fellow doing his own weeping, and not much at that. May the Lord send us more weeping fathers and mothers, and preachers, too, as for that! Jeremiah wept over his people. Jesus wept over rebellious Jerusalem. Peter shed tears because he denied his Lord. Bro. "Gilderoy" says: "When tears are once started they come easily, and often do not mean much." How do you know what they mean, brother, or how much they may indicate?

Again, he says: "In some congregations it is an easy matter to raise a shout; they have gotten in the habit of it. It is the fashion and the fad. Touch a certain string, and in a certain strain, and it is sure to come." Now, brother, if it is an easy matter to raise a shout, will you please tell us what string you touch and in what strain? I'm getting real hungry to hear an old-time shout. I suppose I am preaching sound doctrine, if it is sound doctrine that doesn't produce shouting, and I conclude it is from the tone of "Gilderoy's" article. Then, how did you get the fashion among your people? I would like to have the fashion among my people, for I rather like it sometimes. Now, I don't care to have the fad, and I am sorry Bro. "Gilderoy" used the word in referring to a devotion sacred in the sight of God. He says: "The average colored congregation can beat the white people, and not half try. Indeed, there is no meeting if there is no shouting." Now, brother, why trouble the poor colored people? If they enjoy shouting, use their own lungs, spend their own breath, and don't call on you to shout for them, just let them shout on, and don't discourage the white people because you don't think they can shout as well or as loud as the colored people. The great wonder to me is that we don't have more shouting among the white and colored. For parents to see their children snatched as brands from the eternal burning, and loved ones saved by grace from sin and death, is something over which it seems to me we might well afford to shout. We all can't preach great sermons like "Gilderoy;" but if we could close out with a good shout, and feel that we had something to shout over, wouldn't it be better than not to get out at all?

Be careful, brethren; we have about criticised the amen corner to death, and I reckon will soon wipe the tears from the eyes of the weeping people, silence the shouters, and then we will have the form without the power, I fear.

W. J. O'BRYANT.

Another Question.

While doctors of divinity and others are discussing the woman question and the license question, there is another which is lost sight of or ignored, viz.: whether any person, man or woman, licensed or unlicensed, has the right to use the church as a means of livelihood or of pecuniary gain without the authority of Conference. As long as unauthorized persons are permitted to use the church for any purpose involving the collection of money for private use, so long will these vexatious disputes arise. Our faithful ministers of the gospel go through Summer's heat and Winter's cold, by field and flood, enduring hardness for Christ's sake, preaching, holding prayer meetings, visiting the sick, burying the dead, comforting the sorrowing, laboring to make full proof of their ministry, and receive, most of them, but a bare living; so that when old age overtakes them, there is nothing left but the pittance doled out to a superannuate. But let one of these wandering stars flash through a community, and behold the change! The church has suddenly grown so rich that she can pay more for a few days' entertainment than for months of hard work. The writer has heard of one of these evangelists (?) boasting that he received four hundred dollars for two lectures in a small town (he neglected to mention what the preacher in charge received for a year's labor). Probably not much more. Yet we are told that men called of God and set apart for his service—men whom he has promised to baptize with the Holy Ghost and with power—can not do the work assigned them without these so-called "helps." Is his arm shortened, or have his promises become of no effect? Has he withdrawn from his church, that his glory is thus given to another? Brethren, these things ought not so to be.

FRANCES M. MONTGOMERY.

A Layman's View.

A loyal congregation must support any minister appointed by Conference to a charge, and where brethren find fault or criticise their minister, it borders on rank treason and is a breach of discipline, while to refuse support would be rank irreligion. Now, to a layman there seems to be two sides to this question. We are assessed in amounts aggregating a fair salary and pledged to pay. Now, what is our consideration—to be cold-blooded, what do we get for our money? It is supposed that the cause of Zion shall be built up and kept in a prosperous condition by the minister, that we are fed by spiritual food, and are enabled to grow and develop into the perfect Christian by the use of the food furnished us by our pastor. But, alas! it is often the case that the person sent us is utterly incapable of furnishing that food, or that which he does furnish is so stale and dry, or so devoid of nutriment, that the flock go away hungry, unfilled—result, absence from church, straying off into the folds where the food is rich, abundant and satisfying. Under these conditions the church languishes, revivals are unknown, and Methodism gets a set-back.

What is the remedy? Raise the standard of admission. Let no one presume to occupy our pulpits until he is thoroughly furnished with good words and works. The conditions to day demand a minister who is skilled in argument, a man who can meet all the artful devices of the opponents of religion, a man who can bring science to his help, and who can by the wide range of his knowledge refute the sophistries of infidels and other enemies of the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ—in other words, a godly scholar, one who can edify the congregations that hear him, one who can gain the respect of the worldly scholar by his array of learning made effective by the Holy Spirit.

The writer has seen in the pulpit, and there by authority, striplings who know nothing of the doctrines of our church, who read the Scriptures and hymns in a doubtful, dragging manner, as though they were spelling them out, and the Queen's English is assassinated in every sentence. There is no excuse for such misfit preachers. No other denomination allows such ignorance in its pulpits, and the time has come for us to call a halt and to raise the standard of admission to the holy order of the ministry, else our church will retrograde. Demand ministers who are not only worthy of their hire, but who are competent, able, progressive, enterprising, and, therefore, "worthy to hire."

Important Notice.

I. The Board of Church Extension will hold its annual meeting at its office, 705 W. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky., on April 30, 1896. Applications for aid must be made out on blanks which will be furnished for the purpose by the undersigned, and must be on file in the Board's office on or before April 1, in order to secure attention at the annual meeting.

2. We are particularly anxious that all who owe anything on account of Birthday Cards, or of subscriptions in aid of Cuban churches in Florida, or for the building of churches in the Indian Mission Conference, will remit the sums due as soon as they can do so. The money is greatly needed.

3. We wish to circulate our literature. We will send package containing copies of our last Annual and Quadrennial Reports, and of the Church Extension Bulletin, to anybody who will send us a two-cent stamp to pay postage.

4. We have a supply of pamphlets containing Dr. S. A. Steel's address on "Church Extension in Relation to the Future South," and Dr. G. W. Brigg's address on "Church Extension on the Frontier;" both delivered at Montgomery, Ala.; we will send these in any quantities desired upon receipt of ten cents per dozen, in stamps, to pay postage.

5. Copies of our handsomely illustrated little book, "Living Monuments," will be sent to any address on receipt of twenty-five cents.

EDITORS.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Miss Pauline Stafford, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. B. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference.

The Bay St. Louis Auxiliary, P. and H. M. S., held its eighth anniversary on Feb. 4. By invitation, we met at the parsonage, in the house our own hands had largely helped to build, and were entertained with the beautiful hospitality characteristic of the dwellers at the manse.

Our report for 1895 was good. The funds gathered from dues, contributions and work amounted to nearly, or quite, three hundred dollars. This had been expended for connectional dues, for paying a debt on the mission chapel at the opening factory, for some necessary repairs at the parsonage, for an insurance policy on the same, and, lastly, helping Bro. Harmon on the new church here. The meeting was an enthusiastic one. Not one of the thirty members draws back from the work, but all are ready to start with fresh zeal another year's effort for the Master. This has been called the banner auxiliary of the Mississippi Conference, and we hope to keep it so. We try to make our society just what the name implies, and no auxiliary has a better field for work. The secretary's report shows many visits made to strangers, to the sick and the poor during the past year; of cottage prayer meetings, and Bible readings and prayers in families; of many garments distributed to the needy.

The work grows on us. The more we do in mission work, the more we find to be done. Our society, like the "gate called Beautiful," has many cases of sickness and poverty laid before it. The moths have had no chance at our old cloaks or dresses; nor has the rust corrupted any of the little silver we handle.

Our mission Sunday-school at the factory holds its own in spite of strong opposition. The average attendance is about forty, and more older people attend than formerly. The little day-school last Summer helped several children to learn to read and write, and stimulated in them a desire for more knowledge. The little presents given the Sunday-school children at Christmas pleased them very much, and made them feel that we are really interested in their happiness and welfare. One of the members of the mission, with the help of friends, has made a silk quilt, which she wishes to sell, that she may thus assist in paying for the chapel.

We are glad we are in the connectional work. Glad to know that through it we are building parsonages at such a rate that soon a preacher without a home will be the exception. In our Mississippi Conference already homes have been supplied till, we are told, only twenty charges are without parsonages. But we are specially glad for the missionary feature of our work. Glad to be in the company of those who are lending a hand to lift up into the light of gospel truth, with all its attendant blessings, those who can not help themselves.

We remember that while we work at Bay St. Louis, Miss Belle Bennett is traveling in Kentucky, consecrated to the work of building churches and schools for the people in the mountain districts, who can truly say, "Hitherto no man hath cared for our souls." We remember Mrs. Wolff, giving time and money and influence to the Cuban work in Florida. We remember Miss Helm in the editorial chair of Our Homes, every issue of which breathes inspiration for the work of missions in the South. And then, when we think of the number of women quietly at work in nearly all the cities of our land, do we not feel that Scripture is being fulfilled? "The Lord gave the Word: great was the company of women that published it."

We deplore the fact that this is Bro. Harmon's last year with us. We can never tell what a help he has been to us in this work. We know not exactly just what amount of work he has cut out for us this year; but, from the signs, it will take all our faith and self-denial and industry to accomplish it. With the Lord's help we hope to be found equal to the occasion, and at the close of the year report the very best work we have ever done as a Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

How to Have Good Sermons.

It takes two people to make a good sermon—a good preacher and a good hearer. Too often this partnership relation in preaching the gospel is not recognized. We have seen lazy-looking souls drag their unwilling frames into church, loll down in the first seat they reached as if they had accomplished a remarkable feat and paid the preacher a grand compliment by their presence. When it came to the sermon, they braced themselves back with a determined air of indifference and dared the speaker to command their attention to anything he might venture to say. Not only did their manner make it difficult for them to be interested, but they made it next to impossible for him to be interesting. One or two eager listening faces are worth as much to the preacher as an hour spent in careful preparation. A house full of good listeners will take all the laziness out of a preacher, and next Sunday he would not venture to look hungry people in the eye and give them a stone for bread. We know kind hearts who never hear a poor sermon; they are such intent listeners that they put merit into a poor discourse; ability to listen to a sermon is a mark of civilization.—The Central Baptist.

Sabbath Rest.

It is not possible to overestimate the blessing of Sunday merely as a day of rest from physical toil, and the tendency of modern life to lay upon us activities that are more and more intense continually enhances the value of this boon which the piety of the past has given us. But when rest means only pleasure, then pleasure soon comes to mean business also. Half the world finds employment in helping the other half to its Sunday amusements. The door thus opened to gainful pursuits is pushed more widely open year after year; and if present tendencies go unchecked, one does not see why the day of rest may not be lost entirely at last. Certainly, it is none too soon to call a halt to some of these tendencies, even if we are thinking only of the interests of those who toil so hard during six days of the week that they need the seventh for physical recuperation.—Christian Register.

The ends of the earth in our day are drawing nearer together. An illustration of this growing unity was afforded recently in London at one of the great meetings held in commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the London Missionary Society. When Khama, the South African chief, rose to speak, the great audience stood and cheered tumultuously and gave the visitor a Chautauqua salute! The scene was overpowering in its electrifying enthusiasm.—Central Advocate.

Life is a short day, but it is a working day. Activity may lead to evil, but inactivity can not lead to good.—Hannah More.

Willing Service.

Diodorus, the son of Eucrates, said: "All men are naturally disposed to do wrong, and no law will ever keep them from it." He was right. But the heathen's philosophy could go no farther. He knew not of the gospel and the constraining power of love born from the realizing sense of what Christ has done for every soul which trusts him.

Only as we appropriate the greatness of God's mercy in sending his Son to die in our place are we impelled to do the will of him who died for us. Blessed result!

The willing soul of the believer is constrained by a new affection. It turns with loathing from that it once loved. It renders a joyful obedience to him it would fain serve, and brings forth much fruit to the glory of God. Such a one is no slave to law, but, born into the liberty of God's children, serves him joyfully now, and will so serve him forever.—Episcopal Recorder.

How to Hold the Juniors.

Feed them. Little lambs as well as the older sheep linger around the places where they are fed. Give them food from the Bible, food from your own experience, food prepared for them by honest effort and earnest thought. Charming stories, beautiful pictures, sweet songs—these are all excellent and valuable as condiments, but nothing of this kind, nor of any other kind, will take the place of food. Yet the food should be made simple and palatable, and served up as attractively as possible. Then, too, if by means of the teaching children can only be converted, and become actively interested in work for others, there need be little fear of their neglecting the Junior meetings.—Selected.

To acknowledge that we find it hard to serve God as we ought, and yet to be systematically indulging habits which must naturally increase the difficulty, makes our character almost ridiculous, while it renders our duty almost impracticable. The determined Christian becomes his own pioneer; he makes his path easy by voluntarily clearing it of the obstacles which impede his progress.—Augusta Moore.

If a man is growing in grace, it seems to us that he will also be growing in tenderness. We can not understand how it is possible for a person to be so eminent in piety as some claim to be, and yet be so bitter in spirit and so rancorous in speech.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

Do right, and God's recompense to you will be the power of doing more right. Give, and God's reward to you will be the spirit of giving more. Love, and God will pay you with the capacity of more love, for love is heaven and the Spirit of God within you.—F. W. Robertson.

If you wish to know whether you are a Christian, inquire of yourself whether in and for the love of God you seek to make happy those about you by smiles and pleasant sayings.... Are you a comfortable person to live with? Are you pleasant to have about?—Gail Hamilton.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning, and goes to rest with us at night. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and which only leaves us where we leave the light of life.—W. E. Gladstone.

It is a high, solemn, almost awful thought for every individual man, that his earthly influence, which has had a commencement, will never, through all ages, were he the very meanest of all of us, have an end!—Thomas Carlyle.

No quality will ever get a man more friends than a sincere admiration of the qualities of others. It indicates generosity of nature, frankness, cordiality, and cheerful recognition of merits.—Dr. Johnson.

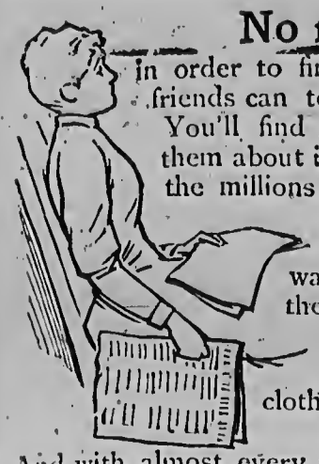
The law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act and you reap a habit; sow a habit, and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.—George Dana Boardman.

He who is determined to make no mistakes will probably make the one greatest mistake of fruitlessness. Better fail in half the efforts made than to fail to do anything.—Zion's Herald.

When home is ruled according to God's Word, angels might be asked to stay at night with us, and they would not find themselves out of their element.—Spurgeon.

Your Christianity should find expression through your eyes, your voice and your hands; in fact, it should be expressed in everything which has to do with your life.

It seems to me that five minutes of real thankfulness for the love of our dear Savior is worth a year of hard reasoning on the hidden parts of our redemption.—Dean Alford.



No need to Read,

in order to find out about Pearline. Your friends can tell you all you want to know. You'll find most of them use it. Ask them about it. We'll leave it to any one of the millions of women who are using Pearline, if it isn't the best—the most economical thing, for washing and cleaning. But all the Pearline users don't get its full benefits. Some seem to think that it's only for washing clothes or cleaning house.

Pearline washes everything. And with almost every use you can put it to, besides the labor it saves and the ruinous rubbing, it gives you better work—better results.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 445 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. A. D. Miller, Hermanville, Miss.: "We certainly had a rich repast a few nights ago. Bro. W. B. Burk, of the China Mission Conference, formerly of the South Georgia Conference, while here visiting the home of his wife (Bro. J. H. Gordon), delivered a very entertaining and instructive address on China, its people, cities, customs, missionary work, etc. It was certainly a treat to us to have him and his elegant wife in our midst and hear them talk of China and our missionary work. I feel confident their visit will do us much good. May God graciously bless and preserve them, and grant unto them traveling mercies."

STORM AT PEARL RIVER.

By order of Dr. J. T. Sawyer, P. E., of Tallisheek circuit, Louisiana Conference, Rev. W. A. Clarke and family removed from the parsonage at the Tallisheek Camp Ground to Pearl River, Dr. Sawyer thinking it was the most central point.

On last Friday night, after they had been made as comfortable as possible under the circumstances by the ladies, and left to enjoy their "own hired house," about seven o'clock at night they were surprised by a knock at the door. Upon opening the door the whole town seemed to be there on the gallery, and none of them empty handed. Even the little tots, boys and girls, had bundles. The storm lasted an hour or two, but as Gen. Grant said, "Nobody was hurt."

The smiles on the faces of Bro. Clarke, wife, and mother was enjoyed very much by the stormers, and when they departed his blessing went with them, and the blessing of God also, for it is far "more blessed to give than to receive."

This little corner of the Lord's vineyard hope, by the help of God and our own hands, hearts, and will, to build a parsonage this year and finish the church. L. CRARY SADLER.

Rev. W. L. Anderson, P. C., Holly Springs circuit: "We are now on our third round since we arrived 'on the ground,' Dec. 13 1895, with varying successes and disappointments. This is a hospitable people, and know just how to welcome the pastor to their homes. He soon finds his way into their hearts, and ere long they have gotten into his. We were as cordially received as could be where no parsonage exists; and since we have gotten moved to 'our own hired house' we have been the recipients of many substantial evidences of the good hands into which we have fallen. But we need a parsonage very, very much, and we are trying our best for it. Some glimmering rays of light appear above the horizon. Pray for us that it may 'grow into the great sun,' so that the next pastor appointed to this charge will not have to bear the expense of furnishing and renting a home before he can settle his family and get into his 'pack of papers.' Our first Quarterly Conference, Jan. 4 and 5, was a nominal success for such a cold day. A good official turn-out, a good sermon from Dr. Cameron, our much-loved presiding elder, and a fairly good answer to Ques. 8, all contributed to success and pleasure. There has been paid up to date on preacher's and presiding elder's salary $135—a right good showing—nearly one-fourth of the assessment. We are praying and planning for a great revival. Some of the means being used are special pains with the collections and trying to get the ADVOCATE in every home.' Let us all put forth special effort this year in this direction. Would that all of us were of the same mind with Bro. H. B. Trevillion in the matter of the ADVOCATE. Bro. T., you might have written sooner and have been in order. Let us heed. 'Consistency is a jewel,' says one. It might be well applied in this connection. It grieves my heart to see another paper take the place of our own. Brethren, we have promised to support the institutions of the church.' The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is fully authorized, ably edited, and entirely responsible to establish authority; whereas many others—some good, some indifferent, some worse than nothing (filled with controversy and manifest opposition to that which we would rejoice to see: 'Peace with all men and holiness')—are responsible to no authority, and therefore might not be hedged in bounds of propriety or kept in the 'beaten path' that leads the multitudes to the throne. We need the pure pages of authorized Christian literature spread before our people, old and young, everywhere. We need also to pay our vows. (Psalms. v 4, 5) We need also to meet the expectations of the resolutions of our Conference. Remember the propositions of the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE on the floor of the Conference, and let's work hard that the ADVOCATE may be a regular visitor to every home, whether it be the home of the rich or the poor. Success to you, Bro. Editor. Come to our District Conference. We need you. Pray for us."

HORTON—WILLIAM JUDSON HORTON was born in Fayette county, Ga., in 1839; moved to Mississippi with his parents when a child and settled in Kemper county, where he lived until death, which occurred Dec. 9, 1895.

Bro. Horton was a good man, and had in him the elements of true manhood. He joined the M. E. Church in 1853, and was faithful in the performance of every known duty. He was licensed to exhort several years before he died, which commission he filled with honor to his church. This faithful man of God will be greatly missed in the community. He was a good citizen, a kind and affectionate husband and father. He was never happier than when assisting those who were in trouble, acting well the part of the "good Samaritan." He will also be missed by the pastor of his church, since he was always on hand singing, praying and testifying for the Master. Many weary itinerant preachers have turned aside to "rest" awhile and enjoy the hospitality of his home.

He had the old, primitive "God-bless-you-glad-to-see-you" style of meeting his pastor. This writer shall never forget the first night spent in his home. Though a stranger, yet he was made to feel that he was in the home of one whose life was "hid with Christ in God;" and how the spirit of God fell upon us as we worshiped around the old-fashioned hearthstone!

May God bless the widowed mother and children, and may they know their father's God, whom to know aright is eternal life!

FURGERSON—Mrs. SALLIE FURGERSON (nee Bishop) was born April 7, 1858; professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and was married to Mr. Wm. T. Furgerson on Oct. 10 1872.

It is said by those who knew her well that she lived a Christian life. And this is saying much. She died on Jan. 31, 1896. She leaves a husband and eight children. He and four of them are members of the same church in which she lived and died. She seemed to have a premonition of the approaching end of life for some weeks before her death. While suffering from thirst, she told her husband she would "soon drink" of the water of "the beautiful river." May her loved ones meet her over there!

HER PASTOR.

Ellisey, Miss.

MITCHELL—Mrs. MARY H. MITCHELL was born in South Carolina in the year 1828; lived for several years in Bibb county, Ala.; joined the M. E. Church, South, while quite young. She was the mother of eight children, six of whom survive her. Sister Mitchell came to Newton county, Miss., near Conehatta, to visit her son, Bro. J. F. Mitchell, about a month before her death, where she died Jan. 20, 1896. Death came to her without a moment's warning. While she was sixty-eight years old, yet she was vigorous for one of that age. She was sitting by the fire, talking as pleasantly as usual, when death came. She never spoke, but she left a testimony that speaks more loudly than words, proving to all who knew her that she was ready for the summons. While raising her family, it was her habit every Sunday to take her children to the Sunday-school. She has succeeded in raising her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. They all belong to the church, and are following in her footsteps. She was left a widow about thirty-five years ago, which left her to care for and raise the large family. She hath been faithful.

MANGUM—ARTHUR MANGUM was born June 6, 1819, and died Dec. 27, 1895; was married to Miss Celia Caraway, Dec. 16, 1845, who died Sept. 20, 1858. Five children were given unto them, of whom three are still living. He was again married to Mrs. Rachel Allen, June 1 1867, and a more devoted companion was never known. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1863, and lived a consistent Christian life to his death. He believed strongly in the gospel, and was a great lover of Methodism. He was the constant friend of the itinerant preacher, and his home was the preacher's home. He was ever mindful of his pastor's support. Never will I forget the contributions, hearty welcomes, and the kindness shown me by Bro. and Sister Mangom, Maggie and Henry.

His remains were laid nicely away in the bosom of our mother earth by the hands of brethren and companions, on Dec. 28, 1895, at Silver Creek, Lawrence county, Miss. Peace be to him! We extend to Sister Mangum, Maggie and Henry our sympathies, and trust that they will be faithful and true, and meet him in heaven above, and to the children and grandchildren, to whom we are under many obligations: Weep not; the one you loved you shall see again by and by. M. L. WHITE

BARNES.—Mrs. ANNA R. BARNES (nee Dart) was born in Anderson district, S. C., Jan. 27, 1825; joined the M. E. Church a short time before she was married to Rev. Z. W. Barnes (1843), of Abbeville, S. C., an honored member of the South Carolina Conference. After the enjoyments and sufferings of the itinerancy for ten, or more, years, they located, moved to Alabama, and from thence to Louisiana in 1867, settling near Longwood, Caddo parish, where she died Oct. 19, 1895, have suffered much physical pain for nearly two years, yet gloriously triumphant through faith in her Lord, for whom she counted all things loss.

The ardent friend of the weary itinerant, the living, loving example of the power of faith, having served her generation well, has gone to her reward, now realizing "the power of his resurrection." Oh, how we miss her bodily presence; but her life lingers with us, potent still in behalf of the church she loved, her children, and the community in which she lived.

CRAIG—LAURA L., daughter of Henry and Mary Craig, was born near Natchitoches, March 12, 1882, and died Jan. 18, 1896, at Mrs. J. D. Ford's, Caddo parish, La., aged thirteen years ten months and six days.

One seldom meets with a more lovable character than Laura. She was a sweet-spirited, affectionate and obedient child, both at home and at school. To know her was to love her. She was the most perfect little Christian I ever saw; a member of the M. E. Church, South, and tried to live up to the vows she had taken. We feel assured she is now free from all sorrow and pain, joining her voice with the redeemed around our Father's throne, with "beckoning hands" extended to the sorrowing loved ones to come. May God give us grace to submit to his chastening, and try to meet dear Laura in that beautiful land far beyond the skies! HER TEACHER.

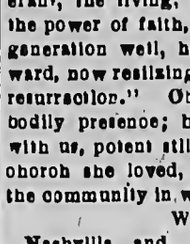
Thousands of Dollars



Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. I was unable to be down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took

The Holman Bible in Three Styles.

$1.25, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to March, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1.25. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

You may use this letter if you see fit for the benefit of suffering humanity. Yours truly,

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

Arbitration.

An agitation is now going on in various parts of the United States in favor of a perpetnal court of arbitration to settle differences between the United States and Great Britain. Public meetings have been held in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, and other cities will follow their example in the near future. Such a movement will be heartily endorsed by good citizens everywhere. If England will follow America's example, and hold similar meetings in all her principal cities, public opinion will soon reach such a stage that Lord Salisbury's policy of refusing to arbitrate will be an absurd anachronism. The following are the resolutions adopted with great enthusiasm at the New York meeting:

"Whereas, The 'true grandeur of nations' means the arts of civilization, justice secured by statute, and magnanimously inspired by good-will, which fundamental principles are always marred by the wasteful, bitter violence of war; and

"Whereas, The United States and Great Britain, akin in language, jurisprudence and legal methods, are already accustomed to arbitrate their disagreements, and have emphatically declared themselves in favor of such arbitration—Congress by the action of both houses in 1892, and the House of Commons by its vote in 1893—therefore

"Resolved, That we earnestly desire such action by our national Legislature and the Executive as shall make permanent provision for some wise method of arbitration between the two countries, it being our hope that such a step will ultimately lead to international arbitration throughout the civilized world.

"Resolved, accordingly, That measures be taken in the interests of such arbitration and in concert with like committees from other cities, for the convening in the city of Washington, at the earliest practicable date, of a conference of citizens representing every portion of the country, without distinction of party or creed.

"Resolved, That we gratefully recognize the action already taken in this direction by representative citizens of Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities, and that we rely on their vigorous co-operation in promoting the success of the proposed national conference."

The Test of Usefulness.

Each new discovery of Science serves to emphasize the fact that every object in Nature has its use. Articles like coal and cotton seed, once regarded as of no value, have in this day of progress been found to be of the highest utility. The commonest substances, such as air, water and iron, are really the most useful.

If we will but listen, we hear the great voice of Nature saying that nothing is valueless. Every bee, bird and flower has its mission. Every metal, tree and animal has its allotted use. There are yet many things the use and design of which are unknown to man, but, judging from the discoveries already made, we are warranted in concluding that every object in the material world is serviceable in some way.

Can it be, then, that man, the crowning work of creation, is of less importance than the lilies or the birds or the stones of the field? Can it be that man, with all his wondrous powers and faculties, has no higher realm of usefulness than have inanimate objects and the beasts of the earth? Has he no higher destiny than to live for his own pleasure a few short years, and then pass away? Reason scorns such a conclusion, and gladly joins with Revelation in teaching in unmistakable language that every life is a plan of God, that every human being has an appointed mission here as well as hereafter, if he will accept it. Yes, in God's great kingdom there is a place and work for every individual of the race. Says the Master: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit: so shall ye be my disciples."

Everywhere and on all occasions the Son of Man strove to impress upon men the great truth that life unto God means duty, service, helpfulness. The parable of the barren fig tree strikingly illustrates how our Lord regards an unfruitful life. What a stern rebuke to selfish inactivity it contains! In proportion as we exhibit the qualities of holiness and Christian activity, just in proportion do we fulfill our mission upon earth, and become like the ever busy, self-denying, self-forgetting Master. A large per cent. of professing Christians hardly know the a, b, c of religious usefulness, to so little purpose have they studied Scripture and the book of Nature.

Usefulness, or at least the desire to be useful, is both the test and measure of our faith. Selfish, sin-loving churchmen when pressed upon this point are wont to take refuge behind the doctrine of a free salvation obtained through faith alone, forgetting that if good works follow not, the faith is spurious. A tree is known by its fruit. Every Christian ought daily to ask himself questions like these: "What is my life worth to humanity?" "Of what use am I in God's kingdom?" Earnest self-examination will oftimes make us feel that we are but cumberers of the ground.

The cause of vital religion is immeasurably hindered by people who set themselves up to be good, although active benevolence and unselfish service seldom, if ever, engage their attention. What poor self-deceivers! It is as impossible to be good without doing good as it is for a sound fig tree to keep from bearing figs. An exception is, of course, to be made in the case of invalids and others who by reason of circumstances are denied a career of religious activity. Yet the influence and bearing of those thus situated may be, and often is, like a sweet perfume, permeating the whole atmosphere of their surroundings. The Roman Emperor Titus, though a pagan, approximated the Christian ideal more nearly than many who enjoy gospel privileges. A day having passed without the bestowal of a favor or the performance of any act of benevolence, he is said to have exclaimed: "I have lost a day." What an inspiration it is to study the lives of philanthropists like John Howard, Peter Cooper, Elizabeth Fry and Miss Clara Barton.

"No man has come to true greatness," said Phillips Brooks, "who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his race, and that what God gives him he gives for mankind." Not all can become great, but all may be useful in some degree. "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." Abraham Lincoln once remarked that God must love the common people; he makes so many of them. The lowliest, most obscure toiler may enjoy as full a measure of the sweet peace that comes from an approving conscience as may the most highly honored. The same God who cares for the sparrows takes note of the humblest service performed in his name.

Utility, as Dr. Joseph Parker says, is "a wide word." The scientist and the man of affairs would narrow it down to a commercial, material basis. Some think nothing serviceable unless it has a money value. Dollars and cents can never measure the efficacy of godly zeal and activity. "He is useful who gives a little child a red and blue and yellow picture—oh, so crude in color that the trained eye could not look upon it: but the child's eyes round it into bigness and delight when they see such vividness. He is useful who gives a shoot of ivy to some poor man to plant in his inch of garden that it may climb round his windows and talk Spring and Summer to him. He is useful who suggests ideas, excites noblest thoughts; he most useful who having the gift of prayer lifts men right up to heaven's gate." Nothing can exceed the bitterness of looking back upon a useless life and wasted opportunities. Brother Christian, how many prayers for others have you breathed this year? How many kind words, how many earnest warnings, how many invitations to righteousness have you spoken? What good deeds have you done? What sacrifices have you made for humanity? Truly has it been said that there never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing good that never could have been done before, and never can be done again. Should the Master come to-day, would he find us fruit-bearers?

Miss Willard.

Miss Frances E Willard is expected to arrive in this city on Thursday, the twenty seventh, to spend a few days. Though coming to enjoy a season of rest, she has consented to give an address at Coliseum Place Baptist Church on Sunday afternoon, the first. Our readers do not need to be told that she will have an immense audience. She is accompanied by Miss Anna Gordon, who will address the children with a view to enlisting them in temperance work. Miss Willard will be the guest of her distinguished friend, Mrs. Caroline E. Merrick.

Why a Church Member Should Take a Church Paper.

Because of his promise when he became a member to support the benevolent and general interests of the church.

Every member and his family should spend as much, at least, for religious papers as for others.

Efficient members of political parties take their party papers, and endeavor to extend their circulation. Can a church member do less for his church paper?

Is it possible that one can develop in himself and in his children a taste and a love for the pure and the noble by taking into his home the secular newspapers only, many columns of which are full of gossip and scandal, and sensational details of crime too foul to print?

How can the influence of these secular newspapers be counteracted except by bringing into the family the religious paper?

Why is it that "men can not live by bread alone?" If the soul is more than the body, the wise man will supply religious food for his soul.

Every Christian parent owes it to his church, to his family, to every friend that visits him, even to the stranger that enters his door and has a minute to read, to the youth of his neighborhood, to his pastor and to his God, to take a good religious paper, and the debt increases every year he neglects this plain duty.

Church members can be of but little value to a church if they are ignorant of the principles, polity and needs of that church. Fidelity and efficient work must follow a knowledge of the church's needs. If one would be free from error and superstition he must know the truth, and the truth shall make him free. The church paper enlightens and helps to make free, and there is no substitute for it.—Methodist Recorder.

Grecian Archæology.

Prof. B. I. Wheeler, of Cornell University, now with the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, has lately written a letter to the New York Tribune, from which we quote as follows:

"The Greek government has just granted to the American School of Classical Studies the exclusive right of excavating at Corinth. This is one of the most important concessions yet made for archæological work—in some respects the most important—and may be viewed as a direct testimonial of kindly feeling toward America and its people. The most enthusiastic admirers we and our institutions have among the European nations, it is well to know, are the Greeks. We hear it and feel it on all hands, and we have repeatedly been urged to make some large request, in order that Greece might have an opportunity of testifying to her friendliness. The concession just made represents the best and the greatest that the little nation has to give.

"Corinth was the second city of Greek antiquity, and, in point of wealth, the first. Athens, which in general outranks it, can never be thoroughly explored, for the modern city stands on the site of the ancient. Old Corinth, however, is covered, in the main, only by grain-fields. The scattered hamlet which marks the ancient site has a population of barely six hundred souls. Treasures of art, of architecture, and of history written on tables of stone, richer than the boldest archæological imagination is able to detail, await but the turning of the sod."

Arbitration.

It is reported that there is a movement on foot in London to bring about the establishment of a permanent tribunal of international arbitration. The proposition was first made by Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court. Justice Harlan's proposition was to have a tribunal composed of justices of the highest court of England and of the Supreme Court of the United States for the settlement of international disputes. Such a plan seems entirely feasible. A tribunal thus constituted would command universal confidence and respect, and, provided with a general code of international law, would make war between the two great English-speaking nations next to impossible. With such an example, the remaining Christian nations of the world could not long remain indifferent to this mode of settling international disputes. It would be a long step toward that golden era in which nations shall not learn war any more, but shall turn all their energies to the harmless arts of peace.—Exchange.

Conference Post-Graduate Work.

A post graduate course of study, carefully chosen by the Bishops, and suggested for the consideration of our young men who have finished the assigned four years' scheme of study necessary for ordination to the eldership, is a desideratum in our economy. Such a course need not be made obligatory upon any one; it might be optional, placed before our young men and sanctioned not only by its own weight and character, but by the judgment of our leaders. We believe that scores, if not hundreds of our younger men would gladly embrace the opportunity which such a scheme of study would present. Some of them, under present circumstances, neglect all attempts at systematic study as soon as their four years' itinerant course is ended; perhaps most of these might be induced to undertake a supplementary course were it laid down in tentative and suggestive fashion by the church. Nor would these younger men alone, we judge, be benefited by such a plan of systematic theology and biblical reading; hundreds of itinerants, in middle life, in country districts, aloof from libraries and school opportunities, would be glad to avail themselves of the suggested books and lines of study opened to them by an officially endorsed post-graduate course. Shall we not have such a course provided by the authority of the next General Conference?—Central Advocate.

Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens is in New York City for medical treatment.

The postoffice address of Rev. J. H. Evans is Williamsburg, Miss.

Rev. E T. Denson spent a part of last week in the Crescent City.

The permanent address of Rev. S. J. Davies for 1896 is 1438 St. Mary street.

Rev. H. C. Christian, of the Virginia Conference, died on the twelfth in Richmond.

Gov. McLaurin will deliver the literary address at Millsaps College commencement.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D., will preach the commencement sermon at Wofford College in June.

W. K McLaurin has been appointed by the governor of Mississippi to succeed Judge Gilland.

Rev. C. G. Andrews expects to build a new church this year to take the place of the present Crawford Street structure.

Bishop Keener occupied the pulpit at Tchoupitoulas Mission last Sabbath much to the delight and edification of the congregation.

The report that Dr. Nansen has reached the North Pole and is on his way back must not be credited without evidence. It is possible, but not certain.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Hiwassee College, Rev. F. M. Grace, A. M., D. D, was unanimously elected to the presidency of that institution.—Holston Methodist.

The Armenian massacres continue with no abatement of their ruthlessness. English politicians may believe that the Sultan is doing his best to stop these atrocities, but no one else does.

President Cleveland has consented to preside and speak at a missionary mass meeting to be held in New York, Tuesday evening, March 3, in behalf of the home mission cause of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Talmage and Principal Booker T. Washington are also to speak.

A second architect appointed by the Mississippi Legislature to examine the Capitol has made a report, in which he condemns the building even more strongly than did the first. He declares it utterly unsafe for occupancy. We judge that this will settle the question of building a new Capitol.

The Methodist women of the city are still carrying on the Centenary College Restaurant at 1023 Canal street. Give them a call.

The Algiers Church, under the leadership of Rev. R. H. Wynn, has initiated a movement for a new house of worship to be built during the present year. We wish the movement abundant success.

The evangelical outlook in Mexico is full of hope. A recent writer says: "Every year the demand for the Bible increases. In 1894 the American Bible Society employed fifty colporteurs, who traversed Mexico in every direction."

It is pleasant to note that it has again become the mode, as it was during the last century, for European women of education and rank to take a regular course in nursing and household medicine as a part of their education. The Queen of the Belgians, the Duchess of Albany and the Duchess of Portland have been graduated as regular nurses.—Mid-Continent.

R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore, Md., announce a new book, "Story of Turkey and Armenia." This book will contain a full and graphic account of the recent Armenia massacres, which have aroused the civilized world. A number of articles have been written by men of international reputation for this book, and it will be beautifully illustrated with nearly one hundred engravings, and will be sold by subscription.

Human eloquence can not counteract the benumbing influence of a chilly church. A misjudgment of the atmospheric conditions has killed many a sermon. Not even the paid choir can put interest into a quaking and shivering congregation. Zero weather with no counteractive heat freezes the life out of a meeting. The saxion plays an important part in the making or unmaking of a good church service in Winter. The trustees should see to it that he discharges his duty with judgment and promptness.—Exchange.

Ballington Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army in the United States, has been summarily dismissed from the Army by his father, Gen. Booth. This grew out of the fact that Ballington Booth was unwilling to obey an order which removed him from America to another field of labor. It is thought that the deposed commandar will get up a Salvation Army of his own. If so, he is very likely to find it difficult to maintain discipline, having himself set the example of insubordination.

In these days of improved and labor-saving machinery, it is a senseless and exasperating thing for publishers to send out magazines, reviews and books with uncut edges, and expect intelligent and cultured people, one by one, to do what should be done in the bindary. There are publishers who appreciate their readers sufficiently to do this work for them, and their publications deserve the preference. Readers are entitled to the advantages of an age which has advanced beyond the hand-press, the wooden mold-board, and the individual paper-cutter.—Herald and Presbyter.

[We commend this to Methodist as well as other publishers.—EDITOR.]

The Independent has done a valuable service in giving a table showing the increase in church membership in this country for the past five years. The increase is figured as 3,600,000, and the suggestive comment is made that the great bulk of additions is to the denominations commonly known as evangelical. Methodists have grown most, and Baptists next. Such comparisons most conclusively answer the sneering assertion that orthodoxy is out of date, and that liberalism is sweeping the field. As a matter of fact, the liberal denominations make recruits out of the stragglers who lag behind in the march of faith.—Exchange.

Prof. Fritz Hommel and Prof. A. H. Sayce, in a recent conversation together at Cairo, Egypt, agreed with each other that modern cuneiform discovery shows that we have history, and not fiction or legend, in the narratives of Genesis, and that a large part, at any rate, of the Pentateuch, must go back to the Mosaic age. They were further agreed in holding that, although older documents are doubtless employed in the books of Moses, the so-called "literary analysis" is a philosophical mirage. As they put it, it would be impossible to dissect an English book in the way that the Pentateuch has been dissected; much more impossible, therefore, must it be to dissect an ancient work which is written in the dead and imperfectly known Hebrew language. The agreement of two such scholarly authorities on a matter of this sort is at least worthy of consideration in connection with a subject that is at present under active discussion.—Sunday-School Times.

Clarke's Commentaries Free.

We will give a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions, in six volumes, to any preacher who will send us fifteen new cash subscribers at the regular rate. Every new subscriber so obtained will be entitled to our Bibles at premium rates. Here's your chance. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

To Our Preachers.

Our recent premium offers to agents promise to bear abundant fruit. We deem it proper at this time to call the attention of our agents to one of the conditions of these offers, viz.: that the full subscription price must be sent in. The unsuccessful competitors will have all their commissions returned in cash. The successful competitors will, of course, get no commissions, the premiums being more than an equivalent.

To the Preachers of the Petrolizing Conference.

In keeping with our motto, "Better and better," we make the following offers: (1) To the preacher who sends us the largest number of new cash subscribers at the regular rate between now and the first of July we will present a handsome parlor organ catalogued at $225 (2) To the preacher sending us the second largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present either a handsome gold-filled watch, guaranteed to be a perfect time-keeper, and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, or an Arlington B Sewing Machine, whichever may be preferred. (3) To the preacher sending the third largest number of new cash subscriptions at the regular rate, we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, the same described in our offer elsewhere.

Notice that these are to be cash subscriptions at the regular rate. No commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Then, every unsuccessful competitor will have his commissions returned to him in cash.

Brethren, here is a chance to help yourselves at the same time that you help your Conference organ, and also render a service of incalculable value to the people whom you serve. If any brother does not need an organ, that need not prevent his entering the list, as the organ can be sold. Should the successful competitor wish to convert his organ into money, we will advertise it for him two months, free of charge. Those who wish to compete for this premium should notify us at once.

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

See Here.

The label on your paper indicates the date of expiration of your subscription. If the date is Jan., '96, or any time earlier than that, then you are in arrears. Don't wait for us to send you a dun, but send us the money at once. If you wish to discontinue your subscription, you have only to say so after paying up to date.

From Mrs. Snell.

MR. EDITOR: God willing, I start for Greenwood, Miss., in the morning to assist the former pastor of our church in Columbus, the Rev. J. W. Price. From there I purpose to accept an invitation from Rev. Geo. Matthews, of Macon, Ga., then will go (D. V.) to Savannah and Augusta. From Georgia I hope to go to Yazoo City to assist Dr. H. Walter Featherston, following that work by more of same character in my dear home State. In all these beautiful plans of service for Christ I beg an interest in the prayers of your readers.

Yours in the joy of his salvation,
MARY MCGEE SNELL.

Columbus, Miss., Feb. 21, 1896.

Grenada District.

In every part of the district there is much to encourage faith and stimulate zeal. My predecessors have wrought well. Perhaps there is a greater manifest lack of interest in the contributions for connectional purposes than all of the other enterprises of the church together. And we are determined, by God's grace, to wipe this stigma from several of our charges. Many of our people do well, others do nothing. Already some of the pastors are taking their collections.

Brethren, let's make March our missionary month, and if we have not begun before, begin with the first of the month and continue until every cent is in hand. Our pastors are noble, true men, faithful ministers of the Lord Jesus, and will not fail to co-operate in this great work. Our church enterprise here on Main street is being wisely and stealthily pushed. The pastor will, in three or four weeks, be in the new parsonage, ready to give personal attention to the erection of the church. God be praised for all of his goodness in the past and for the promising future.

H. C. MORNHEAD.

Lumberton.

I lectured at Lumberton last night; got the best collection there that at any point on the Northeastern where I have yet been, excepting Hattiesburg. After the lecture a newcomer then said to me, "Who is this man, Millsaps, that's hooking against all the Methodists in Mississippi? He must be a forceful fellow." I gave him a dot or two about the Major. He said the importance of "Science Hall" to that college is undoubted, and the importance of that college to Mississippi Methodism is simply incalculable; and if the Methodists of the State don't respond to that proposition, it will be a sad comment on both their intelligence and liberality. Then he said something else, that sounded to me, that the plain of it would be, if you don't raise the money to build that hall, you ought to be side-tracked—laid up—awhile for repairs.

The big Lumberton Mill, they say, is one of the finest in the South. I timed them; they can saw up a log 16 feet long, and make twelve pieces of it in 50 to 60 seconds. They put on the carriage, place it in position, slab it, turn it, throw it off on the live rollers, where it is run to the edges, all inside of a minute.

They have just completed a handsome little church there. It's a beauty. They want Bishop Galloway to dedicate it for them. I hope he will be able to do so. T. S. WEST.

A Cheese is Make Messy.

I taught school last Winter and this Summer. Seeing so many advertisements of dish washers, I thought I would make some money during vacation. You said in your paper the Rapid Dish Washer was best, so I sent to W. F. Harrison & Co., Columbus, O., who manufacture specialties for agents and got one, asked the neighbors in and washed the dinner dishes so quick and nice, everyone present bought one. I made this week $53 00, and that is a good deal better than school teaching, so I am going to sell dish washers this Winter. Other teachers would be glad to have this hint.

DAISY HENRY.

Notice.

Rev. W. H. La Prade, by request of Dr. W. R. Lambuth and myself, has consented to act as Conference missionary secretary of the Louisiana Conference for this year.

J. D. HARPER,
Pres. Conf. Board of Missions.

Arcadia, La.

Let all our preachers who are interested in our premium offer to the three most successful agents clip the offer from this issue and preserve it for reference, as it will not appear again for some time. The offer is, of course, still open and will be until July. Several brethren are in the race. Quite a number are also working for our Clarke's Commentary.

Notice to the Members and Friends of the Ministers' Education Aid Associeties.

The treasurer is very much in need of further funds to enable him to carry out our promises to the young preachers who are our beneficiaries at Centenary College. If you have not yet paid your dues for the year 1895, please make an effort to remit at once to my address the amount of five dollars, or at least a part of the amount. If you are a friend of the work, and will assist by a contribution, your gift will be at once directed where it is greatly needed.

Any person, either clerical or lay, who will send me his name, will be at once enrolled as a member of the association. R. H. WYNN, Sec'y, 431 Pelican avenue, Algiers.

"None better." Mr. Thomas Buckley, writing from the Iron Works, 6 m St. Troy, N. Y., says: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is one of the finest cough syrup for colds. None better. I always use it."

Aberdeen, Miss.

I am now closing my first round for 1896. The preachers are all at their places, and the work starts off encouraging. While there has been much sickness in the country, the preachers' families have kept fairly well. Bro. J. W. Anderson, of Houston and Wesley, was sick with la grippe when I held his Quarterly Conference. We have had sorrow in our own family. On Dec. 27 wife and I were called to South Mississippi to see our son-in-law, Dr. W. B. Lloyd, who was critically ill with pneumonia. Before we could reach his home he had passed calmly and peacefully into the region beyond, leaving our only daughter, with two little children, lonely and heart-broken. A noble, good man and much-loved physician is gone. We mourn, but not without hope. In a few short weeks the death-angel made another visit to the bereaved family. February 8 Bro. I. O. Lloyd, the Doctor's father, died a most triumphant death. For years he was a faithful steward in the church. The preachers had no better friend; kind, generous, and true. How sadly he will be missed! This world grows darker, while heaven and the future is brighter and sweeter.

From Rev. J. J. Smylie.

I will say through the ADVOCATE to the brethren, as a number have been inquiring, that my health is much improved and that I am in a fair way to entire recovery, I hope. I was obliged to change climates. I came out West, and this cold, bracing atmosphere is bringing me out rapidly.

I am now engaged in a wonderful revival meeting at this place. There seems to be a mighty turning to the Lord. My family are in Meridian, Miss., which is my permanent address.

God bless you, Mr. Editor, and the ADVOCATE. J. J. SMYLIE.

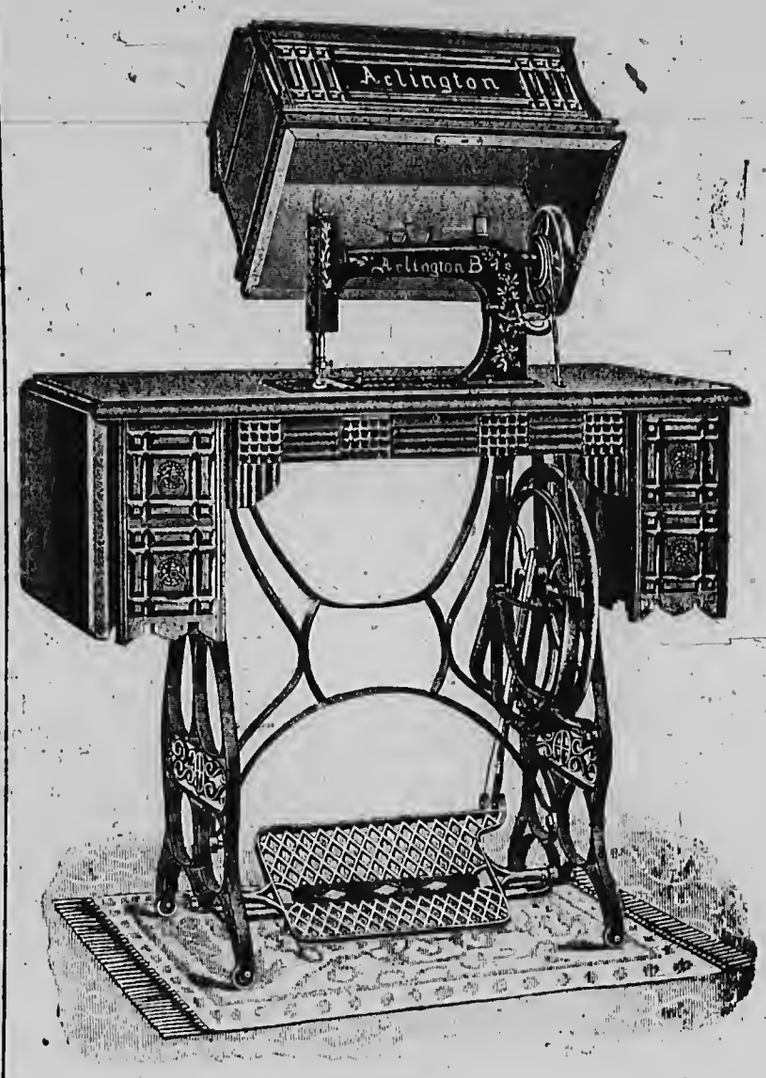
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

HOME CIRCLE.

SOME TIME.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

Last night, my darling, as you slept
I thought I heard you sigh,
And to your little crib I crept,
And watched a space thereby;
And then I stooped and kissed your brow,
For oh! I love you so—
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you shall know!

Some time, when in a darkened place
Where others come to weep,
Your eyes shall look upon a face
Calm in eternal sleep;
The voiceless lips, the wrinkled brow,
The patient smile shall show—
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you may know!

Look backward, then, into the years,
And see me here to-night—
See, O my darling! how my tears
Are falling as I write;
And feel once more upon your brow
The kiss of long ago—
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you shall know.

The Art of Being Disagreeable.

This is an art which some people acquire much more readily than others, being materially aided in their efforts by a native narrowness and meanness of disposition. But there is no reason why a man of ordinary gifts should not, with due attention to a few simple directions, make himself very speedily an object of aversion to all his acquaintances. If anyone of our readers is aiming at that end, we have a little advice which we offer him free of all charge.

1 Let him lay it down as a fixed rule that he will not allow himself to bestow even moderate praise upon the good deeds that are done under his observation. This rule rests upon the theory that virtue is its own reward, and that noble conduct deserves no special recognition. A collateral and kindred principle is that the desire for human approval, however restrained it may be, is always a sign of moral weakness, and ought not to be humored in the smallest measure.

2. Let him be equally resolute to criticise, with such sharpness of speech as he is able, all the faults and shortcomings of his friends and companions. It is well if he learns to make no discrimination between gross wrong-doing on the one hand and mere defects and infirmities on the other. A lively imagination, working in conjunction with a suspicious temper, will also be often helpful to him in conjuring up grounds of censure where none really exist.

3. Inasmuch as he knows that he himself is never controlled by lofty or magnanimous motives, let him take it for granted that everybody else is in the same condition. Why should he suppose that other folks are better than himself. Is not every man the measure of his own universe? The habit of sneering whenever disinterested benevolence is suggested as the possible ground of given actions, is of prime importance in this connection.

4. Let him exact with a miser's care all the service that can possibly be construed as belonging to him, receiving it always as a matter of right, and never as a matter of courtesy or kindness; and at the same time let him dole out, as if he were afraid of being reckoned a spendthrift, the meager attentions that he may choose to give in return.

5. Let him show his worst side to those that have the most sacred claims upon him, reserving any thoughtfulness and pleasantness, if he have any, for those who do not stand close to him, and who will not appreciate in the slightest degree the things that he may do to conciliate their good will.

By faithfully following these directions, he will succeed in alienating his friends, in repelling all those whom he might have won, and in making himself an object of universal dislike. A few faithful souls may cling to him longer than the rest; but even they will at last be worn out with his infinite pettiness, and will give him up to the devices and desires of his heart. Nothing will be left him but a morbid egotism, a dark and cheerless old age, and six feet of ground over which no honest tear will ever be shed.—Selected.

Keep Good Company.

In a snug little grotto, beneath a high bank covered with foxgloves and fern, lived a sly grey old fox. He was so very old that he could not go far to search for his food; so he was obliged to play all sorts of tricks to get it.

One night as he sat at the mouth of his hiding-place, feeling very hungry from having had nothing to eat for a long time, he observed a fine, fat young hare lazily feeding on the juicy turnip tops.

"Oh, dear," sighed the fox, "if I were only a little younger, what a rare supper I could make off that young thing! but I can't catch her."

Then an idea struck him. "Hem, hem, hem!" said he, in a loud voice.

The hare was startled and looked round.

"Sweet Miss," said the fox, coaxingly, "I'm old and feeble, and I can't fetch my supper; will you get it for me?"

"Oh, yes," said the hare, who was a giddy, thoughtless young thing, but very good-natured. "What would you like? Some nice, fresh, dewy clover?"

"Dear me, no," said the fox; "that would not suit me at all."

"Oh, it is delicious," said the hare; "but what would you like?"

"Just walk into my house," answered the fox, "and I will show you the sort of things I like."

Now, his den was strewn all over with the bones of rabbits, and ducks, and pheasants, and chickens.

"Wait a minute," said the hare, "till I finish this turnip top."

Then she skipped gaily up to the fox. "Now I'm ready!" said she.

And so was the fox. He just gave her back one nip, and she was as dead as dead could be

Do not listen to the fine words of strangers, whoever they may be. And do not choose your friends until you know something about them.—Astley H. Baldwin, in The Children's Friend.

Parent and Child.

Nothing is sweeter than sometimes finding a father who confesses himself a child with his children, a mother who is a young girl with her daughters. There is no question of authority or infallibility with these, yet somehow there is always obedience, always harmony; dignities are not sacrificed; while something better than blind homage is rendered. There are no harsh judgments, no moral reactions. Each recognizes that the thing to be attained, the quality to be expressed—as, for example, beneficence, love, courtesy, charity—is forever greater than possible human attainment, yet that each individual grows in knowledge, perfection and understanding while he strives; grows without pain, development being normal, and grows without effort, the impetus being from within and recreative, not from without, coercive and destructive. True respect each for the other—and this is the vital point—true respect each for the other, for even the opinions and the standards of the other, is at last attained. Certainly this is something better than any obedience born of the exercise of blind authority, or cultivated by a parent's personal pride in his position.—Harper's Bazar.

An Anecdote of Mr Childs.

Stopping one of his head employees one day, Mr. George W. Childs said:

"You are not looking well. I think you must be working too hard"

"I am not feeling very well, Mr. Childs, that is a fact," was the answer, "but I guess I will be all right in a short time."

"How would you like to take a trip to Europe?" said Mr. Childs, smiling pleasantly.

"Well enough, sir," was the response, "but I can not afford it."

"You can afford it," said Mr. Childs, taking him by the arm, "if I pay your expenses and pay your salary to your family while you are gone, can't you?"

The result was, the man spent two months in Europe, and returned completely restored to health.

"That was one of the best investments I ever made," chuckled Mr. Childs, when the matter was called to his attention. "Why, Mr. Black returned so much improved in health that he could do twice as much work as he could before he left. You see, I was the real gainer by the transaction."

One of Mr. Childs' characteristics was that he never seemed to take any credit to himself for doing a kind act.—New York Press.

Waste Not Want Not.

A father picked up a horseshoe in the road which his son refused to touch, and sold it for three farthings, with which he bought some cherries. They journeyed on, and the boy became thirsty and tired. The father dropped now and then a cherry, which the son was glad to pick up. When the last was eaten the father said, "Look, my son! If you had chosen to stop once and pick up a piece of horseshoe, you would not have been obliged at last to stoop so often to pick up the cherries." You see, that father was trying to teach his son not to waste things; but to save and economize. So, my dear children, you may think, perhaps, that a little spent here, and a little there, can be no great matter; but, remember, many a little makes a mickle. Beware of little wastings. Poor Richard has some splendid proverbs. Among them are these: "A small leak will sink a great ship;" and, again, "Who dainties love shall beggars prove;" and, moreover, "Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them." Now, I would not have you be stingy for anything in the world. I want you to be liberal and benevolent; but I want you, also, to learn to economize and save. Then you will grow up to have plenty to give to God and others.

Crossing town the other day in haste to catch a train, the horse-cars were three times blocked by great vans which stood upon the track. I looked about on my fellow-passengers. Some had flushed and angry faces, some could not sit still, but tapped the floor with their feet, and uttered exclamations, and looked at their watches. One or two stepped out with their bags and walked hastily onward. But a dear old lady in the corner of the car was a pattern of sweetness and amiability; and I heard her observe to her neighbor: "We will probably lose our train, but at this time of the day there are trains every half hour, and it's never well to be put out by little accidents of this sort." She had the right philosophy.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

True politeness comes from the heart. It can not be put on by merely observing the rules of etiquette. All our youth should be acquainted with the rules of etiquette. But these avail but little if we do not have love in our hearts. If we love people, we shall treat them well. If we do not love them we shall only be hypocrites, even if our outward treatment of them is perfect. Let us, therefore, ask God to make our hearts right, so that we shall be able to treat everyone well.

HYGIENE.

To Aid Digestion—No!

In the columns of the press, and on cards in railroad cars, the eye is constantly greeted with the advertisements of alcoholic liquid preparations highly recommended as "aids to digestion." How absurd and fallacious, yet by thousands and tens of thousands are these preparations used with the idea that they are an excellent aid to digestion; and as such, we are sorry to say, are recommended by physicians who ought to know better. Aid digestion! Why the very reverse is true. They prevent the digestion of food, and thus bring disease upon the body. Alcohol is an antiseptic; we put bodies into it to preserve them from decay. Can anything be more absurd than to saturate our food with an antiseptic that it may dissolve the better? Should we commend the wisdom of the potter who should first harden the clay that he might render it more plastic? And yet he is guilty of greater folly who swallows a drink which renders the food harder and more difficult of digestion, and boasts of doing so for the purpose of increasing its digestibleness? We should scarcely pour salt into a fountain that the stream might be sweet, nor would a chemist render his retorts and jars fusible or corrosive that his gases might be the purer; yet this is what we do in drinking alcoholic liquors. We pour a poison into the blood which corrupts and inflames it, and we do so to make it pure! We ulcerate the stomach to render it more capable of its functions, and all this forsooth is done by direction of medical advisers! No wonder that indigestion has become a national disease, and a thousand quacks have amassed princely fortunes in catering for stomachs and nerves which alcoholic drinks, taken by medical advice to aid digestion, have already ulcerated or shattered.—National Temperance Advocate.

A Good Bed.

The main point nowadays is the covering. There is a strong temptation to use a quilted cotton comfortable, costing a dollar, in preference to a pair of blankets costing five times as much, yet the blankets are far cleaner, sweeter, warmer—for the same weight—and better from a health standpoint in every way. It is needless to add that the good housewife will see to it that bedding and clothes have a daily airing sufficient to abolish entirely the stale, unpleasant odor which hangs around a bed, and indicates the presence of an indefinite amount of ancient effluvia. Clean sheets and sunshine work wonders with beds. If you are compelled to use a modern folding-bed, be sure it has ample space for ventilation, and that it is never put up in the morning until sun and air have worked their miracle of cleansing.—Dr. E. G. Wood, in The Healthy Home.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

TOMATO GRAVY.—Much is said, and none too much, of the dietetic virtues of the apple. Next to it, perhaps, we may rate the tomato. It has one virtue that we have never seen mentioned: the property of emulsifying fats. To this may be added a singular faculty of assimilating itself to the flavor of meat gravy with which its juice may be cooked. Our housekeeping friends may try a fried steak, for once, by cooking a little tomato juice in the sizzling pan just after removing the meat. Any melted fat, or baked shreds and juice adhering to the iron, or butter applied to the meat, entirely disappear in an emulsion, making a rich, copious, reddish-brown gravy, with the true meat flavor scarcely modified by a slight piquant acidity from the fruit. If the steak has been left in a vessel to save its drainings since it was cut, and this juice be put in with that of the tomato, the gravy will be by so much enriched and enlarged, as well as thickened by the coagulation of the additional albumen. Colandered tomato pulp with this meat juice makes a thick sauce of like rich flavor for roast or stew.—Sanitary Era.

Sometimes it takes a grumbling church member a good while to find out that the fault is all in himself; but when he does make the discovery, he is the most astonished man in the world.—Exchange.

OBITUARIES.

MABRY—Mary Taylor Mabry passed up her eternal reward on the Sabbath eve of May 12 in the parsonage at Palatka, Fla. This cultivated Christian woman was the daughter of Capt. S. T. Taylor and Susan E. Taylor, the former having preceded her only a few months to the better land. On April 6, she was married to Rev. W. E. H. Mabry. It was the union of two congenial souls, who found constant joy and inspiration in the strength of each other's love.

Last year her health began to decline, and in hope of restoring it Bro. Mabry transferred from the North Alabama Conference to the Florida Conference; but the soft breezes of that land of sunshine failed to restore her health.

We sometimes write extravagantly of the dead, and draw their pictures in fairer colors than the facts might justify; but in this case such would be a difficult task, all will testify who knew the strength and altitude of her noble character.

Though only twenty-six years of age, she had reached a development in Christian experience surpassed by few of maturer years. She had wisely cultivated her opportunities for intellectual and moral discipline, as was manifest in the strength of her character. Though reared in a home of culture and affluence, where there was every means to gratify a woman's pride and give her an easy introduction into certain circles of society, yet she was above its hollow shams and vanities, preferring a life of nobler activity. So early did she seek the association of the church and the companionship of those who communed with God, that she never knew the hour of her spiritual birth. It came in her silent and solemn communion with God, so noiselessly and gently that it was like a day-dawn or the bursting of a bud into blossom. Her life was beautiful, and with those gentle graces which adorn a Christian woman, and enriched with faith as simple as a child's, yet as strong as a martyr's. Upon the altar of her heart flowed the light of the cross with a brightness which lit up her soul, illumined her face, and transfigured her life. Her purity of character, and absorbing devotion to the true and good, marked her life with signal emphasis. Her life was a rich antham set to the key of God's praise, swelling from the depths of a fervent and grateful heart.

As the wife of an itinerant Methodist preacher, she displayed most conspicuously the exalted heroism of her nature and her true, self-sacrificing devotion to her Master's cause. In this delicate and responsible position she proved herself a helpmate indeed. During the two short years of her wedded life she made her home a bower of praise and joy, and was a constant inspiration to her husband in his noble work. She made the parsonage the center of a holy influence, which pervaded the whole community in which she lived. With all her gifts and culture, she was truly modest. No word or act ever indicated anything unwomanly in her nature. It was the strength and purity of her character which drew people to her, and lifted them to higher thought and richer Christian experience. In all her relations in life, as daughter, sister, wife and church member, the same exalted Christian virtues crowned her life and made her presence a benediction. Her end was peaceful. Without a groan or struggle she went to rest as gently and calmly as the light of stars fade away at the flush of day. There was no cloud upon her spiritual horizon. Amid the splendors and glorious triumphs of an eternal victory she sweetly fell asleep. By the side of her sainted father in Enterprise, Miss., they laid her to sleep and to wait the resurrection morn. With her dear loved ones we weep and feel the bereavement of a personal loss.

May God bind up the broken hearts, wipe away the tears, and console them with his presence! While they miss her and mourn for her, yet they know where to find her. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!"

PRUITT—Mrs. Cecilia A. Pruitt was born in Adams county, Miss., in 1811, and died at her residence in Jefferson county, Oct. 16, 1895 and was buried in the family burying-ground at her home, the Rev. W. B. Bingham officiating. Sister Pruitt was married in 1830 to James B. Jones, a brother of the late Rev. John G. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference; her husband dying four years after their marriage. Three children were born to them, two of whom still live. About 1840 she was again married, this time to Joseph Pruitt, who died Jan. 9, 1863. Five sons and one daughter was the fruit of this union. In the Summer of 1866 she joined the M. E. Church, South, at old Cane Ridge, where she kept her membership till the day of her death.

She found her home encumbered with debt at the death of her husband. She set herself to the task of overcoming the difficulties that lay in her road to success, and one by one she saw them surmounted. The debt was paid, and she found herself in the possession of a handsome property. Her piety was unquestioned. Diligently did she strive to bring up her children "in nurture and admonition of the Lord." As a result of her efforts all but one have "found Christ precious to their souls." Sister Pruitt was a wise and prudent woman, and this, coupled with a life hid in Christ, made her an exemplary character. Her health was very feeble for several years before her death, which made it impossible for her to attend church, but she worshiped her Savior at home.

Truly a good and noble spirit has gone to heaven. May the loved ones meet her there!

Her pastor, JOHN W. CHILES.

EMERSON—Mrs. Emmeline M. Emerson was born in Montgomery county, Kentucky, April 11, 1827. She had been a resident of New Orleans fifty-two years, and died Jan. 24, 1896.

She obeyed the divine command to "remember her Creator in the days of her youth," and realized in her experience the fulfillment of the promise, 'They that seek me early shall find me." She was one of the oldest members of the Carondelet Street Methodist Church.

My acquaintance with Sister Emerson has been long. I was many years her pastor, in my several pastorates of the Carondelet Street Church. She was diligent in business, but she was equally fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. It may be said of her that "she opened her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue was the law of kindness."

She was for many years the child of affliction—often extremely weak and greatly emaciated; but she held on to life with great tenacity. But though long and sorely afflicted, she was always patient and cheerful. I never remember seeing her without a pleasing and hopeful smile upon her face. She seemed to have no fear of death. She loved the house of God and the communion of saints. She was hospitable, a good mother, a true friend—in all, a faithful Christian.

A circle of loved ones and friends will long cherish the memory of her beautiful life.

J. B. WALKER.

MAGEE—Andrew G. Magee was born in Washington parish, La., Jan. 7, 1850, and died Nov. 16, 1895.

Bro. Magee had been in bad health for quite a while with that dreadful disease, consumption, which made his recovery hopeless. He seemed to realize quite a while before death came that his time here was short. On one occasion I said to him, "You had better think more of your spiritual than of your physical condition," to which he replied, "I have been thinking of that for some time." He expressed himself to another brother as being ready and willing to die.

Bro. Magee's life led all to believe that he was living for the glory of God and the good of humanity. He took great interest in church affairs and seemed to take special delight in doing anything for his pastor. He was a good, obliging neighbor, an exceptional citizen, a devoted husband and father, always endeavoring to bring his children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

He leaves a wife and three children, besides a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. I commend his bereaved family to Christ, who is able to fill their cup of sorrow with joy and to bring them to that land of everlasting joy. His pastor,

W. H. BENTON.

WARNER—Mrs. Laura D. Warner (nee Holmes) was born Feb. 9, 1842, and departed this life March 11, 1895. She was married to Denial C. Werner, Sept. 26, 1864, and soon thereafter became a member of the M. E. Church, South, of which she was a dear lover and faithful defender until her death.

She was a devoted wife, a loving, gentle mother who cared not alone for the physical well being of her loved ones, but for their spiritual good also, ever exhorting them by precept and example to walk godly lives. Sister Warner was a good neighbor, was given to hospitality, glad to entertain any one, and especially her pastor.

Grieve not, loved ones, though mother's chair is vacant. Your loss is her eternal gain, and if you will follow her teaching, you will soon meet her where parting is no more.

heed the signal

Many persons take a variety of remedies and try many novel procedures to reduce their weight. We do not refer to these. If you have been in fair health, with a normal amount of flesh, and yet have been losing weight of late, there is something wrong. If there is an inherited tendency to weak lungs; if your cold hangs on, or if you are weak, without appetite, losing color, and easily exhausted; this loss of flesh is the signal of distress. Heed it, promptly.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with hypophosphites, comes to the rescue, because it supplies a peculiar food in a pleasant and easily digested form. This oil has medicinal properties not found in any other fat; while the hypophosphites have sustaining and life-giving properties of their own. Don't let yourself get thin.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist;" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.25 (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to March, 97. (A little later it will be April, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.25, $1.75 and $2.45.

THE DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages printed on excellent paper, is finely illustrated, and handsomely and strongly bound in cloth, measuring 9¼x6½x2 inches.

It contains every name in the Bible and Apochrypa, of which anything can be said. It gives an account of each of the Books of the Bible; it explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs of the Jews, as well as of the various nations mentioned or alluded to in the Scriptures, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves, and worthy of separate publication.

It embraces the results of the most successful and approved Biblical labors and researches, including those of Layard, Rawlinson and others condensed for wide and common use, and constituting an indispensable aid to Ministers, Teachers, Families, Sunday-School Superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

This is undoubtedly the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The publisher's price of the above work is $4.50. We will send it to any address on receipt of price, or we will send it free to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate.

REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF SAINT PAUL.

By the Rev. W. J. CONYBEARE, M. A., Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and the Rev. J. S. Howson, D. D., Principal of the Collegiate Institution, Liverpool.

Contains 1014 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality of paper and is the same in size as Smith's Dictionary of the Bible and bound in uniform style.

It eloquently portrays the early Life, education, conversion, teachings, labors, travels, sufferings, perils, persecutions, and missionary career of St. Paul, thus constituting a Living Picture of the great Apostle himself and of the circumstances by which he was surrounded.

The work also embodies the results of a profound and appreciative study of the true inner life of St. Paul exhibited in his letters which delineate the motives which impelled, and the faith which sustained him in all the troubles and sorrows of his twenty year's conflict, and from which we learn what is told of Paul by Paul himself, and which will continue to live upon the lips and in the hearts of all the faithful until the final consummation of all things.

It is NOT an ABRIDGEMENT but an EXACT RE-PRINT of the greatly improved "People's Edition," prepared with much care and labor, in pursuance of an original plan of both writers, "for a wider circle of readers," and differs from all other editions by the SUBSTITUTION OF ENGLISH for the Greek, Latin and German quotations.

Dr. Howson in his preface to this edition says,—"Those readers have, throughout, been kept in view who, though well educated, would not find it easy to refer to Greek or German books." "The text (he also says) is unaltered, with the exception of a slight verbal change suggested in the course of a thorough re perusal."

The publisher's price of the above book is $4.50. We will send it free of charge to any person who will send us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.00. We will also send it to any address at the publisher's price.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Michigan Supreme Court has decided that it is no libel for a critic to dissect and ridicule a book.

Edgar W. (Bill) Nye, the American humorist, died at his home two miles east of Asheville, N. C., on Feb. 22.

Seven people were asphyxiated, one fatally hurt by jumping from a window and five others more or less injured by a fire in Baltimore on Feb. 23.

The 1,400 policemen in Brooklyn own over $5,000,000 in real estate. A majority of them owning their own houses, and many own several.

The Ohio Wesleyan University has adopted a rule absolutely forbidding its students to use tobacco in any form. It has made a great stir among the students.

The House has passed a bill commanding the Secretary of Agriculture to distribute seeds, and making a bigger appropriation than usual for the purpose.

In the Boston City Hospital last year the use of anti-toxine reduced the percentage of deaths from diphtheria to 11 per cent., the lowest on record at any place or time.

Dr. Joseph Jones, a distinguished surgeon and savant, was buried in this city last week. He occupied the chair of chemistry of Tulane University at his death. He was surgeon-general of the United Confederate Veterans.

Governor Evans, of South Caroline, declares that the dispensary system in that State does not prohibit, and was never intended to do so, but has done great good. The consumption of whisky has decreased nearly 50 per cent., and the number of drunks before the courts has decreased nearly 70 per cent.

The postoffice authorities at Washington announce that, having succeeded in suppressing the scandalous newspaper of Chicago, it means to continue the crusade and go for the Police Gazette and Police News, of New York City, the Sunday Sun, of Kansas City, and all other snob publications of the country.

Senator Squire will, this week, report from the Committee of Coast Defenses his bill for fortifications. It appropriates $87,000,000, the whole or any part to be immediately available on order of the President. There is an emergency clause to authorize the speedy completion of fortifications in case of war.

The Catholic Winter School of America opened in this city on Feb. 20. The session of the Winter School will last until March 14, and during that time there will be lectures three times a day, the course of studies including astronomy, botany, literature, ethics, science and dogma, social problems, economics, pedagogy, history and other branches.

FOREIGN.

Washington's birthday was duly celebrated by the large American colony in London.

The London Economist figures that the Cuban war is costing Spain $5,000,000 a month, and says that it has depressed the Cuban securities 20 per cent.

In India an effort is being made to prevent the circulation of business advertisements through the mails. People who receive them claim that their rights are trespassed upon.

France has decided to invest $200,000 in pomp and state at the coming coronation of the Czar. General de Boisdeffre, chief of the general staff of the French Army, will be official representative of his government on the occasion.

Eight carloads of dynamite exploded at Vlecendorp, South African Republic, last week. Thousands of people have been rendered homeless by the terrible calamity, about 100 persons are believed to have been killed, some two or three hundred men, women and children have been severely wounded, and many others have been more or less injured.

On Feb. 21 President Faure, of the French Republic, signed the pardon of Waller, the American, who nearly a year ago was arrested in Madagascar and tried by court martial by the French military authorities, on the charge of conspiracy with the enemies of France. Waller was pronounced guilty and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment in a fortress.

The Spanish columns which have been operating against the insurgents in Cuba have been engaged with the enemy under Maximo Gomez and others commanding the main forces of the insurgent army. Several fights have taken place during the last week on the limits of the province of Havana and the province of Santanzas. The insurgents have lost seventy killed and over 300 wounded.

The again darkening prospect for Great Britain all over the world may powerfully and speedily operate upon the premier's mind to force a settlement of the Venezuelan question along lines of arbitration. Russia, apparently supine for years, is dangerously extending her power. This week saw her loosen her control of the Balkan States. The week before saw her establish her practical suzerainty over Turkey.

Ninety Per Cent. of all the people need to take a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season to prevent that run-down condition of the system which invites disease.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or gripe. All druggists. 25c.

Holman Bible at $1.25.

By buying in wholesale quantities we are able to make the following reduction in our Emerald-type Holman Bible. This Bible we have sold heretofore at $1.50. We now offer it at $1.25 to those who pay their subscription a full year in advance—that is, to March, '97. We do not advise any person who has passed the meridian of life to get this Bible, on account of the smallness of the print. For young persons, however, it will answer as well as the more expensive styles. It has all the helps of the larger sizes. Address

FOR BRONCHIAL AND ASTHMATIC COMPLAINTS, Brown's Bronchial Troches have remarkable curative properties.

"Reminiscences."

Some years ago I wrote and published a series of articles in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE under the head of "Reminiscences." Other duties interfered so that I could not write them consecutively, but frequently weeks would intervene. These articles, as I have learned from various sources, were read with interest, and I have been urged repeatedly to put them in such form that they can be preserved for reference.

Now, that I am no longer able to do the work of a pastor, and my wife is bending under the weight of years, I conclude to spend the remnant of my days in reviving the memory of "those I love," and who have passed away from earth to heaven. It would require a volume to mention all who were shining lights along the "path our fathers trod," but I propose to mention some of whom "the world was not worthy," and who are gone to "mansions in the skies," and put these "Reminiscences" in a form that they may be preserved. Soon as I can I will have them printed in pamphlet form, and all who desire them will please notify me, by postal card or letter, so that I may be governed by the demand, and not involve myself in trying to serve others. Those desiring a copy will please give their names, postoffice address and the number of copies they desire. The price will be moderate as I can afford.

Missionary fervor must be fed with missionary facts. Ideal enthusiasm springs from personal knowledge of actual conditions. Men and moneys, prayers and petitions, will not be offered for a cause when people are ignorant of its claims and its needs. Impulse must be preceded by instruction. Let Christ's soldiers at home receive regular bulletins from the front telling of their comrades' dangers, perplexities, and needs, and they will be inspired to send forward reinforcements and supplies.—Rev. Howard S. Bliss.

The greatest of liniments! Mrs. E. M. Devilbiss, Philadelphia, Md., writes: "I use Salvation Oil for sore throat, rheumatism, etc., and find it is one of the best liniments out."

DAILY LIFE.

BY MAUD RUSSELL.

Are you watching for the Master
Day by day?
As each golden morn is breaking
Does the thought your spirit cheer—
Maybe e'er the day is over
He'll appear?

Are you walking with your Master
Day by day?
Simply walking on with Jesus,
Trusting him for one step more;
Thankful that he veils the future
Yet in store?

Are you working for the Master
Day by day?
Are you gathering in some lost ones,
Following in the Savior's track,
Till the keeper of the vineyard
Cometh back?

Go on watching, waiting, working,
Day by day,
In the little time that's left you,
Even though the way be dark,
Press still onward, upward, heavenward,
Toward the mark.

Telling Stories on Preachers.

There are some old stories on preachers that seem destined to live forever. It is a pity but they would die. Likely they were never true. In some cases they are not true now, as I have good reason to know. There is an old story, that I have heard ever since I could remember, that is still told on preachers as if it were true. Some people are silly enough to believe it. The story is—likely it a story was—that one of the old preachers called at a house, and the good lady told him to do just like he would at home while she got dinner ready. In a short while she returned and found the preacher carrying out the ashes. When asked why he did this, he said: "Well, you told me to do just as if I were at home; and if I were at home, I would take out these ashes." The chances are that this never occurred in the case of any preacher since the world began. As a rule, preachers are gentlemen, and they know how to behave themselves in company.

I have heard this story told on more than a score of living preachers since I was old enough to remember. Some of them I knew personally, and I know they never did anything of the kind. This story is now told on two living preachers in the North Mississippi Conference, and it is not true in the case of either one of them. They are both gentlemen, and try to conduct themselves as such in the homes where they visit. This story, and other stories of like character—old as the hills—are told on these preachers by both preachers and laymen until they are regarded by strangers as odd men; and some good sisters dread them at first. Every now and then a good lady, after she gets well acquainted, asks one or the other of these preachers if this ever occurred. She always seems greatly surprised at an emphatic "Never." These two members of the North Mississippi Conference roomed together, and slept in the same bed at Water Valley in December last; and they both longed for the time to come when preachers and laymen would quit telling this old falsehood on them. It is a falsehood pure and simple. Each of these preachers find that this story has preceded him in every new charge he serves. I suppose they will have to die to get rid of this falsehood; and when they are gone, it will be told on some other preacher.

A story gets started on a preacher, and it grows as it goes until the truth all filters out of it, and nothing but falsehood is left.

I know a preacher who has a rich vein of humor in him, and who now and then tells a good story to point a moral. This is repeated and re-repeated. Soon it is improved upon. It is taken out of its connection, and given another and entirely different setting, and told for the truth. The story is told in connection with the communion service, rendering the service ridiculous, even farcical; or in connection with the altar service, calling mourners, turning the whole into burlesque. This is seriously told by one preacher on another, and readily believed by the people until the preacher is regarded by the people as a clown or a buffoon. The people are surprised to find him a serious, reverent man in all the services of the church and in performing the offices of his ministry. They find that the stories current among the people were only falsehoods.

In most cases, particularly among brethren in the same Conference, a moment's serious reflection ought to satisfy them that these stories are falsehoods out of the whole cloth, or they have been made false by changing the position and relations of things.

There is enough that is funny or ridiculous when the truth is told without adding to it or changing the setting of it. It is well to consider whether a story is fact, fancy, or fiction.

A man who tries to be odd is a simpleton, an egotist, or a fool. He seeks for notoriety; tries to attract attention to himself. This is vanity and sin. All sensible people have a contempt for a man or woman who tries to be odd. This is nowhere so contemptible as in a preacher and in the pulpit. It is cheap fame, damnable vanity, because it is vanity at the expense and to the disgrace of the gospel of the Son of God.

GILDEROY.

Crumbs That Fall.

There is no longing of the human heart so intense as that for sympathy. It is, doubtless, the lack that exists at this vital point that has caused so much of riot and discontent all over our land; this inhumanity to man that has not only made countless numbers mourn, but has produced so much of restlessness and unhappiness among our people. It is not enough that we say unto one: 'Depart in peace: be ye warmed and filled, and give nothing of those things which are needful to the body." The priest and the Levite doubtless were moved at the sight of the unfortunate man who fell among the thieves, but their sympathies took no practical shape. It was for the Samaritan, who provided for his necessities, to demonstrate that true sympathy which finds expression in more tangible things than words. To the needy, suffering, hungry man words may be crumbs, but they are but crumbs. The tramp who begs at your door may appreciate your words of exhortation and pity, but, most of all, he wants bread to satisfy his hunger. What comfort is it to the Armenian sufferers that the great Christian nations in conferences, congresses and conventions express their horror and disapproval of the cruel butcheries to which they are subjected? It may be a consolation to know that the better people of the world disapprove of such barbarities, but what is such a crumb to those who suffer? Our Congress may grow eloquent over the "horny-handed" farmer, but what does it profit while he labors that it drags out a fruitless session? The crumb of promises has been so long and so often thrown out, and as often unfulfilled, that it is no wonder that our political caldron seethes and boils and burns.

That feature in the character of our blessed Lord which has most impressed humanity is his abiding, unselfish love for the suffering. His sympathy for all who sought him was such that none went from him unheard who came seeking relief at his hands. She who asked for only a crumb that fell from the children's table received all the cravings of her soul.

In accordance with this hunger for human sympathy, for brotherly kindness, the great apostle to the Gentiles lays down this maxim: "Bear ye one another's burden, and so fulfill the law of Christ." In no work is this more needful than in the work of the church. Each in his place needs the help of others. I have known a stout-hearted pastor to fail of success when he might reasonably have looked for great things, because of the evident indifference of those for whom he labored. Jesus turned away from Nazareth because of their unbelief, and St. Paul said to one city, "Lo! I turn to the Gentiles."

The people that would secure the fullest value of a pastor's work and presence would do well to read the teaching, "To remember those which have the rule over them" in all things. St. Paul's writings are full of this call for sympathy toward the ministry. Strong and undaunted as was he, his expressions upon this point are many and unmistakable. Harsh, unguarded criticism can not fail to destroy the pastor's power for good.

It is not uncommon for a man who would prove of incalculable good to a church and community, in the Sunday-school work, to hesitate and fail because those who should stand by him fail to give the sympathy and co-operation which is necessary to success. It is not enough to send the children to the Sunday-school; that is but a small part of the requisite sympathy. The steward who is called a beggar, and so treated in his work of love for the church, and his less willing brother, who is met with paltry excuses, can not fail to feel the chill that comes from an unsympathizing people. My heart was moved within me on a recent visit to a charge, where I saw two beardless boys assuming the unthankful and rejected position of stewards in the church of God. I said, "Thank God for such boys," and yet I trembled for the sequel. That church had it in its power to sanctify age and make princes in Israel of those boys, or to discourage and dishearten, and finally drive them from her altars, simply from a lack of sympathy in their work for the church they love. I said within me, "If those boys were my stewards, they would never be turned away empty." So we might continue to moralize. Let not him who can give loaves content himself with mere crumbs. "As God has prospered," is the teaching.

In the Living Present.

Bishop Vincent recommends the noon ringing of church bells, to remind all Christians to pray for the welfare of Christendom.

A free lodging-house for tramps is to be established in New York, where the rule will be, "No hash, no bed."

A celebrated London physician is convinced of the health value of a hobby. He says: "If you can not find pleasure in the study of the very many wonders that surround you; if you care not for geology, natural history, or astronomy, collect walking sticks, buy and cherish old cracked china, fill up albums and scrap books, or even gather together autographs and postage stamps; anything, sooner than be idle." The doctor is undoubtedly right, for true recreation requires a thorough change of work and also of thought.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children spent $740,000 last year. During its twenty years existence 220,000 children have been rescued from cruel treatment. Mr. Gerry, the president of the society, recently said: "But for the saloon, the work of the society would be greatly diminished. The very moment that drink enters the house parental sympathy goes out."

The Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, of New York City, has just closed its fourth successful year as a free church. Everything is free. All gifts are free-will offerings. But the system has worked so well that during the four years' experiment $20,851 has been raised for benevolent purposes, and for church expenses $74,787. The congregation is not wealthy. Many institutional features have been adopted with success.

A celebrated physician declares there is a close connection between a man's occupation and the color of his hair. He says: "An unusual proportion with dark, straight hair enter the ministry; red-whiskered men are apt to be given to sporting and horse-flesh, while the tall, vigorous blonde man, lineal descendants of the Vikings, still contribute a large contingent to travelers and emigrants."

The Salvation Army is about to open a mission in Chinatown, San Francisco. It will be in charge of Captain May Jackson, who speaks the Canton dialect. She says: "The Chinese like anything noisy, and I expect to use plenty of it in reaching them."

ICH DIEN.

Miss Willard Is to Go to Mississippi.

Miss Willard goes from New Orleans, Monday, March 2, to Jackson, Miss., where she will lecture the following afternoon. On March 4 she will go to Vicksburg, and speak there the next day, and on the sixth she will turn her face toward Louisiana again, going directly to Baton Rouge. The W. C. T. U. of Mississippi and the Prohibitionists are rejoicing that Miss Willard will reach them before the Legislature adjourns, as it is especially desired that she address that body.

Miss Anna Gordon, who accompanies Miss Willard, will hold meetings for the children both in Jackson and Vicksburg. Miss Gordon has been traveling with Miss Willard for nineteen years as her private secretary, and has shared with that great friend of humanity and of God her joys and sorrows, her hard labors and unprecedented honors. While Miss Willard was the guest of Lady Henry Somerset in England, Miss Gordon took a trip on the continent. When she was visiting her sister, who has established a college for the higher education of girls in San Sebastian, Spain, Miss Gordon successfully organized a Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but her work is distinctively for the children.

Since Miss Willard has been in the South this Winter, she has been greeted in every city where she spoke to large and enraptured audiences, and has met with the generous appreciation and hospitality for which Southern people are so justly famous. May her visit to us be a benediction, and may she and Miss Gordon receive such rich tokens of our love that the memory of this last visit to the South will abide with them, delightfully, forever.

BELLE KEARNEY.

Correspondence.

Letter from Texas.

MR EDITOR: You will please let me say to my brethren and friends that I am improving very fast, and hope now that I will soon be able to return home and continue my work in the Master's vineyard. This is a great country and a wonderful climate. There are many here from the North and East who are suffering with throat and lung troubles, seeking climatic influence, and many are entirely cured. All this Southwest Texas country is a natural sanitarium, especially for such troubles as mentioned.

Rev. C. W. Perkins, who transferred from the North Mississippi Conference last Fall, is stationed here. He has just closed the most successful meeting ever held in this country. So many of the old citizens say. Perkins preaches, prays, sings and shouts out here just like he did in Mississippi. The people like him, and are providing abundantly for his temporal necessities. The people say if we have any more like him at home, to send them out here; but I tell them they must not be too greedy and want all we've got.

I must say a word of the work that is being done here among the Mexican population. Bros. Carter, the presiding elder, and Sam Miguel, the pastor (who is a full-blooded Mexican, and once a notorious Catholic, ready at any time to do violence to a Protestant congregation), are conducting revival exercises at Tobey, which is twelve miles west of this place, where Bro. J. S. McKinnon, on his ranch of fifty thousand acres, has built at his own expense a beautiful little chapel, in which he invites the Mexicans of his own ranch and neighboring ones to come and worship. Bro. McKinnon is a wealthy Methodist, who came down here about eight years ago from St. Louis, establishing himself on his ranch, and beginning work at once for the salvation of the Mexicans; and his labors have been crowned with great success. If we had more McKinnons on the large ranches of this country, and many of his kind on the large cotton plantations of the South, the Mexican and negro questions would be settled. May his kind increase!

Now, back to the meeting. It began Friday night, and up to yesterday (Sunday) evening there had been seventeen men and one woman—all grown and some very old—who at the altar had renounced Catholicism and asked for membership in the Methodist Church. The priest has only been in that neighborhood once since the little church was built, and they say he will not come back any more. I have attended some of these services, and while the preaching, singing, praying and shouting is all in Spanish, and I could scarcely understand a word, yet I never enjoyed services more in my life, for while we spoke in different tongues, we all had the witness of the same Spirit. One word, however, we spoke in common; that was "Hallalujah." I praise God that I have seen this much of the mission work of our great church, and shall go home hoping to inspire my people with greater missionary interest than ever before.

Brethren, pray for me and my charge while I am away. A. J. JONES.

Pleasanton, Texas, Feb. 24, 1896.

To the Preachers and Members of the M. E. Church, South, in Mississippi.

Our church has been organized in the State of Mississippi for nearly one hundred years, and, so far as we know, no systematic effort has been put forth in behalf of the orphans.

During the last five or six years the conscience of the church in our State seems to have been awakened, and almost simultaneously the three leading denominations have moved with organized effort toward the permanent establishment of homes for orphan children.

The Presbyterians are building in Columbus a home called Palmer Orphanage, in honor of the eloquent divine of their church, Dr. B. M. Palmer.

The Baptists have purchased in Jackson an eligible tract of land, on which they hope soon to erect a building in which to give shelter, comfort and home influence to those whom God in his providence has left without father or mother.

Without reviewing the events that led up to the appointment of the directors by the two Mississippi Conferences, we beg your help, that we may not be one whit behind the oldest of our sister denominations in caring for those to whom God has promised fatherhood.

The Board of Directors desire to locate not later than May the "Mississippi Orphans' Home" of M. E. Church, South. To locate and establish this institution, it will be necessary to have funds sufficient for building, furnishing and equipping. At the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences three thousand dollars were subscribed by about one hundred and fifty of our preachers and laymen; but we believe every Methodist in the State will gladly give to this benevolent cause. Therefore we request, in accordance with the resolution of the Annual Conferences, that the first Sunday in April, 1896, be observed as "Orphans' Day" throughout the State, and that each of our preachers be requested to preach a sermon on "Our Duty to the Orphan," and take a collection in cash and subscription. Our circuits let the preachers use the Sundays following the first Sunday in April till the cause has been presented to each congregation, and all our people given the privilege of contributing to this great work.

Send the amounts raised in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference to Rev. J. A. Bowen, Water Valley, Miss., and those raised in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference to Rev. M. L. Burton, Crystal Springs, Miss.

We would also call the attention of the superintendents of our Sunday-schools and the presidents of our Epworth Leagues to this new enterprise, and solicit their co-operation in interesting the young people in behalf of the orphans.

We hope to have our "Home" opened for the care of orphans not later than early Fall. As soon as money is collected please send as directed, as this will expedite matters.

Yours obedient servants in Christ,
W. A. GUNNING,
M. L. BURTON,
Committee.

Here and There.

I have visited quite a number of charges in our Conference, and have found the preachers hard at work pushing forward the interests of our Lord's kingdom. I don't think I have ever seen the pastors in better spirits, or the general work of the church more hopeful. There seems to be a sort of revival spirit throughout the Conference. There have been many accessions to the church, though there has only been one revival held since Conference, and that was held by Bros. Bowen and Clifford at Water Valley.

Parks is doing a great work at Kosciusko; Thomas is repairing the parsonage, and preaching to large crowds at Starkville; Gibbs is having fine success on Starkville circuit; Burroughs, one of our best presiding elders, is doing well on the Columbus district; Malone is moving things at West Point; Lester is working hard at Coffeeville trying to pay an old parsonage debt; Shipman has captured the people at Sardis; Lipscomb, as usual, is attending carefully to the interests of the church at Como; and Bros. Morehead, Wier and Mitchell have things well in hand throughout their respective districts. And Sister Hargrove has accepted a position as teacher in Grenada Collegiate Institute. Good!

Bro. Mitchell, our pastor at Lexington and Tchula, is one of our most promising young preachers, and is doing a splendid work in his charge. The membership of the charge has doubled in the last two years, the same improvement is shown in its finances, and its spiritual condition is on a much higher plane. Bro. Mitchell is trying very hard to build a five-thousand-dollar church at Lexington, and he is going to succeed. Such a building is very much needed there, and I hope the Parent Board will give him a thousand dollars for that purpose.

I must not close without saying a few words about my very pleasant visit to Bro. "Gilderoy's" work. Bro. "Gilderoy" lives at Black Hawk, eighteen miles from the railroad, and in the Winter time it is a big job to get there. But I do delight in getting a chance to preach now and then in the country, where the people are not preached to death.

Some of our city pastors think that we who do revival work ought to evangelize mostly in these country places. However, they don't seem to have much call in that direction themselves. Many of the pastors on circuits tell me that it is with the greatest difficulty they can get one of our town preachers to assist them in a revival meeting. This ought not to be. Then, too, it would be helpful for our city pastors to get out and preach to the people in the country.

Bro. "Gilderoy" keeps up with all the news of the church, and reads a great deal of good theology, and it is a great treat for one who does not have as much time for such reading himself to spend a few days with such a man. I find him, too, to be a very spiritual man. I rarely ever spend a day with him that I don't get something out of which to make two or three sermons, and go away a better man.

We are now at Alexandria, La., holding a great meeting. It has been a hard fight, but the forces of the devil are giving way, the church has been wonderfully blessed, and many sinners are coming home to God. The whisky interest here is immense. We are satisfied there is a saloon to every twenty men; and then, too, Catholicism and Judaism are strong. Brethren, pray for us. The service last night was one of power. Bro. Jackson, the pastor, is one of our best and truest men, and has done a fine work here. We always have success where the pastor has gotten things ready for us and we have time to do the work.

Praying the blessings of God upon the ADVOCATE and its readers, I am,

Yours fraternally,
W. M. MCINTOSH.

The Divorce Evil.

One of the most scandalous and increasing evils of the present time is the divorce evil. Our court calendars are crowded with divorce cases. Justice Beekman, in Part III. of the Supreme Court, is reported to have remarked recently: "I was simply appalled when I looked at the calendar last week. There were some sixty cases of divorce on it, all defaults. It is impossible for a judge to get evidence of collusion, although I question the witnesses as closely as I can. Most of these people have no regard for the marriage relation. They look on marriage as something temporary to be set aside when they are tired of it." In these sentences we have the secret of the trouble. Many in their conception of the marriage relation exclude all thought of its sacredness, and only contemplate it in the light of a civil contract to be dissolved on almost any pretext. Hence the increase of violated vows, broken hearts and wrecked homes. The evil is not confined to any one class; it is common to all classes, and is coming to be more common at the top than at the bottom of society. The correction of this growing evil should have a conspicuous place among the many reform movements of the day, for in its effects it undermines the sacred institution of the family, and tonches and blights many lives.—Exchange.

OUTLOOK.

Life is too short for any work
That is not high and true,
Too short to slight the broader aim
God meant should come to you.
O hear, rise up into the light
Of grander life and thought,
And find the place and blessedness
Thy loving faith has wrought.

The Dye-Crum Debate

It was our happy privilege to attend the masterly debate held at Hickory Flat, Miss., between Rev. T. W Dye, of Macon station, North Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South, and W. A. Crum, of Campbellite Church.

First question: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, immersing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Crum affirmed, and Dye denied. Strongest evidence that Crum produced in support of his position was that the New Testament, that was prepared by a company of the most rigid immersionists, said "immerse" instead of "baptize." Such a wonderful speech has never been heard as this good old water salvationist made in endeavoring to sustain himself on his substituted word (immerse), which is not in the English at all, immerse being only a word transferred from the Latin.

We think that Bro. Dye made the mode of baptism so plain that every unbiased mind could not be at sea any longer on this subject. All the superstitions that belong to it were made so plain that all could see them, if they were not blinded by prejudice.

Second question: "Infants are proper subjects for baptism." Dye affirmed, and Crum denied.

Bro. Dye offered several good arguments on this subject, one of which was the covenant agreement, after which Bro. Crum arose to make his first speech on this subject, in which Crum said that Dr. Dazier, when in debate with J. R. Graves on this subject, admitted that the covenant argument could not be sustained, and he read from the Graves-Dazier debate in support of what he had said. Now, at the same time that he read the above-mentioned book, he (Crum) had at his hand as his own property, and could and, doubtless, had read from it, the book called "Dazier on Baptism." What Dr. Dazier denied is the false statement of Graves, thus placing himself in the same place that Graves was in. To say the least of it, it is not honesty. But at length Crum went to St. Mark xvi, 16 and said that in the last clause we would get infant damnation instead of infant baptism, as the clause reads, "He that believeth not shall be damned."

When Bro. Dye arose to make his second speech he asked Crum what the verb is in the clause, "He that believeth not shall be damned," and what the tense of that verb is. Crum said that the verb is in the present tense, and that it meant future faith and present damnation.

Crum read from the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, in the form of prayer laid down for us in the baptism of children, the words, "Wash him and sanctify him with water;" but it reads, "Wash him and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost." This, however, is only a small idea of many and erroneous perversions that he (Crum) tried to impress the people with. But Dye was too much for him.

Third question: "Baptism is necessary to the remission of the past sins of a penitent believer."

Crum affirmed, and Dye denied. Bro. Crum began his march from Acts vi, 3-5, to Col. ii, 12, and back to Acts iii, 38. He went from out of this to the other so fast that no one could keep up with him—not any faster than they always got to the water. Crum here gathered a conglomeration of nothing as large as two good horns would permit him to gather. He scattered the Campbellite doctrine most profusedly over the congregation until intelligence hid its face in shame and mourned over its disgustful expounder. At last he went to John iii, 5, and said that here we had to be born of the water, and that the water became the means of our salvation; therefore, we conclude that the water becomes our spiritual mother, as no man can be born without a mother, and water becomes our spiritual mother; therefore, water baptism is necessary to salvation.

Fourth question: "The Holy Ghost comes in direct contact with the human heart in conversion." Dye affirmed, and Crum denied.

In his first speech Bro. Dye said that the best definition of being born of the Spirit was that "ye must be born of water and of the Spirit" (John iii, 5). Crum, in his explanation of this Scripture, said that being born of the Spirit meant to be begotten of the Spirit. He had already said that being born of water meant to be delivered from sin. From these statements Bro. Dye concluded that a Campbellite was begotten of the Spirit in the water, and born of the water. Thus the Campbellite doctrine of water regeneration was explained to our minds; so that we conclude that the Campbellites are not so much to blame after all for loving water, as it is their mother. Children ought to love their mother. This they do, if Crum is correct about his mother.

From these statements the reader will get some idea of what Crum's logical conclusions are. They amount to as much as: No oat has two tails; every oat has one tail more than no oat; therefore, every oat has three tails. You will hereby conclude that this debate was of great magnitude. I wish that all the preachers in the North Mississippi Conference could have heard Bro. Dye's arguments on these subjects.

We would advise all men to not enter a debate with a Campbellite until he has him bound to stick to the subject, for they can dodge worse than anything that we have ever seen in water.

The Pleasures and Palaces of Sin.

Man's natural tendency or desire is to love the world and the things that are in the world. He is constantly building and fixing up for time, when he actually ought to be building and fixing up for eternity. But the world, with its many pleasures, snares and temptations, entices him away into forbidden paths, and into the paths of the fell destroyer. Wrapped up amid enticing, sparkling, worldly pleasures, he drifts on down the stream of time, actually charmed and delighted with a voyage that is leading him to hell; and as he glides on through the sinful pleasures of life, he congratulates himself on being the happy recipient of so many goodly pleasures and amusements. Says he to himself: "There is nothing so grand, so beautiful, so magnificent, as sin and its pleasures. Who can resist them? Who can turn away his eyes from beholding them? Who can resist the halls where pleasures reign supreme, where flashing lights and moving feet bid each eager, anxious guest to, 'On with the dance, let joy be unconfined'? Who can stand upon the great thoroughfares of the mighty cities of the land, and view the vast throngs of pleasure-moving humanity, and not be desirous of moving on with them in pleasure's wreckless train? Truly, there can be but few who are not moved by sights and scenes like these."

And so it is. We have come to look upon human life very much as did the old ancient Roman Epicureans. They taught by both precept and example that pleasure was the chief end of life; that man had no higher duty to perform, and no higher destiny to reach, than to go the giddy rounds of pleasure, and at last to end his days and nights in reveries and dreams. Yes, it's a true we love this world, and there is no getting around the fact. We love its honors; we love its pleasures; we love its emoluments; we love its glories; we even love its sins and its follies. It has fascinating charms for us. We are delighted with it beyond description; we bow down and worship it; we spend days, weeks, months, and even years, in labor and study, in order to get ready to enjoy it. The labor of man in every field of industry exemplifies this fact. The farmer tells its truth as he clears the rubbish, plows his fields, plants his crop, and gathers his harvest. The hum and buzz of commercial life in our great cities give credence to it. The great industries and enterprises of nations tell it in words that can not be denied. It is the spirit that often nerves the arm of the patriot on the field of battle. It is the spirit that often leads the student to burn his midnight lamp. It is the spirit that leads sinful men and women to erect so many gilded palaces of sin and pleasure in our great cities. And, oh, how fascinating and attractive are these gilded palaces of pleasure and sin! The brilliant lights and gorgeous trappings of opera houses and gilded saloons, and other palaces of sin and hell, are attractive and tempting beyond human expression. No pen can describe and no tongue adequately express their alluring charms for the young and thoughtless. Ah, stand on the streets of our great cities in the afternoon, just as darkness begins to fall, and the gas lights are lit and shining brightly, and see how the young and thoughtless crowd into these pandemoniums, or human hells, to gratify their insatiate thirst for worldly pleasures and worldly amusement! It's enough to make a child of God weep to look on scenes like these. It pains him to see the young, the gay, the fair, rushing into these gorgeous city palaces of death and hell. His sorrow becomes greater as he sees the young men, the flowers of the land, the pride and glory of fond mothers and fathers, those whom we are to look to in the future as our lawyers, doctors, school teachers, statesmen and preachers, wallowing in the mire and filth of our great cities, associating and commingling with people who care no more for their soul's salvation and their future good than a rat terrier. With truth has it been said of such people, that their ways are the ways of death, and their steps take hold on hell. They are filthy and abominable beyond human description, and deserve the censure and condemnation of all good men and women everywhere. It is time that the good people of our large towns and cities should arise, and, with one united voice, demand that these bad people, and their attractive, soul-destroying palaces of pleasure and sin, no longer exist in their midst to poison the minds and damn the souls of the rising generation, for there is positively no use for such gilded palaces of sin and pleasure as now exist in all our big towns and cities. They are the agents of hell and damnation, and their only object is to demoralize, degrade and damn the immortal souls of men. Away with them; they are the dens of iniquity, the vestibules of hell, the destroying angels of earth.

Suggestions

When we consider the "rush" of the human family—in everything save religion, the eager and exciting interest that is manifested in all the forward movements of the day, and that the devil is "up to date," keeping pace with the procession, swinging corners with every enterprise, and often marching in advance of the great armies with his delusive and fatal suggestions and commands, and then consider our own puny efforts as "heralds of the Cross," we should blush with shame; for in comparison with the agents in the hands of the god of this world we are drones.

Now to the question, How are we to have a revival in every charge—a revival that will last? And we would suggest that, first, every preacher pray for and obtain a baptism of the Holy Ghost upon his own soul, so that the burden of precious souls will rest so heavily upon him that he will constantly have a burning desire for their salvation. Second, that we preach for one year on Christ and his love for a lost world. My brethren, he is the remedy, and the only remedy, for the ills of the moral world. Let us preach him in his fullness. More of the Blessed Christ and his love, and less of high-sounding theology, presented to the people for the remainder of '96, and our churches will be filled with consecrated men and women, and earnest inquirers after truth. And, third, when we preach, let us expect results. Let every service be as if we were in the midst of a glorious revival. How many of us pray and preach for and expect conversions at every service? I believe we should call for penitents and open the doors of the church at every service in circuits, and at least once a month in stations. A man told me he was converted in his home, rode ten miles on Sunday to join the church, and as the preacher was in the act of dismissing his congregation, he arose and said, "I want to join the church." What courage on the part of this converted soul; but, alas! the lack of interest on the part of the one who had been called to "point sinners to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." A good woman told me she went to church for six months, hoping for an opportunity to unite with the church. Let us expect a revival at every service.

By this means, and by close personal contact with the young people socially, organizing them in Sunday-school, Epworth League and missionary work, the "worldliness in the church" will, to a great extent, be overcome. Our young people must have something to engage their time and attention, and if we fail to interest them in such facilities as the church affords, they will seek employment and amusement elsewhere. We make a great mistake in giving all our attention to old people, visiting the old people, preaching to the old people, and trembling over many of them in whom there is little or no hope, while the precious young people, the hope of the church, are neglected. Let us impress upon their minds that to come into the church is to come into exercise. Have something for each to do, and see that they do it. Too many of them think the benefits of the church, as well as the work of the church, are for the old people. I wish I could place a copy of the ADVOCATE containing "Gilderoy's" article on "The Quittin' Fellow" in the hands of every Methodist in my charge.

Preaching the Gospel.

Preaching is like none other work in our Lord's vineyard. It is a thing separate and apart from every form and phase of activity here, yet so closely connected and indissolubly linked with other work that it is not always seen in its singleness. There are those who sow and those who reap, but the preacher is first, last and always the messenger of the Master, who is Lord of field and harvest. Preaching is not talking, lecturing or reasoning on the gospel, but is the transmission of truth through personality. The messenger is not personally responsible for the gains and primary meaning of the message. His business is to deliver it, and be sure that it is the true message received at the lips of the Lord. The truth is ever an unvarying factor; the faith once delivered to the saints stands secure through the ages. The personality of the different messengers varies, but the truth never. Fire may heat iron, gold or brass; the metals differ, not the fire. Personality should be so surcharged with truth that the man is lost in the message.

Few and simple are the rules for preaching. In this, as in all other things of real worth, it is better to know some few simple principles thoroughly and well, and let the rules take care of themselves. But the simplest things are not always most easily learned, for there are so many other things in the way to hinder learning. An easy, plain style of expression in writing is exceedingly difficult of attainment, because we have so many false models.

Bishop Haygood knew how to preach. I never heard him but once, but that one hearing taught me this. Yet I heard a man say that he was not eloquent. Maybe not; yet a glass of pure, sweet spring water is more to a soul dying of thirst than the majestic surge and roll of the Atlantic.

Again, personality is lost and ruined by attempted imitation. It is a thing so distinct in itself that it can not be reproduced. Style may be imitated, mannerisms reproduced; but personality never. It belongs to every man so surely as the cast of his own face, or the peculiar movement of his walk. These are some of the things that lie on the surface. Of the deep, underlying, spiritual things I may have something to say later.

THE P. AND H. M. S.

BY JULIET HOWE HARMON.

(Read before Bay St. Louis Auxiliary, at its anniversary, Feb. 4)

A rough log-cabin, grim and old,
Stands lonely on the hill-side cold,
Within whose chill embrace
God's herald lives, the preacher true,
Whose noble wife, and children too,
Here find a biding-place.

Long, loud and keen the north wind blows,
And softly fall the Winter snows
Against the shelter poor;
And with the bitter, blinding sleet,
Tapping hard with his cruel feet,
The wolf is at the door!

The babies cry for warmth and bread,
The mother bows her drooping head
In pitiful despair!
While from the father's heart the cry,
"We perish, Lord; help! or we die!"
Goes to God in prayer.

On I pass to the city's slums,
Where ray of sunshine never comes
To light the gloom of sin;
Where people dwell of every clime,
And want and woe and vice and crime
Hold carnival within.

Then I leave the city's masses
To seek the vast mountain classes;
And there I sadly find
Such narrow, hopeless human lives,
Whose ignorance dense mutely cries
For aid to all mankind.

"Work in my vineyard"—Who will come?
The harvest white, so great at home,
A large return will yield.
So long the church has toiled and prayed,
So long she has in vain essayed
To enter every field.

The Father dear, who sees the need,
Bids the WOMEN rise, boldly speed,
Neglected grain to reap!
To build a house for preacher brave,
To open schools, the masses save,
And feed his hungry sheep.

The women true, God bless them all!
Quickly obey the Master's call
To help those in distress.
And thus it is the whole world knows
That noble band who now compose
The P. and H. M. S.

Lo! to-day parsonages stand,
Erected by frail woman's hand,
And sweet prosperity
Reigns within; while in haunts of vice
The precious blood that paid the price
Is offered full and free.

Bibles and schools, God's blessed lights,
Will soon illumine "mountain whites;"
While Cubans on our coast,
And all the aliens gone astray,
Will learn the true and only way
That saves a sinner lost.

And I think at last in heaven
All those who have nobly striven
In this blest society,
When breaks the final earthly link,
Will find across the Jordan's brink
Glad and bright eternity.

For far beyond our mortal view,
Behind the shining arch of blue,
Many fair mansions stand,
Whose treasures rare and riches great
These noble women sweet await,
In God's own Summer-land.

Praying and Paying.

"A hackneyed subject," do you say? Well, granting that it is, do we not need much reminding on both these points? This P. and H. M. S. is built on a foundation of prayer. We are all supposed to be familiar with No. 9 of our By-Laws for auxiliaries:

"All the members are requested to remember the work of the society in prayer at the hour of retiring, and when they shall lie awake at night, and to make a point of visiting and securing the prayers of any Christian invalid in the community who can not get out to church."

We can not afford to forget this or to make a mere formal habit of what should be a spiritual exercise. We have had many evidences that God has heard and answered these nightly prayers, until will never cease to glorify Him that the work is so well established that we can safely—even occasionally—neglect this duty. No, the need is great, and we can not expect God's blessing upon our efforts unless we constantly ask him to direct and bless them.

Next in importance is the duty of prompt paying. Because the sum asked of each member is so small, there is sometimes a temptation to postpone the payment if inconvenient to attend the meetings or to send to the treasurer. "It is so little, it will not matter this time, and I'll pay next quarter for two." But it does "matter," for the sum total is made up of these small amounts, and that is not yet nearly large enough for the demands upon it. Two or three applications have reached the corresponding secretary since our annual meeting in October, and we had already granted a sufficient number to keep us busy for the year. Under these circumstances is there not reason for more praying and more paying?

I think this little reminder is necessary because the report of our Conference treasurer at our October meeting showed that somebody was in fault somewhere. Especially did there seem to have been neglect on the part of some of the auxiliaries who are in the habit of paying stated sums annually. I wish every auxiliary in the society had such a treasurer as we have in Macon. She never permits any failing behind here, but when it is time to collect dues, she writes or telephones to every member who has forgotten to pay and, at the close of every quarter, sends off the entire amount due. Would it not be well for some others to take her as a model?

THE BABY ROLL AGAIN.

I am rejoiced to see that this movement is slowly gaining ground in our Conference Society. In addition to the names already reported, Holly Springs has started a roll with the name of Albert Spicer Cox, and Pleasant Grove with the baby daughter of the preacher, Helen Rosalie Young. Both auxiliaries promise to lengthen the list. It is possible that some other places may have enrolled the babies, but no other names have been reported to this editor.

Dear Sister Morrison:

I saw in the ADVOCATE, some time back, that it was the duty of corresponding secretaries to report the work of their auxiliaries to the editor of our column in the ADVOCATE. That being the fact, how derelict we have been in duty, for I've never read a report from a single auxiliary (that I remember) in Louisiana. I think it a good plan, and I hope all will report after this. It would kindle enthusiasm, and help to awaken interest in missions in many hearts which are now indifferent to the importance of this great work.

Our society is composed of twenty-four members. This includes our honorary members. We have had several to join recently. But we had to strike off some who never pay or attend the meetings. Sad! sad! The plan for raising the contingent fund adopted at our last annual meeting is in favor with our society. I have not heard a dissenting voice. One young lady (and she a Baptist) on joining the society asked the amount of dues. Being told that it was one dollar and fifty cents now, explaining that the thirty cents was for contingent fund, she exclaimed, "Is that all?" This was refreshing and encouraging to those who felt the weight of the additional cents per annum, for I know some Methodists who won't cheerfully pay ten cents per month. I am sure if we could only get them to read our Woman's Missionary Advocate, they could not fail to take an interest in this great work of bringing the world to Christ. We have only eight subscribers to the Woman's Missionary Advocate.

We have collected for all missionary purposes, including one barrel to Bro. Methvin's school in Indian Territory, ninety-six dollars. We hope to do better work for Jesus in this new year. We sorrow over the loss that has come to our work in the death of our beloved foreign secretary; and our heart's deepest sympathy goes out to our dear Miss Lura Haygood, who was called to mourn the death of her brother just on the eve of sailing for her work.

God be with our workers, protect their lives and give them access to the hearts of the heathen. And O! that he would fill the hearts of the people at home with such burning zeal that by their prayers and gifts they may uphold those who have "gone in our stead."

The Christian Character.

That which determines Christian character is not Christian profession nor attainment, but rather the Christ nature and spirit. And these may not be very clearly marked in the life; indeed, they may not be manifest in any special way; and yet these may be true Christian character in its beginnings and its first essentials. A man may say, as he looks on a field, "This is a corn-field," and yet there may not be a spear of corn to be seen. But it is nevertheless a corn-field. The seed is in the ground. It has been planted there. A little waiting is all that is needed in order that the visible evidences may appear. So it is with Christian character. The seed of eternal life, which is the seed of the Christ nature planted in the soul, is planted in the character, and sooner or later will develop into a noble life and manhood. The sprouting out of the evidences of the new heart will soon appear. It will not be long till the fruit of real Christian character will be seen, where the Christ seed has been planted. Let the growing life be cultivated, and it will more and more verify the beauty and force of the words of Christ himself, "By their fruits ye shall know them."—Religious Telescope.

The Fear of God.

As a motive in child-training we make too little in these days of the fear of God. Many people dislike the expression, and insist that we should use only the love of God as an incentive.

If, however, we look at only one thing, namely, the shocking decline in honesty, and the great increase among respectable and educated men of frauds, embezzlements and peculations of one or another sort, we shall need no argument to convince us that something is wrong. We are in want of a return to that sturdy, virile training which insisted on obedience, truth and strict, honest vital principles in education; we want the fear of God as an element in our home and social life. The old ways were in some instances far better than those of to-day.—Exchange.

What is Narrowness?

It is difficult to be intense without narrowness, and to be broad without looseness. But it must be obtained, if possible, for intensity of conviction and breadth of mind are both excellences, while narrowness of view and looseness of grip on truth are both faults. One must hold the faith so firmly that he shall be ready and competent to contend earnestly for it, but he must hold it so intelligently that he shall not overemphasize points of little importance or waste his strength in fighting windmills. He must be able to state clearly his beliefs, and the reasonable grounds for them, yet at the same time must fully recognize that other men under different conditions may be equally acceptable to God although holding with equal firmness very different views.—Zion's Herald.

Joy or delight in what we are doing is not a mere luxury; it is a means, a help for the more perfect doing of our work. Indeed, it may be truly said that no man does any work perfectly who does not enjoy his work. Joy in one's work is the consummate tool without which the work may be done indeed, but without which the work will always be done slowly, clumsily, and without its finest perfectness. Men who do their work without enjoying it are like men carving statues with hatchets. The statue gets carved perhaps, and is a monument forever of the dogged perseverance of the artist; but there is a perpetual waste of toil, and there is no fine result in the end.—Phillips Brooks.

Oh, there are some who want to get away from all their past; who, if they could, would fain begin all over again. . . . But you must learn, you must let God teach you that the only way to get rid of your past is to get a future out of it. God will waste nothing.—Phillips Brooks.

Education is leading human souls to what is best, and making what is best of them. The training which makes men happiest in themselves also makes them most serviceable to others.—Ruskin.

When Death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness we repent of, but our severity.—George Eliot.

Earth has nothing more tender than a woman's heart when it is the abode of piety.—Luther.

They are never alone that are accompanied with noble thoughts.—Sir Philip Sidney.

Some of the devil's best work is done by careless people.—Ram's Horn.

Search others for their virtues, and thyself for thy vices.—Fuller.

Gone Home.

We are passing under the rod. Great is our loss and that of the church. Blessed Lord, "thy will be done."

My brethren of the ministry, as well as others, with tear-dimmed eyes will be pleased to place a flower on the grave of our friend and brother, I. O Lloyd, of Burtonton Church, near Myles, Miss., who was ripe for the garnering, on Feb. 8, 1896. Disease and grief for the son, Dr. Baldwin Lloyd, of the same church, who died Dec. 27, 1895, hastened him home. He too (the son), gentle, meek and mild, won all hearts, and all are pained that life's young morn should end so soon—he of whom the mother said, "He was always beautiful to me." His widow, with two sweet children, mingles tears with ours.

May the sweet fragrance of angelic songs soothe the sick widow, and though the way may sometimes seem dark, the music of the gospel surely leads to the heart's true home, where "some sweet day" the morning light will pierce the gloom, and end the night of weeping, and our dear friend and sister, Emma, will gather her household treasures never more to part.

Will not every friend pray for the family and the community?

Obituaries will be written.

MRS E. D. JONES.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. C. Griffin: "I was appointed to the Clarksburg circuit by the presiding elder, W. W. Simmons, the first of January. The people received me and gave me a very cordial welcome. We have just held our first Quarterly Conference. The presiding elder was at his place and presided with ease. I think that he is the man for the place. He preached two fine sermons to the delight of all that heard him. He received in cash half of the Bishops' assessment for the circuit."

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., Jackson, Miss.: "First quarterly meeting of Camden charge—Rev. R. A. Breland, pastor—was held last Saturday and Sunday. Report as follows: Two flourishing Epworth Leagues; $50 for foreign missions; $25 for domestic missions; $3.50 for Bishops; $4 for repairs on district parsonage; $10 for Sunday-schools, and $163 35 to the support of ministry. A live pastor, full of energy, Bro. Breland is a success. Let it be known that this is the first missionary money reported in this district this year."

Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. C., Wesson, Miss.: "For twenty-two days our church and community were blessed by the ministry of the Rev. C. L. Chilton, of Montgomery, Ala. We did not have the great crowds we sometimes have, and there was little or no shouting; but a profounder impression for good was never made on our church members. Clearer, stronger, or more spiritual preaching I have never heard. There was a number of conversions and reclamations, and many were converted in the faith, and now long to be filled with all the fullness of God. So far there has been ten accessions to our church, with three applications pending. A protracted meeting in mid-Winter was a new thing in Wesson."

Rev. Jno. B. Kent, P. C., Covington, La.: "Immediately upon receiving my appointment at our last Conference, I sent for Mrs. Kent, who was visiting in Calcasieu, while I came on to my new field, thinking I would get an early start this year. But instead of receiving my family, I received a message stating, 'All sick.' Then followed a hastened journey across the State, weary watching of loved ones, and a month's absence from my work. Bad weather and swollen streams again delayed them after they were able to come. But at last we are at home. The work moves off slowly. However, there are some encouraging signs, especially in the fact that congregations are increasing. Whisky is the curse of this country."

Rev. G. S. Morehead, Tatum circuit: "I came here about Feb. 15. I was appointed to supply this work by the Rev. H. C. Morehead, presiding elder of the Grenada district. We have a good people here. They received me very kindly when I came on the work. Open doors were extended to me everywhere. You know how it makes a young preacher feel when his brethren receive him. I am going to get my people to take our ADVOCATE. By the grace of God, I want to do all in my power to get my people to take your paper and the Nashville Advocate. Oh! if our churches could see the importance of our literature as they should see, our works would be in better shape for the cause of Christ. I am praying for a great revival of religion this year everywhere. Brethren of our church, let us, as preachers of the gospel, be earnestly engaged in prayer this year. Thank God for a religion that makes my soul so happy in a Savior's love. I am going right into the work in getting up my missionary money. The good people, I believe, will do their part in aiding me in this grand work. Doctor, come out to see us this Summer, and be with us. Will be glad to have you with us. I had the pleasure of seeing several of our preachers at the college the other day at Grenada. Bro. Malone and Sister Malone were so kind to us. God bless them in their work! I will close. Pray for me, dear brethren, that I may be faithful until death."

Rev. Jno. R. Countiss, Lehrton, Miss.: "I have started well into my second year's work on Lehrton circuit. The first Quarterly Conference was held on the twenty-second ultimo. It was the most spiritual and the best-attended Conference we have yet had. That is encouraging. Our presiding elder, Bro. J. A. Randolph, brings a blessing with him, and our people always rejoice to have him with them. Lehrton has shared in the blessing of boxes, and we think ours up to the standard both in size and contents. Our people are more in sympathy with the pastor than heretofore, and manifest a readiness for religious work that is gratifying. Several members have been received since Conference. God's blessing on the ADVOCATE."

INDIAN MISSION SCHOOL.

For the benefit of those who have contributed to the Indian Mission, and others, I would like to say a few words, to let them know that their good work has not come to naught.

I have been teaching the Indians six weeks. I have fifteen on roll, eight of which are members of our church. I have taught several white schools. Never have I taught a school that I enjoyed as much as I have this one. It does my heart good to instruct this people. They seem to realize the importance of improving every moment of their time while in school. I open my school by giving some instruction on some passage or chapter of the Bible, singing and prayer, closing with the Lord's Prayer in concert. We spend one hour, sometimes two, in studying the Bible. All know the Lord's Prayer and, with the exception of two or three, the Ten Commandments. They enjoy studying the Bible and singing so much. I have found less trouble in managing the Indians than white children. They are very obedient. The greatest trouble in the mission work is the influence of some white people. They are very easily influenced for good or evil. Some one is always standing ready to lead them astray. Pray for us and this people, that we may instruct them in the way they should go, and be instrumental in the saving of many souls.

MINNIE E. TOLES

Rev. R. H. Barr, P. C., Vicksville, Miss.: "I left my home in Trenton, Miss., where I had served my people for two years as a pastor, and during that time enjoyed many expressions of kindness, for my new appointment, Vicksville, in the Meridian district. It was a sad time indeed. Friends had gathered at the parsonage to give us a farewell handshake. At 10 A. M. we started for Morton, on the V. and M. R. R. At 11 P. M. we boarded the east-bound mail train for Meridian, and reached there at 1:30 A. M., safely, Dec. 24. We met conveyance out to the parsonage, nine miles from town. The next day being Christmas, we were invited out to the home of D. S. Harmon, where we met and enjoyed a royal reception; Bro. Bell and family, my predecessor, with many others. At 12.30 we were invited into the dining-room, where we found a table spread with good things. To say that we rendered faithful service would be needless just here. D. S. Harmon and his genial wife know how to make a preacher and his family feel comfortable. I have made two rounds on my work, with some degree of encouragement. The finance is coming in very slowly, but I believe that the good people of this charge will give me a good support. The parsonage is worth $100 more now than it was when I came here. Needed improvements have been made, and we have a beautiful home that would do honor to any town. Pray for us."

Rev. K. M. Harrison, Batesville, Miss.: "I am sorry to say that I have done little pastoral work since Conference, owing to the protracted illness of my dear wife, who has not left her room for sixteen weeks, and all this time has suffered seriously with a stubborn case of sciatica, or nervous rheumatism. This has made it my duty to stay much of my time with her, but we want to say that our affections have been very much mitigated by the kindness and attentions of God's good people, and especially that of our Christian physician. While we have had to neglect some outside interest, yet while detained with wife we have done some good and profitable studying and sermon making, and have filled all our appointments and never preached with more liberty and zeal. We have arranged for a series of meetings to be conducted by our evangelist, W. M. McIntosh. This reminds me of the immense amount of conglomerated stuff that we have had to swallow or spit out about the evangelist. Well, every man to his notion, as the old woman said when she kissed her cow; but, as for myself, I think there is a place for the evangelist. 'One soweth and another reapeth'—or if you will allow it, 'One layeth and another hatcheth.' My dear old and glorified mother used to be a great hand to raise chickens, and she used to say, when talking about the improved breed, that some of them were good setters, but for layers give me the old-fashioned 'dominicker.' Just so with a preacher to plant the incorruptible seed of the Word of God in the soul, or to produce the life-giving germ, give me the old-fashioned 'dominicker' gospel preacher; but to hatch out the living chickens the evangelist seems to succeed best. If there has been no sowing of the true gospel seed, neither one nor the other will succeed much in hatching. God bless the pastor, the evangelist, the Bishop, the presiding elder, the editor, the college professor and the good woman. Let each one in his proper place work for the common salvation. Now, let's let the evangelist and the women and the 120 Section and the Bishop's ruling rest a while and give us something good to eat. Our souls are hungry."

FIELD NOTES.

At our Conference in Yazoo City, last December, I was read out to Percy's Creek, and came down to the parsonage the twenty-fourth of December. The people had it in mind to give us a reception, etc., but we came in a day or two before they expected us; so we frustrated their plans. They have, however, given us many tokens of kindly appreciation. Percy Creek has been a station for some twelve or fourteen years, and, although the membership is not large, they have supported their pastors right royally, and one of their former pastors said to me at Conference: 'A kinder, more appreciative people you never saw.' And the truth of his statement is becoming more and more apparent.

Well, last Saturday and Sunday was the occasion of our first Quarterly Conference, and a good occasion it was—at least, to some of us. Our presiding elder, Bro. L. S. Jones, was with us in the spirit of the Master; and, Mr. Editor, let me whisper in your ear, that we have one of the very best presiding elders in the Conference. He preached us three very excellent sermons; not such sermons as we have heard at times and places not mentioned, but just such sermons as the church and the world need; sermons of which Christ was the great central thought, and in the delivery of which to us present Christ that he would be accepted and loved, was the greatest desire of the preacher. Oh, for more of such preaching!

We feel that we were much benefited by our Quarterly Conference occasion, and only regret that more of our people did not turn out, and get a blessing and an inspiration.

We are praying, working and hoping for a revival. May God continue to bless you and the ADVOCATE! Pray for us.

Here's a Chance To Make Money

I have worked hard all my life and never had a streak of good luck till the past year, and I think my experience may be beneficial to many others. I have cleared more than $20 a day for over a year selling Climax Dish Washers, and I think any man or woman can do as well as I have, if they only WILL as I had no experience. It don't take long to get rich clearing $20 a day. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and you can sell them at home; no canvassing. That is why a lady can do as well as a man. I put a notice in the papers and the people send after the Washers. The Climax is far superior to any other Dish Washer. Everybody knows of the Climax now. For particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will start you in business, if you will only push. A READER.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by Mrs. M. E. O'Fallon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

THE HOLMAN BIBLE IN THREE STYLES

$1.25, $1.75 AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to March, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1 25. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

THE ELECTROPOISE WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

A MISSISSIPPI MAN WHO HAS TRIED IT IN EXTRAORDINARY CASES WITH REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

I have been using the Electropoise for more than four years, and it has been a success in all the ills that I have tested it on, especially in la grippe, colds, typhoid malaria, etc. I might mention some extraordinary cases that have come under my observation, such as rheumatism, paralysis, blood poison, etc. I am satisfied that it will do all that is claimed for it.

My wife and I, who are both past 72, find great comfort from the Electropoise for the ills of old age.

You may use this letter if you see fit for the benefit of suffering humanity. Yours truly,

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL PARTIALLY PARALYZED RESTORED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

Yours truly,

Miss Willard in New Orleans.

An immense audience greeted Miss Willard at Coliseum Place Baptist Church last Sabbath afternoon. If there were those present who expected to hear a speech in advocacy of woman suffrage, or a harangue on some phase of partisan politics, they were disappointed. Her discourse was a most admirable one, thoroughly in keeping with the sacredness of the day and the place. It was a strong, earnest, pathetic plea for total abstinence, personal purity, better laws and a more rigid enforcement of the laws. She fully sustained her reputation as one of the greatest orators of the nineteenth century.

Those who have been accustomed to regard a coarse, repulsive mannishness as a necessary accompaniment of feminine oratory have only to hear Miss Willard once in order to have all their ideas on the subject revolutionized. A more perfect specimen of womanliness can not be found. Her voice is sweet and womanly, and yet has sufficient volume to be heard with the utmost distinctness by a large audience. Her diction is absolutely marvelous. She seems to have at her command all the rich resources of the English tongue. She does not belong to the "write-out-and-commit-to-memory" school of oratory. She simply talks, using the words which come to her at the moment; but such talk who ever heard before? For propriety and elegance of diction she has no superior and scarcely an equal. Her style of speaking is simple and unaffected. She stands in one place with no attitudinizing and with almost no gesticulation. Although at the head of the great temperance reform movement of the century, she has no words of invective against those who are engaged in the liquor traffic. Kindliness beams from her face and breathes through her every utterance. She carries a key with which she can unlock the fountain where tears are kept. At times her pathos is almost irresistible.

Her visit to New Orleans will doubtless prove a benediction. At the close of her address a large number of women crowded around the pulpit and put on the white ribbon, while many others, we are sure, went away purposing in their hearts not again to defile themselves with that which intoxicates.

Some Forms of American Idolatry.

It is popularly supposed that none but the heathen worship idols; yet countless multitudes in civilized lands are guilty of just such vanity. Idolatry in its grosser forms, it is true, is confined to the Chinese, Hindoos, and other unevangelized nations. But in America, too, the home of science, culture and art, idol worship of a most corrupting and baneful type prevails to an alarming extent. Material shrines dedicated to repulsive images we see not; but, by the aid of reason's eye, many a false god do we discover, whose votaries are numbered by the thousand.

First, we note the god of public opinion, whose dictates few dare to disobey. Many are more in fear of this false god than of a roaring lion let loose. When righteous crusades are being waged against the saloon, against gambling, social impurity and other monster iniquities, churchmen not infrequently consult this supposed oracle, and, receiving unfavorable answer, ignominiously lay down their arms. How many noble deeds and beneficent reforms have been repressed by his malignant influence! Not a few Christians are brave and faithful until this braggart god appears, and then they quickly show the white feather. If public opinion says: "The church is wrong in condemning card-playing, dancing, theatre-going, wine-drinking, and such like, and you are silly to forego such pleasures for her sake," at once Mr. Faint-heart, Mr. Echo, and Mrs. Worldly think the final word has been said. Some churchmen would about as soon cut off their right arms as to engage in any form of Christian work sneered at by polite society. When in Rome, to do as Rome does, is a swift and sure way to lose one's religion as well as one's individuality. Rowing against the current is never easy, but when the rapids are below, it is the only safe course.

A few people mistake peculiarity for piety, and crankiness for unswerving rectitude; but the truly pious do not therefore sneer at duty. Like David Crockett, having first made sure that we are right, we should then "go ahead," despite public criticism and opposition.

Next we see the goddess of pleasure surrounded by adoring multitudes. To each she whispers: "Have a good time while you can. Life is short and full of trouble. Taste all the sweets within reach." Thus she deludes her worshipers, inducing them to be oblivious of the hereafter, and of the spirit's claims and destiny. Present good is all she lets them see and care for. The siren song of the pleasure goddess to-day entices many a fair maiden and brave youth from the path of Christian duty. When once the vortex of fashionable society closes in upon a church member, the power of godliness, in most cases, soon departs, and rarely is there rescue from its fatal embrace. Confirmed pleasure-seekers, the so-called butterflies of society, are, as a rule, about the hardest of all hearers to receive enduring religious impressions.

The god of appetite and passion also has a large, though not altogether a respectable following. In every community, if actions are any criterion, there are scores of persons who are far more concerned about what they shall eat, drink and wear than about their soul's eternal destiny. Parents, esteemed wise in other matters, imagine that in providing wholesome food, good clothing, and schooling for their children their whole duty is discharged. What folly to esteem the casket more highly than the precious jewel!

One of the commonest excuses given for yielding to sinful passions and desires is that of inability to resist. Hardly one man in a thousand, it is true, has strength of will enough to completely master the physical man without divine assistance. But the notion that the passions can not be controlled is a suggestion of the devil. With God all things are possible. To assert it is impossible to overcome any evil habit or desire, even the worst, whether it be profanity, the love of drink, or lewdness, is equivalent to contradicting Jehovah, whose grace is sufficient for all our need. Sad to relate, men of gifted intellect and high position are not all guiltless of worshiping at the shrines of the god of lust.

With no little pride does the fashion goddess reflect upon the well-nigh universal adoration paid to her. Where civilization goes, there goes she, and shackles men and women, though she still lets them enjoy a fancied liberty. If one who is not dressed "up to date" intrudes where her devotees are, whether at church, in the school-room, in the store, or in public hall, sneers and cruel ridicule are almost sure to greet his appearance. Some pay such devoted tribute to this vain goddess that little time or money have they for God's holy church, for charity, or even for secular self-improvement. A consuming desire to shine in rich apparel is the besetting sin of thousands. The horrors of debt even are not enough to deter some from gratifying this silly ambition. What a shame that this capricious goddess should be allowed to keep such large numbers of humanity from attending divine service on account of their inability to comply with her whims!

Of less ethereal form than the goddess just described, the money god has no less extensive sway. Regarding wealth as the chief good, the majority of mankind struggle madly for it. Pity 'tis that Christians do not struggle as earnestly for the heavenly riches. To gratify the insatiable thirst for gold, many men sacrifice honesty, health, home-life, friendships, and every spiritual interest. Exceptionally few are the men of wealth not overcome by the deceitfulness of riches. Money-getting, though not an evil in itself, if allowed to become the master passion, is idolatry of the most pronounced and debasing type. Our country to-day is cursed with so-called Christian capitalists who, in their lust to become richer, pay their employees as little as possible, speculate upon food products, and thus defraud the helpless poor. Oh, economy, how many extortions are practiced in thy name! To drive sharp bargains may be business-like; but to be just is God-like. Shall we say it? Women of fair name are some of them guilty of practicing a sinful economy upon their dressmakers, house-servants, and laundresses, whose crying necessities are taken advantage of. Disgusting indeed to all lovers of true manhood is the fawning worship paid by certain classes to rich nabobs whose sole claim to notice and respectability is the possession of wealth.

Let us beware lest these false gods entice us to fall down and worship them. It is written, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." To desire and seek any earthly thing more than God is to be guilty of the grievous sin of idolatry.

"Do not I love thee, O my Lord?
Behold my heart, and see;
And turn each cursed idol out,
That dares to rival thee."

A New Declaration of Independence.

Commander Ballington Booth and his wife, Maud B. Booth, have announced through the press that they propose to place themselves at the head of an American Salvation Army. They will not begin their operations, however, at once, but for prudential reasons will wait for a time. Their manifesto contains no invective against the parent organization from which they have seceded. On the contrary, they express the hope that success may continue to crown its labors here as well as elsewhere. This rupture we do not regard as a calamity. We rather look upon it as a thing which was bound to come sooner or later. What an absurdity it would be for some central authority in England, whether dominated by one personality or many, to attempt to direct the affairs of American Methodism! The same principle applies in this case. Both organizations will, doubtless, remain in this country for some time to come; but, if the American Army manages its affairs with discretion, we believe that the day is not far distant when it will completely overshadow the parent organization.

Spain and Uncle Sam.

The action of the United States Senate in recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans has excited great indignation in Spain. On last Sunday the American Consulate at Barcelona was attacked by a mob, who stoned the building and gave vent to their wrath in much vociferation. Fortunately, however, no lives were lost. This was an act of the populace and not of the government. The government is doing what it can to keep the populace within the bonds of decorum. The action of the United States Senate in this case is only a repetition of its own former history. Time and again it has recognized the belligerency of the provinces of Spain when they had demonstrated their worthiness of such recognition.

The Senate, however, went a little farther than usual, when it added to this recognition of belligerency a recommendation that the President of the United States urge the Spanish government to recognize the independence of Cuba. We are sure it would be wise for Spain to do this; but, perhaps, we had better let her see the inevitable with her own eyes.

Since the above was put in type the House has adopted resolutions similar to those of the Senate.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

We note with pleasure the forward movement chronicled in our last issue on the part of the Board of Trustees of Grenada Collegiate Institute. That institution has a building admirably adapted to college purposes, but its dimensions are insufficient to meet the demands of its constantly increasing patronage. The Board has wisely resolved to erect additional buildings. The proposed endowment is also timely. While we yield to none in our estimate of the importance of increased facilities for the education of boys, we realize also that the necessity is upon us, as a church, to make something like a corresponding provision for the education of our girls.

We hope this forward movement on the part of the wide-awake Board of Grenada Collegiate Institute will meet with a hearty response.

"Ordained."

Henry C. Bowen, editor of the New York Independent, who died a few days since, was never a minister; but he was a praying, working Christian. In its notice of his death contained in its last week's issue, the Independent relates the following episode of his early manhood:

On coming to New York Mr. Bowen immediately entered into active religious work. He was a member of Dr. Samuel H. Cox's church in Brooklyn, and it was there in the days of his clerkship that he was called to task by the elders for leading a neighborhood prayer meeting without permission, and the elders sent a committee to see what he was doing. He loved to tell that they finally granted their consent to his continuing the work and that the old missionary, Dr. Thurston, from the Sandwich Islands, on hearing from him the objection made that he had never been ordained as an elder, put his hand on the young man's head, saying: "I, hereby, ordain you to go and do all the good you can." He was one of the founders of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, and took an active part in organizing Plymouth Church.

Why He Fails.

A young preacher may have the talent of a Marvin or a Bascomb, but if the church does not give him means to buy books, or even to have a private room for study, and he is compelled to serve as nurse and cook, he will probably be soon counted a failure as a preacher.—Arkansas Methodist.

The above from the Arkansas Methodist should be carefully perused by legions of Methodists. They clamor for an educated preacher and for strong, well-prepared, up-to-date sermons, and yet the salary and surroundings of their preacher are such that careful study is almost an impossibility. May the Lord help those who are hit by this to make a personal application of it, and to "bring forth fruit meet for repentance!"

Twaddle.

A father will not allow a child to say "my disobedience is nothing, because I never promised to obey." Yet men think to say, "My Sabbath-breaking, my profanity, my worldliness are nothing, because I am not a member of the church and I never promised to obey God."—Arkansas Methodist.

The editor of the Arkansas Methodist has certainly been a pastor and been compelled to listen to the senseless twaddle that is inflicted upon those who try to get men to "quit their meanness" and give their hearts and lives to God.

Bros. Ellis and Sibley have received some help from friends and brethren, but the amount is utterly insignificant in comparison with their losses. Contributions for these brethren are still in order.

It is generally conceded that the liquor traffic is the leverage of all other infamies, the nursing-place of crime, the chief source of political emolument, and the willing backer of the unscrupulous men who turn legislation into a farce, and police regulations into systematic collusion with vice.—Chautauquan.

We are glad to hear that the Athens Female College, said to be the second oldest chartered college for young women in the world, is, under the presidency of Dr. Z. A. The prospect of the college is finer than it has been for twenty years.

It is not generally known that the Canadian Pacific railway for years past has refused to sell its lands immediately joining its stations except upon conditions which preclude the sale of liquors thereon. At last Dr. Arthur T. Pierson has become a Baptist. He has been immersed in Spurgeon's Tabernacle by the younger Spurgeon. It will be remembered that he preached for some months in the Tabernacle after Mr. Spurgeon's death, and there was something of a party in the church which then wished him to be chosen pastor; but Mr. Spurgeon's son was called home from Australia to take the place.

We receive all the papers published in Southern Methodism, and, so far as our observation goes, there is only one of the whole lot that publishes programmes of District Conferences, Preachers' Associations, District Conferences of the W. F. M. Society and the P. and H. M. Society. That one is the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Ought not the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE to change its programme? Would it not be better for the getter up of a programme to invest thirty or forty cents in postage stamps rather than to take up space in the Conference organ with matter which—to put it mildly—is not of general interest?

"There are one hundred and fifty members in my church, and but one in the whole lot takes a Baptist newspaper," says a brother. They read nothing about Baptist work, and, of course, they know little or nothing of it. They have the annual revival and raise a shout, and there is nothing more of special interest to say about their work until the next annual revival, which always takes place in August. All the use they have for a Baptist paper is to tell how many were taken in at the annual revival and to publish a notice of their death when they die, and they wish both of these announcements to be made without cost to themselves.—Religious Herald.

Dr. T. S. West.

Dr. T. S. West, agent for Millsaps College, was a welcome visitor to this place last Sunday. The Doctor is as genial as a ray of sunshine, and has ready access to the hearts of all who know him. In the morning he preached a able discourse from II. Kings 16, in which he did not fail to emphasize the necessity of education, at the same time enlarging upon the superior advantages offered by Millsaps College. Twelve thousand dollars is needed with which to build Science Hall. If the two Conferences pay six thousand, Major Millsaps will pay the remainder. Our people should respond heartily to this magnanimous proposition; and if every other place will contribute as liberally as Columbia has done, the building will be ready, doubtless, in time for the opening of the next session. Notwithstanding the warning that a collection would be raised, a large audience assembled at night to hear his lecture on "The Weakness of the Human Judgment." The lecture was characteristic of the speaker—full of humor, sparkling with the thoughts, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The only criticism that I heard was that there should have been more of

The Officially Authorized Relief.

The latest dispatch from Constantinople bring us the intelligence: "Miss Barton has established headquarters and is making progress. Constantinople, Dec. 19.—Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross Society, whose mission having been presented to the Turkish ministers interested in the purposes of her mission here, began the making preparations necessary to start for Anatolia to supervise the work of distributing the relief to the destitute Armenians. She has established her headquarters in Pera quarter, and, with the help of her assistants, is making rapid progress with the work of organization."

The National Armenian Relief Committee issues an appeal which we present to your readers, hoping it will call for a prompt response. Within forty-eight hours from the time your gift reaches us the money can be laid down in Constantinople. J. B. O'Bryan, No. 1 Public Square, Nashville, Tenn., the treasurer of our relief fund, is receiving amounts daily from all parts of the South. North Mississippi Conference Notes

Rev. Joseph Wells, a veteran local preacher, died at his home, near Booneville, recently. He was eighty-one years old, and had been useful in his sphere and generation.

Steps have been taken toward the building of a $4,000 brick church in Booneville. Bro. Sage is the pastor to carry such an enterprise to consummation. He has made special reputation in this line of work. He and his noble wife have the sympathies of their many friends in her recent affliction, which we hope will not be of long duration.

Four hundred dollars worth of repairs are being put on the parsonage in Starkville. Presiding Elders Wier, Burroughs and Tucker are raising funds for furnishing and improving their parsonages, while Bros. Stone and Mitchell are providing for liquidating the debts on theirs. Bro. Randolph writes that the building of twelve churches and eight parsonages is projected in the Greenville district this year.

Work is progressing on the parsonage and church buildings for Main Street charge, Water Valley, under the leadership of the indefatigable pastor, Rev. T. B. Clifford.

Kosciusko station is advancing on all lines. Preaching and prayer meetings are largely attended. The Sunday-school and Epworth League are each doing well in their sphere. Dancing and worldliness are being dealt with firmly and promptly, with good results. The indebtedness on the parsonage will soon be paid. Electric lights are being put in the church. The pastor, Rev. J. C. Park, is in good favor with all the people, and is being well cared for. His salary has been fixed at $700, and is almost paid up to date.

The churches of the various denominations in Starkville have projected Bible colportage work for Oktibbeha county. Books have been procured from the American Bible Society, and a colporter employed to canvass the county, in order to supply all the people with the Holy Scriptures by sale or gift. Bro. Thomas, pastor of our church, is the leader in this worthy movement. Who will be the next to inaugurate a similar work that is so much needed in many parts of our country?

Time and space will not allow of all that might be noted of the many preachers on new charges who are proving to be "the right men in the right place," and those on old charges who are maintaining their credit as faithful laborers, and the much good work that is being done and planned. Suffice it to say that this writer has never known such a universal spirit of cheerfulness and zeal in the preachers, and of responsiveness and co-operation on the part of the people in every good work for the church and humanity. The outlook for great results this year is truly propitious, and will surely be realized if all are faithful in prayer and true to duty. G. W. BACHMAN.

A Correction.

That aged lady and good friend of mine, Mrs. L Crary Sadler, is under a misapprehension in supposing, as she states in the last ADVOCATE, that it was "by order of Dr. J. T. Sawyer, P. E.," that Rev. W. A. Clarke removed from the parsonage at Tallahoek Camp Ground to Pearl River. As presiding elder I have no right to dictate where a brother shall live. The move of Bro. Clarke was entirely his own. JOHN T. SAWYER.

A Response.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me space in your columns to express my heartfelt thanks and appreciation of the tender letters of sympathy and Christian counsel that have come to me in the past sad month. They have been far too numerous for me to attempt a reply to each; so I desire to take this means of saying to one and all, that their loving words and kind appreciation of the character and work of my ascended husband, their sympathy and prayers for me and my children, have been a source of comfort and strength to me in this, the darkest hour of my life.

My brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, the members of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, the Auxiliaries of the North Mississippi W. F. M. S., my fellow-workers in the missionary cause individually, the members of my husband's charges—Pleasant Grove, Greenwood, Sardis, Hernando and Coldwater—and personal friends everywhere have laid upon me a debt of gratitude and obligation that I shall never be able to repay. I desire here to testify to the faithfulness of my heavenly Father in this time of severe affliction. Though the waves have been high and the furnace has been hot, his presence and his voice have been ever near, and his grace sufficient for this time of sore need. Although no longer directly connected with the North Mississippi Conference, I hope in my new sphere of labor, as teacher in Grenada Female College, to render efficient service in my Master's cause. Not only assisting in building up the intellectual status of the daughters of our Conference, but also striving so to strengthen and develop their spiritual lives, as to send them forth from our care "King's daughters" indeed, "all-glorious within."

Again returning thanks to all who have felt and prayed for me and mine, I am, Your sister in Christ,

MARY T. HARGROVE.

Notice.

My son, T. B. Newsom, has strangely disappeared. He was born March 10, 1857. In 1886 he went to Arkansas, making his home in Little River county. He has been missing since March, 1895. He had a strange habit of leaving his friends unceremoniously without leave-taking, with no intimation of when or where he was going. He ceased to write me. I accounted for this upon one of his whims, until my letters to him were returned to me uncalled for. He had no enemies, and was true to his engagements. He had a social engagement for Sunday night, and a business contract for Monday morning. On Friday before he was seen on his way, as he said, to collect some money due him; nothing definite has been seen or heard of him since by his friends. It is supposed he might have been murdered for a small sum of money on his person. He had stated to some one that he wanted this money with which to visit his father. This statement threw his friends in Arkansas off until the long silence and delay, with the running down of his business and sale of his place for tax, aroused the interest of his friends to start inquiring, with the results as above stated. Our Machine Offer.

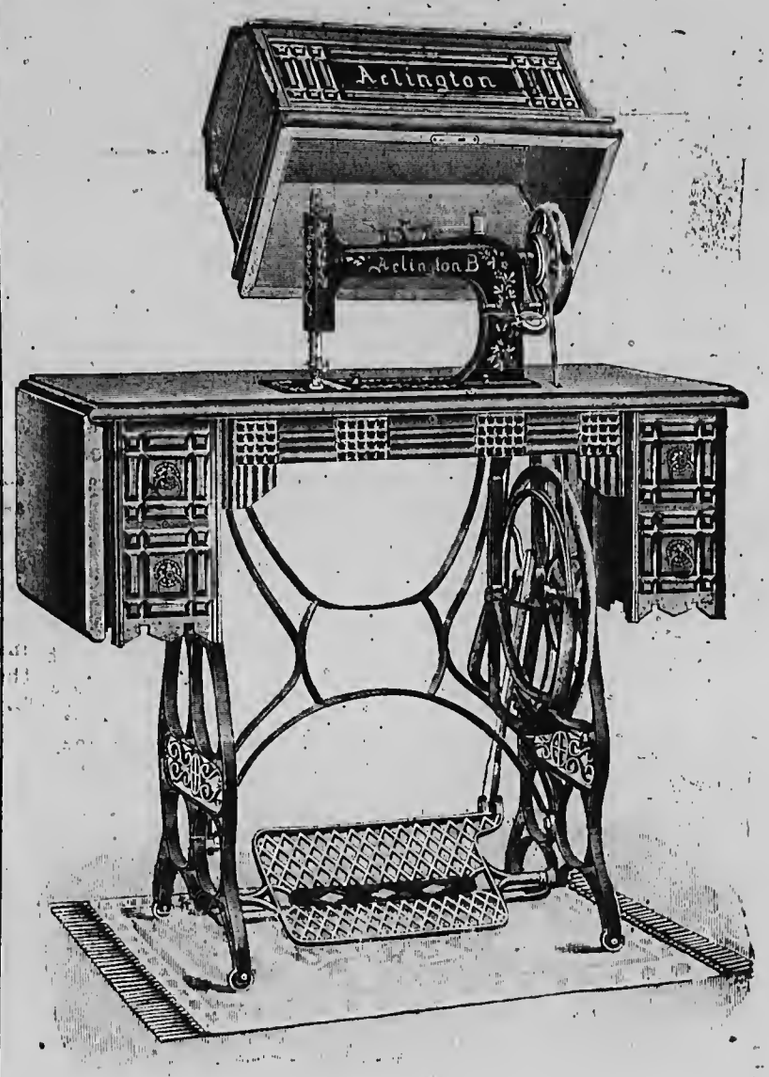
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

ONE LITTLE WORD.

One little word may pierce the heart
With sorrow keener than a knife,
And best of friends may quickly part
With feelings of such bitter strife.

One little word may kindness show,
When all the world seems dark and drear;
When tears of deepest anguish flow,
One little word may often cheer.

One little word may help so much
The weary with a heavy load;
A pleasant smile, a gentle touch,
Smooth places in the roughest road.

One little word may tempests calm,
When raging fierce within the breast;
A kindly word may fall like balm
And angry feelings soothe to rest.

One little word may be too late
Before fond hopes are hurled low,
And often it may seal the fate
Of many lives for weal or woe.

Origin of Disease.

BY FREDERIC M. HEATH.

The germ theory of disease has doubtless some foundation, but the facts of every day prove it to be mainly false. How often do nurses and friends bend for days over the victims of typhoid or diphtheria, yet have no illness. Even when cholera is in the air, or yellow fever, it is seldom that any large percentage are afflicted—the great mass escape. And we all know countless cases where people live with consumptives, sometimes for years; eat with them, sleep with them; and inhale myriads of bacilli; yet suffer no harm.

The origin of disease lies deeper than the presence of poison germs. None of the germ theories will explain why man is the most unhealthy of animals; while he alone, of all God's creatures, fails to live out half his days. It is true that no one cause accounts for it all—there are doubtless many. But the writer believes that there is one great underlying reason, one almost universal condition, that is the great first cause of nearly all diseases.

This great first cause is the accumulation of refuse material in the body. Most of us eat and drink countless useless and hurtful things, we breathe impurities in the air, till our cleansing organs are overtaxed, and our internal machinery clogged and corroded. A stove that is fed with slaty coal will not burn well, and if ashes collect on the grate, and soot in the pipe, the fire may go out. Most human bodies are like ill-kept houses, with mould in the corners, and filth in the carpets, and rotting things in the cellar. And when the germs of consumption or diphtheria enter in, they find congenial soil in which to grow and multiply. No fact is surer than that microbes and vermin feed on refuse; a sound and cleanly human body will not breed them. On the contrary, pure blood and the pure digestive juices at once destroy all kinds of germs. Even that common disease known as a cold, does not come so much from exposure to a draft as from a foul state of the blood. Everyone at times has been chilled through without "taking cold," and again has suffered from a violent one without any known exposure. Dr. Page, of Boston, made many severe tests of this, such as sitting half naked at night with his feet in ice water and a chilly wind blowing on his back, yet without the slightest cold. He had first purified his blood by very moderate eating of pure food, and by a large amount of out-door exercise. Afterward he easily brought on colds by gross eating and drinking, and in-door life.

Let us inquire what are the habits that clog the purifying organs, and tend to fill the body with refuse.

We have said that the system can use only three things; food, air, and water, and that all else taken into it is useless or hurtful. The lower animals take only these, and live in health; but men drink and devour countless other things, and suffer accordingly.

1. The Use of Artificial Food.—Healthful food contains the sixteen elements needed to repair the body and to furnish it with fuel. Besides a large amount of carbon to burn, there must be silicon for the teeth, calcium and phosphorus for the bones, and nitrogen for the muscles. There must be sulphur, and iron, and sodium; in all, sixteen different elements in the food, or some portion of the body will be starved. Fortunately the Creator has given us an endless variety of tempting fruits and berries and melons; great numbers of excellent vegetables; the useful family of cereals, wheat and corn and oats; with peas and beans and nuts. Then there are eggs, and milk, and the flesh of certain fish and birds and animals—truly a vast variety of healthful foods; and all of them contain the sixteen elements absolutely needed to support life.

Yet, sit down at an average table, and see how little is eaten of these genuine foods, and how much of other things that were not made by the Creator, and do not contain the elements needed by the body. Often much of the meal consists of butter and sugar, and starch, and grease and gravy in various forms—articles lacking nearly all the elements, and not worth the name of food. Being composed mainly of carbon, they clog the cleansing organs with that substance, and leave many parts of the body without nourishment. If this excess of carbon is digested, it makes one gross and fat; if not, it ferments and brings dyspepsia, and kidney and liver ailments. No words can denounce too strongly the candy habit, that makes children sickly, and is often the first cause of their untimely death.

2. The Use of Poison Condiments.—Pepper, mustard, curry powder, and like fiery substances, are not food, but irritant poisons. Things that will blister the tough outer skin, are surely hurtful to the delicate internal organs. It may be said that we take very little of them, yet the amount is large consumed in a year. They rank not only among the causes of impurity, but of neuralgia and congestion.

Vinegar is a vile fluid, swarming with germs: and even salt should be used in moderation.

The taste for condiments is a false one, and he who flings them away, and trusts to the fine flavors of nature, will soon come strongly to dislike them.

3. The Use of Stimulants.—There are certain mild poisons that do not cause death, but simply excite and rouse the system to expel them. They are like whips to jaded horses. Alcohol in all its forms, and tea, and coffee, and tobacco, are such poisons; and one has only to read the figures of their cost and use to see that they are gigantic sources of human impurity. It is almost rare to find a man whose breath is not vile with beer or whisky, or else his body reeking with the stench of nicotine. It is rather rare to find a woman whose complexion is not muddy with tea or coffee, and her nervous system broken down.

Stimulants are perhaps our most tempting, but deadliest foes. It is so easy, when we are tired or low in spirits, to swallow ruby wine, or puff a fine cigar, and be roused to life and cheerfulness again! The habit is well nigh resistless. Yet stimulants are only whips, and when their spasm of excitement is gone, the victim falls back lower than before, and is tempted to take more stimulant and lash himself again to life.

He who would have pure blood and cheerful health must shun all stimulants save air and exercise; and if his other habits are correct, he will rarely feel either langnor or depression.

4. The Drug Habit.—Drug stores are nearly as numerous as saloons, and perhaps as dangerous to health. It is safe to say that the twentieth century scientists will read the history of our drug delusion with intense surprise, if not with horror. He will read that doctors gave deadly poisons, and that sick men swallowed them, in blind faith that they wrought cures! He will read that inventors of vile and fatal compounds sold enough of them to become millionaires! He will read that the delusion grew until the mails and papers were loaded with drug literature, and the very rocks were made hideous with quack advertisements.

The fact about drugs is simply this. Nature is always trying to heal the sick. She can do this more easily and quickly without drugs, but she often works cures in spite of them; and the deluded patient is grateful to the drug. If he has chanced to use some patent nostrum, he will give the vender a glowing certificate, and have his portrait printed in the papers.

Napoleon compared taking medicine to poking blindly with a stick into a watch. No man can tell, when poison enters the stomach, where it will go, or what part of the system may be injured by it, or how long its baleful influence may be felt. It is certain that many drugs lurk in the body for long periods, and that the frequent use of them will so clog and corrode the vital machinery as to make health impossible.

It will not do to say that medicines are never useful, but they surely should be held in fear, and never taken unless by the command of a physician.

5 Over-Eating.—In these days of plentiful and cheap food, one of the most common causes of diseased cleansing organs, and foul bodies, is over eating. Invalids in particular, who are most injured by any excess, have an absurd fear of starvation. The less their appetite, the more they force down food that only harms them. A sound man can live more than a month without eating, and there is no remedy so good for many diseases as moderate fasting. That vast army who have dyspepsia and sluggish bowels, need to be extremely careful of excess. Nearly all the people who have lived to great age agree in this, though differing in other things; that they have been moderate eaters. Gladstone, who is a wonderful example of age and activity, tells us that he owes them mainly to slow eating. Here lies the secret. Eat slowly, never without an appetite, and you will rarely eat too much.

There are certain kinds of food, healthful enough in small quantities, that tend to clog the system if eaten freely. Potatoes and white bread consist largely of starch, and are dangerous to health if made staples, as we often see.

Large use of meat also is the cause of much disease. Meat is the most impure of all our foods. Not only does it contain trichinæ, and tapeworm, and other parasites, but the dead blood and bile that were in the animal's veins come very near to being poisons. The danger is specially great to invalids and those who live indoors; and such should use meat most sparingly, if at all. Raw meat, or meat half cooked, is most unwholesome, for a high degree of heat destroys the germs and stops decay.

Over-eating is so great a danger that we must repeat: never eat without an appetite, then only what you have the patience to chew slowly and thoroughly. An admirable plan is to keep fruit upon the table, and if you are not hungry, take only an apple or sip the juice of an orange.

6. Impure water. The danger of bad water is so plain, and typhoid fever has been so often traced to foul brooks and wells, that little need be said upon this subject. No well is safe unless it goes down fifty feet, and has no opening except an iron tube. The stream that fills a common well comes often from a distance, and may be laden with poison from barn yards and cesspools. And surely the water of a river whose bottom reeks with slime and whose current is swelled by every rain with streams of filth, is not fit for human drink. Fortunately boiling will destroy germs and filtering will remove the debris. But it must be remembered that filters need frequent cleaning, or they will themselves poison all the water that goes through them. When there is a question as to the purity of water it should be distilled; which can now be readily done, as there are cheap stills made for the purpose that can be used effectively.

7. Bad air. Though air of perfect purity is piled above us forty miles, and though pure air is one of our great and vital needs, yet a supply of it is hard to get, and millions perish for its want. Wherever there are swamps or sluggish streams, rotting plants will breed malaria; though this may be often overcome by drainage, and by building houses and living mainly on high ground.

It is the dwellers in the cities, and specially those who are confined to shops and houses, who are in the greatest danger. The dust and stench of city streets is sickening to one accustomed to pure air, and the amount of dirt taken into the breathing organs in a heavy clog on the vital machinery. But it is worse than that. Analyses of street dust prove it to be mainly dried filth and germs of foul diseases. And the air of houses contains, not only dust, but often the odor of rotting things, and deadly sewer gas.

Eternal vigilance may do much to make life possible in cities, but the day is coming—and may Heaven speed it—when few will live in dusty cities. Already the trolley is making it possible even for poor families to live in villages, with lawns and flowers and trees about them. Here the bread-winner may fortify himself against his city hours of dust and poison, by garden work morning and evening, and by nights in healthful air.

This brings us a source of poison air most fatal, yet little thought of; the human lungs. The breath that we pour forth is largely carbonic acid, a poison gas, and it is laden with fetid poisons, the refuse of the system and the germs of disease. In the day-time, with constant movement, and doors open or ajar, there is little danger; but at night, when two or three lie down in a small bedroom with doors and windows closed, when they spend a third of their lives in breathing one another's refuse, it will be strange indeed if they escape harm.

We can not sound too loudly the praises of pure air. It is found in perfect purity only in forests, where the leaves breathe out that intense and active kind of oxygen called ozone.

No other cure has wrought such miracles as ozone and forest life. Nothing else so purifies the blood and kills bacteria. Even consumption has yielded to their power. The rabbits that Dr. Trudeau charged with bacilli and kept in cages, mostly died; but those that ran free upon a wooded island all recovered.

No fact of hygiene is better proved than this; that an abundance of pure air is a vital need, and that out-door life is the surest path to health.

We have now surveyed the chief causes for that foul state of blood and tissues so almost universal; and for the breaking down of lungs and livers and kidneys, and the other cleansing organs.

The first downward step is often gluttony, that clogs the bowels. The food, too long delayed, ferments and loses half its virtue, and the bile, being dammed back, congests the liver.

The lungs and the kidneys must now do double work, and are prone to inflammation; while the heart grows feeble, worn out with lifting thick and heavy blood.

If now, while the cleansing organs are disordered, and the blood and all the tissues clogged with refuse, there come into the body active and poison germs, like those of diphtheria or typhoid, they will find abundant food on which to grow and multiply, and there will be little life power to resist them.

A survey of the fields shows that health, like all great blessings, is won by simple means. To breathe pure air; to drink pure water; to eat moderately of healthful food; and to take nothing else—these are the foundation. Yet, simple as this seems, no savage, and perhaps no unregenerate man can live this life. None but a lofty and cultured soul can break the claim of evil habits, rule sternly the appetite for luxury and surfeit, crush down the lust for stimulants, and make his body a "Fit temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit."—Health-Culture.

If you want to be miserable, think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay to you, and what people think of you.—Charles Kingsley.

ARBROUGH—Ella, daughter of Thomas
Winnie Yarbrough, aged nineteen years months and eleven days. At eleven ck, Dec. 21, 1894, her spirit took flight to ernal home.

Ella had suffered a great deal, but bore it all with patience, trusting in God. During her illness it was the pleasure of the writer to be with her. She was perfectly happy, and had no fear. She said she learned to love the Lord more and more every day. Though she was afflicted, she knew all things were for the best. She joined the Methodist Church on New Year's Day, 1891, and professed religion. Her life was short, but beautiful, and long enough to twine itself around the hearts of all who knew her, and especially that of the mother, to whom she was very dear. A short while before she died she asked for her invalid father. On being told that he was not able to come to her, she said: "All right; he will soon be well."

Loved ones, it was not in cruelty, not in wrath, the reaper came that day. It was an angel visited the earth and took our Ella away. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones! Farewell, Ella, till we meet again. One That Loved Her.

DACUS—Mrs. Elizabeth T. Dacus (nee Boroum) was born in Greenville district, S. C., May 2, 1809, and died Feb. 14, 1896.

She has been a member of the church perhaps threescore and ten years. She was married to Nathaniel Dacus in 1830. They came to Lafayette county, Miss., in 1850. Her husband went to the spirit-land in 1860. Sister Dacus lived at the old home till she was called to her reward. Four children survive her. Two are members of the church. May the hope of a reunion be the means of drawing the rest!

Three of our oldest members have been translated during my brief pastorate. May their mantles fall on worthy shoulders! The workmen die, but the work goes on.

B. P. Patterson.

MANGHAM—Mr. W. T. Mangham was born of Methodist parents in Scott county, Miss., Nov. 30, 1855, and came with his parents to Yazoo City, Miss., in 1875, where he lived till God called him home, Jan. 3, 1896. He had never united with the church, but had expressed his intention of doing so, and during his last illness gave evidence of having made his peace with God. Kind, noble hearted, and generous, a friend to the needy, his place will be hard to fill. A wife, one child, mother and two sisters are left bowed down with grief at the thought that their dear one is gone from them forever. May they find comfort in the thought that

There is a day coming when partings will be o'er,
And they shall meet their loved ones who has gone before!

May little Joe grow up to be a comfort to his mother as the years go by!

HARGROVE—Action of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of Pleasant Grove, Yazoo district, North Mississippi Conference, on the death of Rev. T. B. Hargrove:

On Jan. 26 the spirit of our dear brother and former pastor, Rev. T. B. Hargrove, took its flight from earth to heaven.

Whereas, By this event the M. E. Church, South, loses one of its most earnest and zealous workers, his family a devoted husband and loving father, his relatives and friends a Christian counselor. He was deeply interested in the mission work, and his noble soul was ever ready to respond to any call from this great cause. During his stay with us as pastor, we always found him kind, gentle, and loving; and it was a benediction to our souls to listen to his words of love and sympathy, for if he loved to talk and preach on any subject more than another, it was "Love," "Love to God, love to our fellowman." While this great loss has befallen us, it is his eternal gain, and we bow in humble submission, knowing that God doeth all things well; therefore, be it Resolved, That the M. E. Church, South, has sustained a great loss by the removal of one of its best, purest and noblest members.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved wife, children and other relatives our sincere sympathies, and pray that the blessings of a loving heavenly Father may rest upon them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our Minutes, and that a copy of same be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate; also that a copy be furnished the family of the deceased.

Cod-liver oil is something more than a fat. Its peculiar action depends on a number of substances, among which might be mentioned iodine and phosphorus. There can be no substitute for cod-liver oil, because there is no other oil known which has in natural combination with it such a large number of valuable medicinal agents.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the hypophosphites contains the whole oil, with its natural properties, and in a thoroughly emulsified or digested condition. The hypophosphites increase the appetite and impart strength to the nervous system. This combination has marked curative properties in a number of diseases of the skin and scalp, to which scrofulous persons are peculiarly liable. Such diseases as chronic eczema, ringworm, and other skin affections, are often quickly cured by the constitutional effects following the use of Scott's Emulsion.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.25 (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to March, 97. (A little later it will be April, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.25, $1.75 and $2.45.

THE DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages printed on excellent paper, is finely illustrated, and handsomely and strongly bound in cloth, measuring 9½x6½x2 inches.

It contains every name in the Bible and Apochrypa, of which anything can be said. It gives an account of each of the Books of the Bible; it explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs of the Jews, as well as of the various nations mentioned or alluded to in the Scriptures, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves, and worthy of separate publication.

It embraces the results of the most successful and approved Biblical labors and researches, including those of Layard, Rawlinson and others condensed for wide and common use, and constituting an indispensable aid to Ministers, Teachers, Families, Sunday-School Superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

This is undoubtedly the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The publisher's price of the above work is $1.50. We will send it to any address on receipt of price, or we will send it free to any person who will send us two new cash subscribers at the regular rate.

We will also send it free of charge to any subscriber who will pay his own subscription at the regular rate—$2—to January, '98, and also send us one new cash subscriber.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF SAINT PAUL.

By the Rev. W. J. CONYBEARE, M. A., Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and the Rev. J. S. Howson, D. D., Principal of the Collegiate Institution, Liverpool.

Contains 1014 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality of paper and is the same in size as Smith's Dictionary of the Bible and bound in uniform style.

It eloquently portrays the early Life, education, conversion, teachings, labors, travels, sufferings, perils, persecutions, and missionary career of St. Paul, thus constituting a Living Picture of the great Apostle himself and of the circumstances by which he was surrounded.

The work also embodies the results of a profound and appreciative study of the true inner life of St. Paul exhibited in his letters which delineate the motives which impelled, and the faith which sustained him in all the troubles and sorrows of his twenty year's conflict, and from which we learn what is told of Paul by Paul himself, and which will continue to live upon the lips and in the hearts of all the faithful until the final consummation of all things.

It is NOT an ABRIDGEMENT but an EXACT RE-PRINT of the greatly improved "People's Edition," prepared with much care and labor, in pursuance of an original plan of both writers, "for a wider circle of readers," and differs from all other editions by the SUBSTITUTION OF ENGLISH for the Greek, Latin and German quotations.

Dr. Howson in his preface to this edition says,—"Those readers have, throughout, been kept in view who, though well educated, would not find it easy to refer to Greek or German books." "The text (he also says) is unaltered, with the exception of a slight verbal change suggested in the course of a thorough re perusal."

The publisher's price of the above book is $4 50. We will send it free of charge to any person who will send us two new subscribers with the cash—$4 00. We will also send it to any address at the publisher's price.

We will also send it free of charge to any subscriber who will pay his own subscription at the regular rate—$2—to January, '98, and also send us one new cash subscriber.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

It is expected that 10,000 veterans will attend the annual meeting of the U. C. V. at Charleston, April 22.

English capitalists are building an enormous factory at Toledo, Ohio, for the production of weldless tubing for bicycle frames. They propose to turn out 1,000,000 feet a week.

The Auditorium to be erected for the St. Louis convention is to be 180x260 feet, and seated to accommodate 14,000 people. It will be built of wood and will take a million and a half feet.

It is said that Ballington Booth was removed from the command of the Salvation Army in America because he expressed a lack of confidence in his father and a disapproval of his methods.

The Iowa Legislature is considering a "curfew bell" bill, which will make it unlawful for any person under the age of 15 to be in the streets after 9 o'clock at night in Summer and 8 in Winter. It is thought that the measure will pass.

The people of Mississippi are rightly very desirous to have a deep water harbor on their sea front, and a joint committee from their State Legislature has been sailing along the coast, making soundings, with a view to gain information on the situation.

The Tuskegee Annual Conference of negroes will meet at Tuskegee, Ala., on March 5. This conference has nothing to do with politics, but concerns itself with the material and educational interests of the negro race. It has been productive of many good results.

When news was received in Jacksonville, Fla., that the Cuban belligerents' rights rescintion had passed the Senate the Cubans of that city were wild with delight. The cannon belched forth salutes for every State in the Union and for Cuba. Firecrackers were exploded all over the city, and sky rockets illuminated the heavens. Americans joined the Cubans in the popular demonstration.

The International Immigration Association still continues to ship negroes toward Liberia. A large number went from Arkansas and Oklahoma the other day. The association promises them three months' rations and thirty acres of land, with ten extra acres for each child. Each emigrant is charged $41 for his passage, plus the railroad fare to Savannah, and is allowed to pay it in by installments before he starts.

The announcement that Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth would head a separate religious movement interested a large body of the officers, as well as the rank and file, of the Salvation Army in New York. Few members of the army are willing to express openly their feelings towards the new movement, but it was plain from their demeanor that their old leader had still the strongest hold on their affections, and most of them will, in the event of a separate movement, follow his lead.

The Foreign Relations Committee of the House of Representatives has adopted a concurrent rescintion recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans. By an overwhelming vote of 64 to 6 the Senate, on Feb. 28, adopted a concurrent rescintion favorable to Cuban belligerency and independence. The House of Representatives took up the resolutions reported by the Foreign Affairs Committee, on March 2, and after a brief debate passed them by an overwhelming majority, only 16 representatives voting in the negative.

FOREIGN.

As many as 14,565 people die in Paris of consumption every year.

The national Armenian Relief Committee has issued an urgent appeal for funds to be forwarded to the Red Cross Society at Constantinople, where Miss Clara Barton is now actively engaged in the work.

A revolution is now in full blast in Nicaragua, and all the cities in Nicaragua are in arms, preparing to either support President Zelaya or to contribute men for the march of his enemies upon the capital, Managua.

On March 1 a mob attacked the American consulate in Barcelona, Spain, and stoned the building. The details received show that the riotous demonstration was the outcome of a public meeting called to denounce the action of the United States Senate in recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans.

A telegram says that 3,000 Armenians have been massacred at Arabkir, and that the widows and orphans of those killed are in terrible distress from cold and hunger. The dispatch also says that the Armenians of Sivas and Cesarea are in daily fear of massacre. Forced conversions to Islam are general throughout the Asiatic provinces.

If one may judge by the things that have been said and some of the things that have been done, the Spanish people are enthusiastically determined to go to war forthwith with the United States and to speed an avenge to an assault which has been offered to the haughty pride of Spain by the United States Senate in determining to recognize the Cuban provisional government as a belligerent power and to ask the President to use his good offices with Spain to obtain recognition of Cuban independence.

Do Not Despair because you have tried many medicines and have failed to receive benefit. Remember that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures when all others fail to do any good whatever.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver medicine. Harmless, reliable, sure.

Holman Bible at $1.25.

By buying in wholesale quantities we are able to make the following reduction in our Emerald-type Holman Bible. This Bible we have sold heretofore at $1 50. We now offer it at $1.25 to those who pay their subscription a full year in advance—that is, to March, '97. We do not advise any person who has passed the meridian of life to get this Bible, on account of the smallness of the print. For young persons, however, it will answer as well as the more expensive styles. It has all the helps of the larger sizes. Address

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Notice.

To the Brethren of the Louisiana Conference:

There appeared in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and also in the Pentecostal Age, a short time since, an article to the effect that I would do my colporage work in connection with the publisher of the Age, at 612 Camp street. Since the publication of that notice I have found it necessary to sever my connection with that place, and have opened our Methodist Depository at 637 Poydras street, where I will keep a line of Publishing House and other religious books.

Cut this out, brethren, and let it serve to remind you to send all your orders to 637 Poydras street, where they will be promptly filled. Let all orders be accompanied with cash, or otherwise no discount can be allowed.

J. E. DENSON,
637 Poydras street, New Orleans, La.

Street-car drivers and others who are constantly exposed to all kinds of weather, and can not find time to lay by, should ever bear in mind this plain fact, that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cures coughs and colds. It is unequaled.

An Explanation.

MR EDITOR: My notice in your paper, asking friends to assist me in getting a school for my son and daughter, has been misconstrued by some that I have asked for aid to educate my children, which is not true. I simply wanted them to teach during vacation—that is all—in order to bring out their own resources. I have been and still am a liberal supporter of our own loved Methodist institutions. I am in hopes this will satisfy the curious and those who are inclined to gossip. Your brother,

J. R. WHITTINGTON.

SECURE A POSITION.

Wanted, for office work, on salary, in most every county in the South and West, a young lady or gentleman. Those from the country also accepted. Experience not necessary; in fact, prefer beginners at a small salary at first, say to begin, from $30.00 to $60 00 a month. Strictly office work. Chances for rapid promotion good. The enterprise is strongly endorsed by bankers. Address P. O. Box 483, Nashville, Tenn. (Mention this paper.)

Program.

The Pastoral and Theological Society of the Durant district, North Mississippi Conference, will convene in Kosciusko, March 26 and 27. Rev. D. W. Bohn will preach the opening sermon, March 26, at 11 o'clock.

The following is the program:

1. The Importance of and the Best Method of Bible Study—J. D. Newsom.
2. The Model Church—J. H. Rodgers.
3. How to Raise the Collections Ordered by the Annual Conference—A. T. Buck.
4. Church Loyalty on the Part of Preachers and People—T. G. Freeman.
5. Ministerial Bearing in and out of the Pulpit—D. W. Babb.
6. Is Mental Preparation All That is Needed for the Pulpit—J. A. Wilson.
7. Church Work and Method—J. C. Park.
8. Is There Any Standard for the Contributing of Our Means to the Support of Christ's Cause?—J. W. Hall.
9. The Possibility of Falling Away from Christ and Finally Being Lost—W. W. Mitchell.
10. Is There As Much Spiritual Power in the Church and Ministry To-day As Formerly—G. W. Bachman.
11. The Importance of Discipline, and How to Enforce It—W. D. McCullough.
12. Doctrinal Preaching—J. W. Ramsey.
13. The Need of the Church To-day—R. C. Callaway.
14. How to Awaken the Conscience of the Masses on the Subject of Missions—J. T. Murrah.
15. How to Circulate the Church Papers—W. A. Bowling.
16. Can One Make the Greatest Success in Charge of a Church Without Being a Good Pastor?—E. M. Evans.
17. What Has Always Been the Position of the Methodist Church in Reference to Woman's Work in the Church, and Do We Harmonize with the Scriptures?—D. C. Foust.
18. How to Have a Revival—R. P. Goar.
19. The Necessity for a Baptism of the Holy Ghost upon People and Pastor—W. J. O'Bryant.

I hope all the brethren will be on hand promptly with carefully prepared papers. Local preachers and laymen are also urged to be present and take part in the discussions.

J. H. MITCHELL, P. E.

The Italian campaign against Abyssinia is proving a veritable disaster. The Italian force, after being deserted by a portion of its native allies, has been practically surrounded by the forces of King Menelik, and, unless the Italian commander develops more enterprise than he has hitherto shown, he stands a good chance of being compelled to surrender.

Their address is Hillsboro, Ohio.

It is the close observation of little things which is the secret of success in business, in art, in science, and in every pursuit in life. Human knowledge is but an accumulation of small facts made by successive generations of men, the little bits of knowledge and experience carefully treasured up by them growing at length into a mighty pyramid.—Samuel Smiles.

ONE WHO DIED AT SUNSET SENDS THIS TO COMFORT ALL HIS FRIENDS.

(Adapted from Edwin Arnold's poem, "After Death in Arabia.")

Faithful friends, it lies, I know,
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say that I am dead!
Weeping at the feet and head,
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your sighs and prayers,
Yet I smile and answer this:
"I am not that which you kiss;
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine, it is not I."

Dear friends, know ye what ye have
For the last sleep in the grave
Is a tent which I am quitting,
Is a garment no more fitting,
Is a cage, from which at last,
Like a bird, my soul has passed.

Now the long, long wonder ends;
Yet ye weep, my erring friends,
While the one that ye call dead,
In unspoken bliss instead,
Lives and loves you; lost 'tis true,
By such light as shines for you;
But in a light ye can not see
Of unfulfilled felicity
In a blessed Paradise
Lives a life that never dies.

Farewell, friends, yet not farewell;
Where I am ye, too, shall dwell.

I am gone before your face,
A moment's time, a little space.

When ye come where I have stepped
Ye will wonder why ye wept;
Ye will know by wise love taught
That here is all and there is naught.

Weep awhile if ye are fain,
Sunshine still will follow rain;
Only not at death—for death,
Now I know, is that first breath
Which our souls draw when we enter
Life, which is of all life centre.

Be ye certain all is love,
Seen from God's great throne above;
Be ye stout of heart, and come
Bravely onward to your home!

One who died at sunset gave
This to those who made his grave,

"The Prodigal Son."

The story of the prodigal son is repeated over and over in every-day life. Some son goes off from home, out into the cold and heartless world, only to repent and return a sadder, if not a wiser, boy. It is the misfortune and the peculiar heritage of boys to think they could do wonders for themselves if they could only get away from home. Many of them try it, and many more are tempted to do so. This freak and foolish notion takes its rise in a boy's mind somewhere from twelve to twenty years. The devil gets him to believe he is badly treated, is imposed upon and held back from getting on in the world, and he broods over it and resolves and re-resolves to leave, and now and then one does leave. He longs to taste the forbidden fruit. He plans to go and make a big fortune speedily, and then return all covered with glory. When he gets off he does not find things as they were at home. He misses the love and tenderness of mother, and the counsel and guiding hand of father, and the affection and good cheer of brothers and sisters. He longs for mother's coffee and the good biscuit he had at home, and he thinks, "Well, my own bed would be so sweet if I were only in it again." All these things come as after-thoughts—after he is away from them, and when he comes to himself, as the prodigal did. He really comes to himself, regains his right mind; and when he does, he sees what a simpleton and fool he was. Then deep, bitter remorse sets in, and genuine repentance comes by and by. Then he makes a break for home. All sense of having been wronged is gone, and only the sense that he has wronged others remains. This sense is so deep that he does not see or understand how it is possible for him to meet loving smiles and free pardon on his arrival home. He has utterly mistaken parental hearts and parental love.

When a boy pulls out from home with plenty of money, he has a gay time while it lasts, and he does not seem to know it will not last forever. It is a blessing to him when the last cent is gone, for as long as his cents last, his sense is gone. When a boy leaves home without money, he soon finds that money is necessary, and not so easily made as he supposed.

No mortal knows the thoughts, the agony and the heartaches of a truant boy away from home when night comes on and he has time to think over what he has done, and it begins to come to him that he has acted very foolishly. What struggles he has with his pride! Conscience will not let him alone, and, for a time, pride will not allow him to yield. He has fightings without and fears within. It is so hard to retrace his steps, to face the folks at home, to tacitly confess he was wrong, to acknowledge his sin, and to ask pardon for the same. All this cuts him deep and keen.

Perhaps this trouble comes to boys through the beginnings of responsible actions. They feel the uprisings of free-will in them. They are not free, or they think they are not, as long as they are restrained, as long as they are under law, rule, authority, and so they want to get away from all this. Boys do not know, millions of men have not learned, the difference between liberty and license. They think they are one and the same thing. The prodigal son thought this, and so he wasted his substance in riotous living. This old story is repeated every day, and more or less fully in nearly every life.

GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

Of Lord Leighton, who recently died, said a friend: "He painted many excellent pictures; but, nobler than all these, was his life." We hold that a truly Christian life charms and attracts more than the best paintings; speaks more eloquently than the greatest sermon.

Who is my neighbor? In the recent battle of Dornkop, Transvaal, two schoolmates recognized each other as they were taking deadly aim at each other's head. Immediately they threw away their guns and wept in fond embrace. But men are more than schoolmates; all descendants of Adam are brethren. Doubly so are the disciples of the King of Peace. Is not all war of the devil?

An excellent theme was that of Bishop Merrill, who recently addressed the Methodist Social Union of Chicago on, "What I would do if I had charge of a congregation."

President Krueger, of the Transvaal, frequently preaching, was invited by the trustees of a new Jewish temple to dedicate the same. He complied. But he used the ritual of his church, and dedicated the edifice to the worship of the Triune God. The long faces of the old Jews can be imagined.

The prediction of the London Times that the Salvation Army would soon have its "Fourth of July" has been fulfilled. Bailington Booth has disobeyed the order to return to England. He has organized an army of his own. Nationalism comes to his aid. Our papers applaud his action. But, dissension and division are the cancer of church life. Sub-division in the new army will follow until—well, all Christian denominations have a sad history in this respect.

The generality of "love of mother" has brought much money to an Ohio tramp. He begged from house to house in many cities and hamlets "only for a stamp to mail a letter to my aged mother." Invariably the stamp was given. Afterwards, when his pockets were filled with postage stamps, he would convert them in ready cash.

The "Prisoner of the Vatican," as benighted Roman Catholics fondly call the Pope, is certainly not poor. It is said that if he would melt and convert into coin all the golden statues, medals, chains, vases, etc., hid away in the Vatican, more gold coin could be realized than is at present in circulation in all Europe.

Letter from China.

I had quite an amusing experience last Saturday, which came very nearly resulting seriously. Bro. Hearn has a horse which has been staying in the stable too long; so he is quite frisky. Bro. Hearn being unwell, asked me to ride him some. I took him and rode down to the dispensary; held my clinic; then started over to the city gate near Mr. Hayes, thinking I would get up on the city wall there, and have a nice ride around the wall to the gate near us. I found I had to get off to get through a small gate that opened on the incline up to the wall. We got through the gate, and I tried to get on; but, as I left the ground to get into the saddle, the horse made a jump forward so quickly that I did not get into the saddle. I jumped on the ground and held the horse, leading him up on the wall, where there was more room. As we went up I tried to get friendly with the horse, and thinking I had succeeded, I tried to mount again. The horse made another effort to run away, and succeeded. He made off before I got my seat in the saddle, and this, with my lack of training in handling horses, worked against me to such an extent that I found myself being carried—unwillingly, I assure you—as fast as the horse could run. You know something of the city wall, so can imagine how I would feel, as the horse would come very near the edge—so near, in fact, that I was very much scared. As the horse saw I was no ding on quite well, he added bucking to his "bill of fare." With this addition he paid practically no regard to how near he came to the edge of the wall. I did not relish much the idea of rolling there some fifty feet with a horse; so I began to look out for a soft place to fall. I soon saw one; so, being perfectly willing to part company with such an ungentlemanly gentleman, I made an effort to get off. The next thing I knew I landed on my shoulder and head in some grass. Looking up, I saw the horse still running up the wall, and I was glad I was not with him. When I think of how near he came to the edge of the wall in all his foolishness, I get a little nervous. I don't think you would have had but one doctor in China if that horse had fallen off that wall. I was not hurt, but got myself together, got some friends, and the horse was caught. This is the second time he has run away with foreigners. The city wall is the only place, you know, anyone can ride with any pleasure; and as mine was not very pleasant, I think I will have to give up all idea of riding.

I have just returned from my regular afternoon trip to the dispensary. I am encouraged over the work a good deal. We have quite a number of patients, who come whenever they have any sickness. A young man was cured of an ulcer on his leg. He came in the other day with another trouble that I was able to cure. A soldier came in not long ago who had a very severe cough. He was treated, and came back in a few days very much improved, and said he had been promoted to captain, and gave the cough mixture all the credit. The soldiers are promoted according to their perfection in target shooting. The cough had bothered this man so much that he was unable to aim steadily; but so soon as he could keep from coughing, he was able to hit the target so accurately that he was very happy. I long to be able to talk to the patients myself, so that I can say a word for Jesus. I am learning a little each day.

Selections.

The Bible.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

This book is not only wiser than its friends, but mightier than its foes. A library of volumes has been written to destroy it. Ordinarily, when a book has been exploded, proved to be false, foolish, absurd, and everything that is bad, it passes out of sight and is forgotten; but this book outlives its enemies, marches in triumph over the graves of its critics, and is buttressed all about with the broken weapons of those who have assailed it.

In 1835 the British and Foreign Bible Society, in addition to their other editions, printed nine hundred thousand copies of a penny edition of the New Testament. How long will it be before skeptics print nine hundred thousand copies of an infidel book which has been exploded and demolished as many times as the New Testament has? Infidels for eighteen hundred years have been refuting and overthrowing this book, and yet it stands to-day as solid as a rock. Its circulation increases, and it is more loved and cherished and read to-day than ever before. Infidels, with all their assaults, make about as much impression on this book as a man with a rock-hammer would on the pyramids of Egypt.

When the French monarch proposed the persecution of the Christians in his dominion, an old statesman and warrior said to him; "Sire, the church of God is an anvil that has worn out many hammers." So the hammers of infidels have been pecking away at this book for ages, but the hammers are worn out, and the anvil still endures. If this book had not been the book of God, men would have destroyed it long ago. Emperors and Popes, kings and priests, princes and rulers, have all tried their hand at it. They die, and the book still lives.

Men and demons have tried in vain to drive this book out; and if our skeptical friends have really undertaken to demolish and extirpate this book, they may congratulate themselves on having secured the largest contract of the age. It will last them as long as they live, and they can bequeath it to their children and to their children's children. The book lives, while those who fight it die, and he who wishes to succeed would do well to come over to the winning side.

Salvation Army Crisis.

BY SIMEON GILBERT, D. D.

The Salvation Army faces a crisis in its development. A crisis does not always imply failure or defeat; it does imply a sharp testing of some particular principle or method. It is in this case the expected that has happened. An overstrain of personal absolutism has snapped its rein.

Whether Commanders Ballington and Maud Booth, of the American division of the army, have done right and acted wisely in breaking with the iron-bound absolutism of the central management rather than be broken under it, is a question that will be easier to answer when the facts in the case are more fully known. Meantime American sympathy, which is apt to make much account of soul freedom and the immediate personal accountability to the one Master, goes out strongly with them. Nor will this sympathy be greatly affected by the vehemence with which Chief-of-Staff Bramwell Booth has seen fit to fling at his brother through the public press accusations charging him with "treason to the cause," and all that.

General Booth himself began his great career with an act of insubordination to the particular ecclesiastical authority above him. But this was no act of treason to the cause; it was rather an act of supreme loyalty to the cause, as he saw it to be. He believed that he knew himself better than they did, and knew better than they did the condition of the "lapsed masses," the "vast continent" of poverty and sin and helplessness, as yet not even touched by any light or life from any of the existing religious organizations. Seeing the case as he did, he could not brook the subjugation of his own free and indomitable personality to the trammels of antiquated and unreasoning tradition, or to the unsympathetic dictation of those who, as he knew, did not know half so well as he did how to reach the kind of people in whom he had come to feel an interest so profound, so imperative. The new method of organization was a bold venture. But it was a method that came to him in the growing stress of the new emergency and only as events, which were to him as the visible hand of God, showed the way.

That such a movement, so novel, so audacious, in certain respects so extravagant, should have been on the whole so generously judged by thoughtful and candid people in all the churches, and even outside the churches, is a notable fact. Some years ago Queen Victoria sent this sisterly message to Mrs. Booth: "Her Majesty learns with much satisfaction that you have, with the other members of your society, been successful in your efforts to win many thousands to the ways of temperance, virtue and religion." Nobody has failed to see that somehow a phenomenally forceful and aggressive agency, religious, moral, philanthropic, has been developed. It has impressed the public mind more profoundly than has any other kindred movement of the century. The influence of it has been felt immeasurably beyond its own immediate operations. The churches of every name have felt the new impulse to "launch out into the deep," to reach out a brother's hand, a sister's hand, to save the lost, to help the fallen to their feet, to put a new heart of hope into the lives of the most abandoned. Innumerable people have been set to thinking in earnest and practical ways over the appalling moral and social conditions, and have in their own ways begun wrestling with the awful problem as to some real "way out." And even though the particular form of this modern religious "militarism" should not survive its founder and should break into a dozen geographical or other divisions, its special and transcendently useful mission, as a pointer, as an emphasis for the time, can not be lost. As Mrs. Booth has said: "Let us go on serving our own generation, and leave God to look after the next."

It has been greatly to the credit of the leaders of the "army" that they have not indulged in denunciation. They have not attacked the churches. As General Booth said to the Archbishop of Canterbury: "We think we have a claim upon your sympathy, because we do not seek to justify our existence by finding fault with you. All we find fault with is sin." Nor have they ever stopped with finding fault even with that; but, boldly in the faith of the gospel, in the name of the omnipotent Christ, they have striven to apply the remedy.

There could hardly be a more useful study in all our churches than a discriminating search for the secret of power in the Salvation Army. General Booth has unquestionably been one of the most signal men of the century. He has possessed in extraordinary degree both "the vision and the faculty" characteristic of men of the prophetic order. Not a whit behind him in this respect was his wife, Mrs. Catharine Booth, as noble a woman as the century has produced. There has not appeared a more instructive biography in modern times than that of this "Mother of the Army," as saintly in spirit as she was human, as human as she was saintly. But for her a large part of what has been best in the movement would not have been; but for her genius for seeing things as they are, and for seeing all things and all persons whatsoever in the light of love, the divine love, the military absolutism in the control of the organization could never have been preserved. "We have had to fight our way out of conventionalism and traditionalism," says Mrs. Booth. And now, no doubt, there will be the necessity for the same spirit in fighting to keep from falling into the new conventionalism and traditionalism of this other sort. This they will not succeed in doing should a disposition be allowed to creep in to make them idolize their idea of the military absolutism by which the "soldiers" are bound in subjection to any human "generalship." Especially will any attempts of the central headquarters to compel the officers of the army—as in case of Commander Ballington Booth—to be as the "man without a country," be an unnatural blunder.

Whatever the future of it, the remarkable Christian movement associated with the Salvation Army has already done this: It has taught the world afresh the power of Christ; the reality of the supernatural; the universality of human brotherhood; the infinite practicality of the spirit of the gospel; the entire practicability of doing the things that ought to be done, if not in the old ways, then by some new and more aptly adjusted methods and form of aggressive agency; the wisdom of unlocking the mouths of women; the right of every one whose heart the finger of the Spirit has touched to be placed in some recognized position and set to work; that humanity, despite its "continents of sin," is a redeemed race, and that over every inch of it the soldiers of Christ are bidden in the spirit of an infinite "sense of victory and divine success" to lift and hold aloft the one banner of the cross. The obligation to do this is the true absolutism; there is no other.—The Standard.

The Edwards Auxiliary numbers twenty regular and three honorary members. We hold our meetings once a month, and have an average attendance of seven or eight. A few of us take the Woman's Missionary Advocate, and quite a number The World for Christ, while nearly all are readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. As a rule, missionary interest is in direct ratio to missionary information. We have some earnest, faithful members, who keep the interest stirred and the whole moving. The question with us is how to diffuse the missionary spirit throughout our membership. This will come only in answer to fervent prayer for the lukewarm, mingled with more earnest effort to induce them to attend the monthly meetings and read our missionary literature.

Our auxiliary has held no public meetings lately, nor done anything extraordinary. But our monthly meetings are full of interest. Besides the payment of our regular dues, we have a special work which lies very near our hearts. Lelia McNamar, who has been these two years at East Mississippi Female College, went out from our midst, and is thus, in a peculiar sense, our very own. While the other auxiliaries of the Conference provide for her education, we take personal charge of our young orphan missionary, meeting her individual needs. For this purpose we raise not less than fifty dollars in addition to our regular monthly payments. Many, not members of our auxiliary, kindly help us in this "labor of love;" and we hope and believe that the interest thus awakened in her and the great cause she represents will bring most of them into the regular ranks.

Sister S. G. Weems made a very interesting talk for our Sunday-school last year. We expect to have her with us again at the District Conference in March. We hope and pray for fresh inspiration at that time. May we all be more faithful!

CLARA B. DRAKE.

Thanks for the invitation to attend the District Conference.

The public meetings required of us are exceedingly helpful. At such times earnest efforts should be made in behalf of the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Little Worker. Let all remember these belong to the society, and all above expenses goes in the regular fund. Mrs. Trueheart has twice recently urged our Conference, through our corresponding secretary, to use diligent work for these periodicals. It is a critical time with them as well as the work in general—"an hour of great trial" with these papers. Our corresponding secretary still complains of not receiving reports from districts and auxiliaries, and some auxiliaries do not receive the literature. The editor does not receive the reports due her. Let each one of us prayerfully consider our duty and responsibility. We dare not hinder the work by our negligence. Said our beloved Mrs. McGavock: "There is no better way of cultivating the vines and young growth in our part of the Lord's vineyard than to distribute the literature provided by the Woman's Board of Missions. Knowledge is the force that governs the world, and in missionary work it is the lever resting on the fulcrum (faith) which shall remove the mountains of heathendom into the sea of God's love." Her heart-searching bugle-call to press onward, in 1893, is needed now. We repeat some of her words: "The auxiliaries are to the work what the arteries are to the heart. Turn aside the ruby current from the great reservoir, and death conquers life. So it will be, so it must be, with our foreign work, unless you, its guardians, watch jealously the springs or sources of supply. . . . You have planted this foreign work in the name of Christ. 'The little one has become a thousand,' and still it grows. Are you growing with it? Take this question home with you, ponder it in your hearts, and consider the disproportion between the membership of the Woman's Missionary Society and the great number of women in the M. E. Church, South, who are of us, but not with us.

"I stand before you to-day and plead for the foreign work by the love you bear your Redeemer, by the perishing souls who have not heard of him, and by your obligations to the missionaries you have sent to the fields, not to be laggards in this great race, but to measure up to your strength, keeping in view the goal, and 'press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.'"

Let us not forget the ten cents per month, membership dues, the fifteen cents per annum Conference contingent fund due from each adult member, and also the auxiliary contingent fund, the amount of which is for each auxiliary to determine.

MRS. E. D. JONES.

GO FEEL WHAT I HAVE FELT.

When Miss Frances Gary was young she wrote much against intemperance, and a friend accused her of being unbalanced on that subject. The following was her answer, in which she makes reference to the sufferings from her father's evil habit of drinking:

Go feel what I have felt,
Go bear what I have borne—
Sink 'neath the blow a father dealt,
And the cold world's proud scorn!
Then suffer on from year to year—
Thy sole relief the scorching tear.

Go kneel as I have knelt,
Implore, beseech, and pray—
Strive the hell-tortured heart to melt,
The downward course to stay—
Be dashed with bitter curse aside:
Your prayers hurled back'd, your tears defied.

Go weep as I have wept
O'er a loved father's fall;
See every promised blessing swept—
Youth's hopefulness turned to gall:
Life's leading flowers strewed all the way,
That brought me up to woman's day.

Go see what I have seen;
Behold the strong man bowed—
With gnashing teeth, lips bathed in blood,
And cold and livid brow;
Go catch his withering glance, and see
There mirrored his soul's misery.

Go to my mother's side,
And her crushed bosom cheer,
Thine own deep anguish hide,
Wipe from her cheek the bitter tear;

Mark her worn frame and withered brow;
The gray that streaks her dark hair now;
With tottling frame and trembling limb,
And trace the ruin back to him
Whose plighted faith in early youth
Promised eternal love and truth;
But who, forsworn, hath yielded up
That promise in the dreadful cup,
And led her down through love and light,
And all that made her promise bright
And chained her there 'mid want and strife,
That lowly thing—a drunkard's wife—
And stamped on childhood's brow, so mild,
That withering blight—the drunkard's child.

Go hear, and see, and feel, and know,
All that my soul has felt and known—
Then look upon the wine-cup's glow;
See if its heauties can atone—
Think if its flavor you can try,
When all proclaim, 'Tis drink and die!

Tell me I HATE the bowl?
Hate is a feeble word!
I loathe—abhor—my very soul
With strong disgust is stirred—
Where'er I see, or hear, or tell,
Of that dark beverage of hell.

Bishop Haygood.

Noticing a few days since an account of the death of Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, I thought I would ask the privilege of a short "say" about the Bishop. From his obituary, as written in the Nashville Christian Advocate, I have learned that the Bishop's family came from Wales. I never knew that until now, and as my own is from Wales by way of France, I have been more strongly inclined to love and honor his memory. When I was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta, Ga. (1852, 1853, and 1854), his father removed to the city and formed a copartnership with Bro. I. D. Whitaker, who was one of my deacons. Their firm was one of the first and most reliable in Atlanta. I know Bro. Green (I think that was his father's name) and his wife and the grandmother well. Attious was the noble and manly school-boy. He was a class-mate and friend of my eldest son, Joseph C. B. The lot which his father bought, as one of the trustees for the Trinity M. E. Church, was only about sixty or seventy yards from my own residence, and, of course, we were able to see much of him there.

Bro. Green B. Haygood and myself having been raised on plantations in the Southland, and our parents being Christians, we were taught to respect and love the colored people. We had as our playmates "brothers in black," and also had "mothers in black;" and in some places the parents allowed the little girls to have "dollies in black," too. How natural it was for the father to take the dear little girl, whom he loved and was trying to teach, down to the cabin quarters, as it was called then, and when he showed the little girl the baby, and she begged her father for it, as every loving little girl would do, the gift was made! "It is your 'blank dollie baby.' You must go and fix up its clothes, and see to it now, my darling. It is your black doll baby, and no one shall take it from you." When once two babies at one birth was given to the little one, and one of them died (when the little extemporized nurse was grieved), what a change! The father had to teach his darling child that the little one was only taken by the Savior to dwell with him forever and ever. "Don't cry. Your little black dollie has been taken to be free from sorrow, to dwell with God."

The Christian men and women of the South now remember, and that with much interest, the "mothers in black" and "brothers in black," with whom they were associated in their youth. The "mothers in black" will ever be remembered by us. It is that which gives the colored people of the South such a warm place in the hearts of the Christians of the South. A colored preacher of Mobile, Ala., once said: "There lay down deep in the heart of the white Southern Christian a warm place for the brother in black, which was found nowhere else on this earth."

Bishop Haygood, realizing this Christian affection for the freedmen of the South, went early and earnestly into the work of their education and elevation; hence his book, "The Brother in Black;" the Bishop's work in Georgia and that of your scribe also, for as the Bishop did for the Methodist Church, I myself, and my brother, Rev. Joseph H. Robert, D. D., LL.D., did for the Baptist negroes by appointment of A. B. H. Church Society, of New York. This work presents its off ois now in the good feeling between the races in Georgia, and the moral and educational advancement of the colored people of Georgia. But the Bishop has gone in early life. He put on the garment of humility, with faith and love in his heart. He was clothed with zeal, always doing, it was said, more than the work of any ordinary man. His feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, he took the sword of the Spirit, and went on conquering and to conquer.

"Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Recollections of Rev. B. M. Drake, D. D.

I first met this man of precious memory in the social circle, where a number of preachers and lay brethren were together. I was at once impressed with his personal appearance and conversational powers. I often saw him afterwards in the midst of friends, where he seemed never to fail in the leadership in discussing topics of conversation. This was without effort or seeming rivalship. He sat as one to be observed and one to be looked up to in his place. His voice was fond and distinct, also pleasant and attractive, and made him easily understood to a large circle. He enjoyed a laugh, which he seemed to make an epidemic around him. He seldom perpetrated a joke; yet he would occasionally play off one. He dealt largely in anecdotes, incidents and narratives. He was a great talker, yet he never seemed to bore or weary the patience of company.

As a preacher, he was never brief. The turn of his mind was to exhaust his subject. He had to treat it in detail. To abbreviate was to lose it. His sermons were largely historical, or founded on history. I have heard him called the historical preacher. I have heard him, though, on distinctive doctrinal subjects, such, for instance, as I. Peter i, 10, which I shall never forget. He ignored formality, yet he was true to his own church ritual. In the morning service he was sure to read a first lesson from the Old Testament and a second lesson from the New, holding to old time methods, which he esteemed true Methodism. Whether in rural district or city he never failed to line his first and second hymns, two lines at a time, over all choirs and organs. If there was any hesitation, he was ready to raise his own tune, and could sing well and loud. He did not often reprove, but when he did so, it was well and fearlessly done.

As a leader, he seemed naturally in his place in the discussion of questions of interest upon the Conference floor. As he stood, the planting of his feet, his tall and commanding form, his poise, indicated him every inch a leader. As he bore down against his adversary, he looked as if he could not bear defeat. I remember once to have seen him roused beyond anything I had ever witnessed of him before. The vote of the Conference was a decided majority against him. He asked the privilege of a few words; then said in near these very words: "Brethren, I submit to your decision. I believed I was right in prosecuting this case. I still think I was right, but I have nothing more to say. I accord to you the same honest purpose. I am sure the Methodist Church will still stand." I had voted against him, but I am sure the man never seemed larger nor greater to me than then, and I am of the same opinion still.

As a presiding elder, his administration was always with firmness; and as a man in authority, was always gentle, kind and considerate. If his quarterly meeting came on in the midst of a protracted or camp meeting, upon arrival he assumed charge of the services, but always with decided courtesy to the preacher in charge, consulting him in regard to the management of the exercises, and as to who should preach at certain hours. I have known positions where such consideration would have been refreshing.

Dr. Drake had his experience with some others of precious memory when Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana were all one Conference. When his obituary was read before the Mississippi Conference, a visitor to that Conference from Northwestern Louisiana stated that there were memories of B. M. Drake strong in the old families of that region, and stories were told of his hardships and hard travel in crossing boggy bayous and unbridged streams swollen from rains; and sweet recollections were had of his comforting and cheering visits to their isolated homes. He was spoken of in marked distinction from others.

He was specially mindful of little things. On one occasion he wrote a letter in my room on Saturday night, and requested me to take charge of it and mail it. The following day—Sunday—was rainy and stormy. No service was held. Late in the afternoon I took occasion to walk out in the village, and mailed the letter. On Monday morning, as we separated, he charged me not to forget the letter. I replied that I had mailed it. He remarked, "I never mail a letter nor go for my mail on the Sabbath." From that day to this—more than forty years—it has been a fixed principle with the writer of this to let the government, in carrying its mails on Sunday, do its own violation of the holy Sabbath without my patronage on that day. Speaking to me once of some peculiar duties, I remarked that there seemed something in the work undignified in a preacher. Without looking at me—he was looking over some paper—he said, "I have no dignity myself." Since then I have tried to do my duty as a Christian gentleman, as pastor and a preacher, and let dignity take care of itself.

J. D. Newsom.

"Character."

In the very midst of his eventful life, when the missiles of the enraged Roman Church fell thick and fast, Martin Luther gave to the world this remarkable truth: "The prosperity of a country depends, not on the abundance of its revenues, nor on the strength of its fortifications, nor on the beauty of its public buildings, but it consists in the number of its cultivated citizens, in its men of education, enlightenment, and character. Here are to be found its true interests, its chief strength, its real power."

No greater truth than this has ever been written; and the history of Rome, with all her majestic strength, and of Greece, with her arts and letters, and of Babylon, with all her ancient wonders, is but a record of the birth, life and death of nations whose ideal of manhood and womanhood was other than purity of character. History and our own experience prove that men and women of high moral excellence not only wield the greater influence in life, but also command the homage and respect of all mankind; while, on the other hand, just the reverse is true. A man or a woman of debased principles, whose ideal of manhood or womanhood is no nobler or purer than his own character, and whose actions spring spontaneously, not from a love of truth or virtue, has been in all ages, and is to-day, the baneful curse of the world. Wielding an influence born of a depraved heart and of corrupt mind, his life has always been marked by infinite mischief to mankind. Character is property of priceless value. It is the noblest of possessions. In it are embodied honesty, reputation, virtue, respect of men, favor of God, and love of mankind. From its possession the hero and the statesman come. The brightest luminaries of virtue shine to lighten the world and to dispel the darkness of sin.

Character is formed from the details of life. Not a day—yea, not an hour—passes but that it is disciplined either for good or for evil. That which is so small in life as often to be passed by as unworthy of our attention, is but a necessary part of its great being. No act, however trivial, but has its train of consequences; no hair, however small, but has the power to cast a shadow. Wise indeed is the saying of Mr. Shimmelpenick's mother: "Never give way to what is little; or by that little, however you may despise it, you are practically governed." As character is made up of the minute circumstances of life, then it is true that wealth, education, high birth, talent, or even honesty itself, is not an essential attribute of high character. From the cottages of the humble and the obscure there have come the brightest luminaries of virtue that adorn our nation's history. Men, surrounded by penury and want, possessing only their frugality and honesty and industry, have maintained and exhibited the highest standard of true manhood, while, on the other hand, wealth in the possession of men, lacking these essential principles of true manhood, has been the cause of infinite harm to themselves and others. The advice which Burns' father gave him is the best. He says:

"He bade me act a manly part, though I never had a farthing;
For without an honest, manly heart, no man was worth regarding."

As character is made up of the minute circumstances of life, then it is true that man is the architect of circumstances rather than the creature of circumstances. Brick and mortar will remain as they are, because they have no power inherent within themselves to produce change. They will remain, through all eternity, brick and mortar, unless acted upon by some external force; unless an architect makes something out of them. While one man will build a dingy hovel, another man from the same material will build a beautiful palace. Thus it is in the great human family. One member will build a hovel, while another member, possessing those stirling qualities—integrity, honesty, and frugality—will rear an edifice of character, colossal in form, and perfect throughout.

As character is made up of the minute circumstances of life, then no character is formed of itself, but rather is the reward of earnest effort and diligent labor. Man is so constituted that from the very nature of his being there arises a constant need of self-control and self-discipline. With a temper to be controlled, natural passions to be regulated, and the many temptations of the evil one to be overcome, all of which are inveterate foes to true manhood, every effort to arrive at a higher standard of character must of necessity be marked by internal conflicts, the victory of which is inspiring indeed. "Mabry."

Preaching the Gospel—No 2.

Truth and personality were noted in my former treatise as requisite element of true gospel preaching. In this I shall note some errors to be guarded against in the general style. All fustian, rant and bombast should be relegated to mere pretenders, and, together with the "holy nasal twang" and "droning whine," avoided as contagious diseases, which, if contracted, are sure death to honesty and sincerity; and without these virtues failure is foregone. Vain, useless repetitions are intensely trying to an intelligent auditor. Why a sane man, with a fair degree of intelligence, should preface every sentence and minor division of a sermon with a senseless, meaningless, "I want to say," passes comprehension. The query always suggests itself to my mind, Why don't you say it? "No one hinders you." This now so common expression, mere padding, should be buried with the "as it were" and "Ah, my brethren, ah!" What a wonderful array of clerical mourners would attend its funeral!

Then we have the expletive style, as viz.: "Now, my brethren and friends, if you will carefully and prayerfully give this subject before us in this morning discourse that due consideration its momentous importance merits, it will richly repay you for the time and attention you give it, for it is exceedingly important," and so on like a blind mule on the lever of a mortar mill, moving in an endless circle grinding mud. I always think of the "house that Jack built," and the ox, malt, knife, cat, rat, etc. Only the author of this thrilling episode does add a new object for every repetition that carries with it an idea. The comparison is decidedly in favor of Jack's wonderful house as against this kind of preaching.

Next, I deprecate the declamatory style. It can be said of this, if the speaker be a fair elocutionist, that it is less trying to the congregation than the two preceding mentioned. They can, at least, have the consolation that his speech has an end, and he will make the landing safely, with none of the cargo seriously endamaged. But it kills growth and permanently arrests development in the preacher. Better by far for him that he forget his carefully worded speech and spill his dignity. It is the crystallized style when once the hexagons or cubes have adjusted themselves by the laws of chemical affinity, they are there to remain throughout time. The law of thought is analogous. Beware! What may be termed the smoky, murky style always evokes a sigh, if not a groan, for deliverance therefrom. From the sesquipedalian, polysyllabic heights of gloomy, portentous, misty, involved nothingness the preacher, like a giant of the mist, hurls bags of wind into vacant space. Vox et preterea nihil. With mingled feelings of doubt, anguish and despair the auditor is either lost in the convolution, or helplessly flounders about seeking the beginning and end of these rhetorical labyrinths.

The positive rules for preaching, I said, most excellent Theophilus, were few and simple, and are rather to be indicated than given directly. Be patient, brave, honest and sincere. Follow your own style as you follow your nose—right straight on. Endeavor to improve your own way of doing things, but don't graft some other's way on it. There is much for you and me to learn between the many Conferences and till the judgment day. S. J. Davies.

Holiness, Perfection, Sanctification.

These three words being used as synonyms, simply to mean entire consecration to the service of God, it is necessary to examine what our church means by an entire consecration. This is not simply the outward act, as I understand it, but a full surrender of the soul, embracing sensibilities, intellect, and will. We are taught by our Lord Jesus Christ that the Holy Spirit will take up his abode in us, and guide us in all truth, if we make this surrender. If we yield to the guidance of the Spirit, we need no more sin; nor, indeed, can we sin while so guided. This destroys the heresy that we are bound or compelled to sin, so long as we are in the flesh.

Again, by this act of consecration we devote for time and eternity our entire being; but in so doing it is a voluntary act, and while yielding entirely to the direction of the Holy Spirit, we become partakers of the divine nature, and have power with God as children by adoption. This consecration being a voluntary act, and not forced upon us, we retain our identity or personality as clearly as before the act; and now, by an exercise of the will, we may withdraw from the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and undertake to use our own judgment. When this is done, the weakness of the flesh may lead us into sin as surely as before the act of consecration. This abrogates the idea of man in the flesh being on a sinless plane, or, in other words, living without danger of sinning.

The great danger of this error is, that one entertaining this idea of his own religious state becomes too good to sin, too wise to err, and hence, being above other men, he needs no teaching.

A want of charity towards others, who differ in opinion, and wincing at the slightest intimation that he may be mistaken, character'z: many who profess sanctification. Hence let us, as followers of Christ, beware lest we fall into temptation, remembering that while we abide in Christ and he in us, we need not sin, but by our own will we may yield to temptation, and fall into sin; not bound to sin, but always liable to sin. EDITORS.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Miss Pauline Stafford, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference.

I had planned for this week an article on Parsonage and Home Mission Work in our North Mississippi Conference, but the following editorial from Our Homes impressed me so strongly that I felt it best to give our space to that. If all our women read the organ of our society, there would be no need to reprint Miss Helm's appeal, but so many neglect to subscribe for our valuable little paper that it is possible some may read this article in the Advocate who would never see it in any other way.

Since copy was sent for last week's P. and H. M. column, I have received the name of Bessie Lucil Mitchell as a member of the baby roll from Pleasant Grove Auxiliary.

Mrs. H. W. Foote.

Who Is to Blame?

Whether our treasury is empty or full when the call comes for help, depends on whether or not you pay your dues. It depends on the zeal and activity of the treasurers of the auxiliaries in collecting and forwarding dues.

This is a heavy responsibility, for the amount not collected and forwarded may be the funds needed to enable us to help several homeless preachers, whose wives and children are sickening and dying from exposure, while they are trying to stand to their post and give the gospel to sinners. Put it this way: Take one case out of many. Here is a man in a Mission Conference, at a place where there are few Christians and a whole community of sinners, who would be literally without the gospel if he were not there to preach it. The church feels this. He feels it with his whole heart. But the only roof that he can place over his family leaks in every part. He makes application to our society for aid, asking for, perhaps, only one hundred dollars with which to purchase lumber, proposing to take upon himself the extra work of building. The family keep well for a while. He waits hopefully until one of his children dies and another lies ill. His heart is divided. Go away? Where can he go, even if willing to be a deserter? He has spent all that he has to live in this poor way. He waits anxiously.

The treasurer of this auxiliary and that does not find time to collect, the importance of it does not press upon her conscience; and the members feel no concern about paying unless called on, or forget it in the multiplicity of duties.

Quite a number of auxiliaries are behind in dues. Every one knows that it is the fewest number that pay up all promptly. The result is that there is no money to give to this poor, trustful brother, whose grief for the loss of his children is perhaps aggravated by a feeling of self-accusation.

Who is to blame for this? Is not the one dollar withheld by the member of vital importance? And if you be the treasurer, consider how weighty a matter was that five dollars which you failed to collect, because many others also failed.

To say that five hundred auxiliaries can get behind in dues until it averages five dollars each, is a low count; yet the total amounts to two thousand five hundred dollars—enough to relieve twenty-five men, situated as the one mentioned. An average of ten dollars to each of the five hundred societies, as an accumulation of the back dues left unpaid for two or three years, would come nearer the fact, and show that five thousand dollars which is due him is being withheld from the treasury of the Lord. If you owe but one dollar of this, you are guilty of the whole, and of the failure to do his work resulting therefrom.

Go pay what you owe, however small or large the amount may be. Pay at once, and urge your treasurer to remit, without delay, to the Conference treasurer, that it may reach her before March 20 and be ready for the calls waiting for response.

Something Wrong.

If every time you get into some little trouble you get the pouts and wish you were dead, you may rest assured there is something sadly wrong in your experience. Trials are essential to a state of probation, and if you are not willing by the grace of God to endure the trials essential as a disciplinary preparation for heaven, then you are sadly out of harmony with the divine will. Paul once, for a little while, thought it would be better to depart and be with Jesus. He was sorely tried, but this desire for his heavenly home was not brought about by trials, temptations and persecutions. In the place of being discouraged by the severe trials and persecutions which he was called to endure, he boldly proclaimed that "he glorified in tribulations." Through the abundant grace of God we may all be like Paul. The thought of Paul being with Jesus was glorious, but, if possible, it was still more glorious to have from his pen the utterance, "I glory in tribulations."—Christian Standard. (Philadelphia.)

Self-Examination.

Self-examination is profitable. It is easy to examine others. I, myself, am good to see the faults of others, but every little while I have to stop and examine myself and say: "Moody, what are your faults?" It is salt, but it is hard to give yourself a thorough examination.

But I tell you to examine yourselves. You will find the best way to do it is mapped out in the Bible. I would not give a snap of my finger for you, even if you lead in your examinations, if you are not truthful and can not be trusted.

I once had a terribly hard thing to do in Chicago. I found myself jealous of a certain minister, and I determined to cure myself. I invited him to preach, and then I advertised and filled the church. I took a back seat and made my human nature reform. Pretty soon I began to like the man, and have liked him ever since. No man can ever get a grip on the conscience if he is possessed with jealousy.—D. L. Moody.

The Ministry of Small Trials.

Nothing is of more importance, if we would rapidly grow good, than the habit of making all the petty trials, annoyances and griefs of every-day occurrence a means of uniting the will more fully with God's. This is the true mission of trials, and only as we use them to this high end are we using them aright. Alas! most people find it a very long and difficult lesson. Nevertheless it can assuredly be learned. The trifling disappointments and sorrows, the crossings of our will or inclination which come so constantly, may yield, each of them, not a trifling gain; but the total sum shall be glorious indeed. Every time we utter down deep within a hearty "Amen" to any of these minute manifestations of God's will, the union between us and God is made a little closer.

Prayer is the door forever open between earth and heaven. Sooner than sound can reach a human ear through this lower atmosphere, the longing desire of the spirit rises to the heart of the eternal Friend. Whether we believe it or not, we are living in an invisible world, where our wishes are understood before our words are spoken.—Lucy Laroom.

Boil down the religion of some people and you will find that it consists in going to church and patting themselves on the head for going.—Ram's Horn.

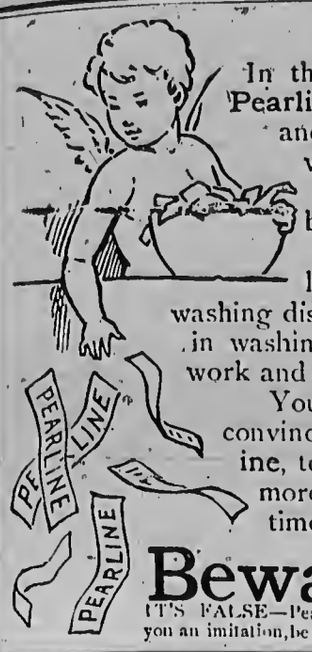
Consider what Christ's gospel is. Centred at the heart of it is the truth that God lives, that God loves, that God saves.—Charles A. Berry.

Too many people revise the Lord's prayer to read, "My will be done on earth even as thine is done in heaven."

No matter what business the Christian is in, he has no business to be in it if Christ is not at the head of it.

If some people would think twice before they speak, they would keep still most of the time.

Forget mistakes; organize victory out of mistakes.—F. W. Robertson.



Diffuse Help!

In this way! When you see how Pearline has helped you, tell others and let it help them. Where a woman is trying to do housework in the old, hard-working, rubbing way, it's actual charity to tell her about Pearline. Perhaps she uses it for scrubbing, washing dishes, etc., but can't believe that in washing clothes it can save so much work and wear without doing harm.

Your personal experience might convince her. That would help Pearline, to be sure—but think how much more it would help her, by saving time and strength and real money.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled: if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 416 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

WHAT IS LOVE?

BY MARY M'GEE SNELL.

For others' sake to longer wear
The garment old, that they more bare
May feel the warmth of robe you give,
And have a braver heart to live—
Nor show that you yourself deny
By any half regretful sigh.
Herein is love.

For others' sake to hush the moan
And speak in gentle, cheerful tone;
For others' sake to hide your tears,
And keep unspoken all your fears;
For others' sake to be quite strong
When sore beset by foe and wrong.
Herein is love.

For others' sake to seek to bear
The heaviest part of all life's care;
Nor show the weary ache and strain
That tells on heart and soul and brain;
But in it all to seem at rest,
And not as standing any test.
Herein is love.

For others' sake to make life sweet,
Though thorns may press into your feet;
For others' sake to walk each day
As though joy helped you all the way,
While in your heart may be a grave
That makes it hard to be so brave.
Herein is love.

For others' sake this brought to earth
The benediction of His birth;
For others' sake He suffered all
That into human life could fall;
For others flowed the crimson tide,
For others he was crucified.
Herein is love.

Robert Roberts.

Among the distinguished preachers of Wales we find the name written above. He was a member of a most remarkably pious family. His father and mother became members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church, then beginning its existence in that kingdom. He was one of thirteen children, and was born on the twelfth of September, 1762. He was married about 1783, and began to preach at the close of 1787. When he had a wife and two children.

Will you pardon me, Bro. Clark, for saying it was just so with myself? I married young and did not want to preach, and did not attempt it till God had broken up my home and left me disconsolate, with saddened heart and with two sweet little children. Then, there, the Spirit of God being upon me, I yielded, and began in my twenty-third year to lay aside all the honors and pleasures of this world, and as Robert Roberts did, I tried to preach the gospel of the Son of God to the poor of this earth. God has helped me at home and abroad, among friends and strangers everywhere, to present the truth of God's Word to all with whom I have come in contact. I have made it the rule of my life (as my dear Father did before me) to talk about the realities of gospel truth to every person I met. On the railroad train I have never failed to reprove, admonish and warn all I met.

I remember during the war, one night, in the dark, a soldier was swearing most profanely. I put my hand kindly on his shoulder, and said, "Would you swear that way if your mother was present?"

"No, sir," said he.

"Excuse me; I did not know that you were a preacher."

"Nor do you know now; but please let me beg you not to dishonor your tongue and breath so much."

Will you believe me, in my work for over fifty years in the ministry, in every attempt to interest all I met privately in this life, I never was repelled but by two parties, and before I finished with them I perceived that each one of these had been using whisky too freely?

Once on the Mississippi river I asked an intelligent and highly educated Jewish lady why a woman refused to give a drink of water to the thirsty Jesus at the well in Samaria. She answered kindly, and before we separated I read to her the account of it as mentioned in the Gospel of John.

"If we want a field of labor,
We can find it anywhere."

L. L. Chevalier, superintendant of Sunday-school: "The Rev. J. White Davis will preach in the Vidalia Methodist Church, March 8. Mrs. O. la Baker, president of the W. C. T. U. of Natchez, Miss., visited this town in the cause of temperance with her son, Rev. Bliss Baker; addressed the children very feelingly; assisted the ladies of Vidalia in organizing the L. P. L. and the Y. W. C. T. U. The Sunday-school is progressing; many are taking an interest in the work. God bless our little town!"

Rev. R. C. Grace, O la circuit: "We have been kindly received on our new circuit, and our good people have furnished us with a comfortable little home here in O la, and we are hard at work trying to build up our new circuit. We know that we will do a good work this year, because the Lord is with us. We are now building a splendid church here in O la. Commenced the building the twenty-ninth of January. If the Lord will, we shall have our church ready for dedication in a few weeks. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. R. F. Witt: "We are indeed nicely situated this year at Brandon. We continue to receive so many nice things that are so much appreciated by us, and that enter into the preacher's real living, that we hardly know how to return our gratitude to such a generous people. They are so kind and social that to be introduced to anyone of them is to know them. We hope that, under God, we may be worthy of their kindness. Last Sunday was a royal day with us in Brandon. We had the agent of Millsaps College with us. He certainly interested our people, and they gave him a very nice collection. I have heard a great many lecturers, and some of the best in the United States, and I think he compares favorably with any of them. He can blend humor and instruction about as well as I have ever heard it done. Our people are very anxious for him to come to Brandon again. I think every appointment in the two Conferences in the State will be greatly benefited by having the agent, Dr. T. S. West, with them. May God bless our work along all lines!"

Rev. L. J. Jones, P. C., Raleigh circuit: "We wish to say a few words in regard to our work. We have been very kindly received by the good people that we have been appointed to serve. Our first quarterly meeting was held the first and second of February, although the weather was very disagreeable. Every church on the work was represented. Bro. W. W. Simmons was present, and gave us two excellent sermons. We felt highly honored in having him to instruct us in the business affairs of Raleigh circuit, both spiritually and financially. We believe that the people of Raleigh circuit are wide awake in meeting the demands of their preacher and family, and we are glad to know that they have made considerable progress financially. They raise their produce principally at home; and now, if we can get them to make their religion that they profess a business transaction, we claim the victory when it comes to meeting the demands that are made upon us. Will some brother please send us a copy of the Minutes of our last Conference, as we failed to receive them? We have looked for several copies of the Minutes. My members have asked for a copy. This is the first year we have failed to get them. Success to the ADVOCATE."

Rev. B. P. Patterson, Abbeville: "Our first Quarterly Conference was a success, spiritually and financially. Abbeville Church leads off admirably, having paid nearly one-third on pastor's salary, assessment in full for foreign missions, and Bishops' fund. She will pay home missions and Conference claiments this quarter. Abbeville has struck the key-note, and our country churches will help to raise the tune. We remit to our treasurer $10 for missions to-day, as a token to our dear friends that we have not forgotten them. We can pray for the success of the gospel with better heart, having something invested in it. Let's work on the motto of our deceased secretary, 'The world for Christ in every home, and something from every member.' Our little girl canvassers have taken thirty subscribers to the World for Christ. I have something for every member to do, and it's my work to see that they do it. We must not let our soldiers stand still under fire; they will stampede, if we do. Dr. Cameron was here in his happiest mood. The power and unction accompanied the Word. The love-feast was very enjoyable. Let all our members attend the Conferences. They won't be scolded or worried on the delicate question of finance. It's singular, but we didn't take a public collection. Our faithful assistant collectors anticipated our call for these claims. Our district paid only 53 per cent. on foreign missions last year; Sardis paid 80 per cent. Brethren, what do you say?"

A GOOD EXAMPLE

Bro. Thomas, our pastor at Starkville, held a service in the interest of the American Bible Society, and raised money enough to put a man in the field to canvass the county. The work is now being done, and, to the surprise of all, the colporteur has found in the town of Starkville many people without a copy of the Word of God. By a little effort on the part of Bro. Thomas, the town of Starkville and the county of Oktibbeha will be thoroughly canvassed and all persons who are destitute will be supplied with the Word of God.

If our pastors in the larger towns would make proper effort, many counties in our Conference could be canvassed this year; and what better work could be done?

R. A. BURROUGHS.

It is by all odds the best liniment. Mr. Chas. Metzger 2?8 Geyer Ave., St. Louis, Mo., is of the same opinion. He says: "Salvation Oil is the best remedy we have ever used in our family. It is the best remedy on earth."

We would get more answers to our prayers than we do if we would confine our requests to those things which we really want. Many a man prays for a baptism from above who would run if he saw it coming; and not a few of those who plead so eloquently that their lips may be touched with a coal from off the altar, would faint dead away if they saw an angel go for the tongs.

Like flakes of snow that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly unperceived events of life succeed one another. As the snow gathers together, so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile produces a sensible change; no single action creates, however it may exhibit, a man's character.

THE HOLMAN BIBLE IN THREE STYLES

$1.25, $1.75, AND $2.45.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.75 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to March, '97. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.75. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We have also an edition of this Bible in smaller type than our $1.75 edition, which we sell at the low price of $1 25. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Marvelous Results.

A LITTLE GIRL, PARTIALLY PARALYZED, CURED BY THE ELECTROPOISE.

SINCE SHE BEGAN USING IT SHE HAS IMPROVED IN EVERY WAY—HER VOICE REGAINED BY ITS USE.

I bought an Electropoise in July for my little granddaughter. She has been partially paralyzed since birth. When she was put upon her feet her ankles would turn; she was very nervous and could never hold her straight. Since she has been using the Electropoise one ankle is straight and the other one is getting all right. She is not nervous now, except occasionally, and she holds her head like any other child. She can feed herself all right now. She could not talk plain, but now she talks as plain as most children of her age. She has improved in every way. She is now 6 years old.

The New Interpreter of Christianity.

Our readers have doubtless noticed for some months past frequent quotations in the ADVOCATE and other papers from "Ian Maclaren." We suppose, however, that very few of them know who "Ian Maclaren" is. The following, from Zion's Herald, gives some interesting information concerning this new luminary in the literary sky. We shall have more to say of him at another time.

Ian Maclaren is the greatest literary marvel of the age. A year ago he had written practically nothing; but the sales of "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" have exceeded 100,000 copies, and "The Days of Auld Lang Syne" is selling with equal rapidity. Upon a recent Sunday we read the small volume entitled, "The Upper Room," the most delightful and discriminative interpretation of Christ and the mind that was in Him that we have read for many a day. A prayerful and critical study of that little book will bring to everyone who does so a larger and more appropriable Christ, and would do much towards removing the unreal and morbid impressions of the world's Redeemer which even too many ministers are cherishing.

"Ian Maclaren" is Rev. John Watson, of Sefton Park Presbyterian Church, Liverpool. He is forty-five years of age. He was educated at the New College, Edinburgh. He studied the Waverly Novels with their prefaces, introductions and notes, and became saturated with Scott's spirit. Another stage of his development was marked by the name of Thomas Carlyle, and still another by that of Matthew Arnold. Four authors he singles out as his masters—Scott, Carlyle, Matthew Arnold and Seeley, the author of "Ecce Homo."

Although he writes his sermons, Mr. Watson does not read them, and he is a speaker of extraordinary force and power. He is a most assiduous worker and never loiters or trifles. Though so successful with his pen, he believes none the less that his supreme life-work is in the ministry and to preach the gospel of Christ. He has arranged to visit the United States next year to be heard in our pulpits and on our platforms.

Max O'Rell in New Orleans.

"Max O'Rell" (Paul Blouet), the celebrated French author, lecturer and wit, lectured in Odd Fellows' Hall, in this city, on Tuesday night, the tenth, for the benefit of Centenary College, his services having been secured through the instrumentality of the Methodist women of New Orleans. We go to press too early to say more than this in this issue. A more extended notice will appear next week.

The Bible and the Higher Critics.

Our Baptist friends and orthodox Christians generally are much exercised just now over the extreme and unorthodox views of President Harper, of Chicago University, with reference to the inspiration of the Bible. It is greatly to be deplored that so prominent an educator should betray unsoundness of belief in a matter of such vital importance to true religion. To state some of his conclusions, Dr. Harper, who, like many others of his class, claims to belong to the best school of the higher critics, accepts the theory of a gradual development of religious truth, believes that "the account given us in Genesis is not history in the sense that we use the word history today, the Bible being inspired only in the same way in which the history of Israel was inspired;" and asserts that the Bible is imperfect, even containing "inaccuracies of theological conception."

While Dr. Harper's attitude toward the Bible represents that of a number of the higher critics in Europe and in America, not all, nor even a majority of them, have gone to such absurd and hurtful extremes. That many people in this age of enlightenment entertain crude, superstitious views with regard to the inspiration of the Bible, is not to be denied. The average Christian knows very little about the date, authorship and authenticity of the several books composing the Word of God. Nor is he prepared to enter fully into the merits of the questions now engaging the attention of the so-called advanced theologians. Since there is a good deal of truth in the saying "that a little learning is a dangerous thing," those who have neither the opportunity nor the facilities for investigating and settling questions about the origin and trustworthiness of the Scriptures will do well to hold fast to present convictions thereupon, and be cautious about accepting the unreasonable and unsifted conclusions of the destructive critics. Fortunately, the majority of believers are not troubled by doubts as to the miraculous origin of the Scriptures. Should the belief of the masses in the divine inspiration of the Bible ever be shaken or weakened, a speedy decay of faith and morality would be the inevitable result. Who would feel like adhering to the doctrines of a book whose authority and trustworthiness are questionable? The "Old Book," however, which has withstood the shock of so many centuries, and outlived the attacks of countless enemies, will emerge from the searching tests now being applied to it more triumphant than ever.

Since unreasoning ignorance is never profitable, but, on the contrary, occasions much confusion and error, it is of the highest importance that the Scriptures be divested of superstitious charm, and that they be regarded as, in the main, subject to the same tests applied to other volumes. But not until reason and historical research establish the fact of gross inaccuracy and lack of authority will there be need to look elsewhere for the foundations of religious belief. Though the drift and tone of higher criticism is unquestionably bad, some good will result from it, if under its influence the Christian world is led to clearer, more correct views of the nature and manner of inspiration.

What if it should be proved—a thing not yet done—that Moses wrote only a part of the Pentateuch, the rest being the work or compilation of a later hand, the truthfulness of its contents would by no means be invalidated. The account of creation and the Ten Commandments are alone witness enough that an Omniscient Being guided the sacred scribe. It is the height of absurdity to suppose that in an unscientific age of the world, a semi-barbarous people, such as were the Hebrews before and during the time of Moses, could have evolved and put on record an account of the origin of the world which modern science can not gainsay, or that a nation just emerged from slavery could have originated a system of ethics and jurisprudence without a parallel for excellence.

Nothing is more gratuitous than to assume that because a book, sacred or secular, contains repetitions, differencies in style, verbiage, etc., it is the work of more than one writer; as if, forsooth, writers of genius were limited to stereotyped methods of expression. What writer does not occasionally vary his style and phraseology and repeat his statements? By the methods of analysis in vogue among the higher critics almost any book, ancient or modern, could be proved to be the work of several authors. Is it possible that age and environment have no influence upon an author's style, that he must always use the same imagery and phraseolgy? The affirmative, however, we must believe, if we accept all the conclusions of these microscopic analysts.

Dr. Harper and those of his school maintain that the only difference between the inspiration which guided the writers of the Bible and that felt by other men who have written things more or less true, is a difference in degree. Exactly in line with such unorthodox thinkers is a certain divine of this city, who, in a sermon recently delivered, is quoted as saying that "Darwin and Edison were as truly inspired in their way as Isaiah and St. Paul." Such a view we believe to be both erroneous and hurtful. While admitting that every intellectual gift is from God, we hold that nothing short of a supernatural revelation can account for the origin, in the remote past, of a book which teaches a form of religion so pure and lofty that even the most highly civilized nations have not yet been able to attain unto it. All other books the world has outgrown, or is fast outgrowing. The so-called Sacred Books of the East are so far inferior to the Bible as not to be worthy of comparison with it. The productions of the greatest scientists, philosophers, poets, moralists, historians and law-givers of this and other ages, while admired for their beauty of style and imagery, for their profundity of thought and originality, are found to be inadequate to meet the wants and needs of an advancing civilization. Scholars and scientists of the present are constantly shifting their positions, and adopting new theories. Why should there be such reluctance about believing that a miraculous influence directed the sacred writers, since the Scriptures plainly teach it, and since in no other rational way can we account for the wonderful nature and infallibility of their contents? Inconsistent indeed is that skepticism which believes in miracles of healing, of raising the dead, etc., but denies the need or probability of a miraculous revelation of God's will to man.

Anent the manner of inspiration, we can never hope to penetrate further than the light given us upon this point by the Scriptures themselves, which declare that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." The word in the original translated "inspiration" signifies the "breathing of God" upon the soul, and is not used elsewhere in the New Testament. Again, the Bible asserts of its origin that "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." What stronger statement could we have of the direct and supernatural influence of the Holy Spirit upon man in the production of the biblical record? God might have written his Word by his own hand, without the agency or intervention of man, but he did not choose to do so. He ordained it that the Word of Life should be both written down and preached by fallen, fallible men. Since in the penning and proclamation of the divine message he has deigned to employ human agency, why should individuality appear in the one case, and not in the other? The "mechanical theory" of inspiration makes man a mere automaton in the hands of Deity. That Moses, Joshua, David, Isaiah, and all the other sacred penmen, were under the immediate influence of the Holy Spirit, we most heartily believe. To affirm, however, that the guidance of the Spirit extended not only to the thought, to the substance of the truth and doctrine communicated, but also to the very words and forms of the sentences, is an unwarranted and unnecessary conclusion, and, moreover, one beset with innumerable difficulties. On the contrary, we have the strongest evidence for believing that God made large use of human intelligence and reason in the work of recording the truth. The theory of a gradual development of the Pentateuch from a number of older documents is not only disproved by recent archæological discoveries, but is, moreover, in direct opposition to the teaching of the Master, who gave the most emphatic authority to the writings ascribed to Moses. If then we call in question the authenticity of the Pentateuch, we are brought to the extremity of denying the divinity of Christ.

The fact that the Bible contains some inaccuracies, interpolations, and seemingly irreconcilable contradictions, is perfectly consistent with its purpose, and the manner of its origin and preservation. In order that it should have come down to us entirely free from error, every author, scribe, translator, editor, and proof-reader who has had anything to do with it, must have been endowed with more than human intelligence. God, however, has endowed man with reason; and in all his dealings with us, he teaches us to use this noble faculty. Where reason fails, his Spirit comes to reveal. The same God who created man, and directs the course of human events, has watched over and preserved his Holy Word from serious error. Taking the passages recognized to be spurious, the inaccuracies about which some make so much ado, and the contradictions altogether, they do not affect a single vital doctrine of either the Old or New Testament.

Such high authorities as Professors Fritz Hommel and A. H. Sayce assert, that as the result of recent cuneiform discoveries in the East, that we have history, and not fiction or legend, in the narratives of Genesis, and that a large part, at any rate, of the Pentateuch, must go back to the Mosaic age. The so-called "literary analysis" of the books of Moses they pronounce a philosophical mirage.

The Bible is "imperfect," we admit, in the sense of not conforming to the empirical methods and theories of the higher critics, in the sense that it leaves our curiosity unsatisfied on many points. Yet it is perfect in the sense that it teaches all man needs to know about God and the way of salvation; in the sense that it embodies the loftiest conception of God, the purest form of religion, the loftiest system of ethics the world has ever seen. The fulfillment of prophecy, the remarkable accordance of sacred with profane history, and, lastly, the gracious results attending the preaching of the Word, and faith in its promises, seal the truth of its claim to a miraculous inspiration.

A New Book.

THE WORLD AND THE WRESTLERS: PERSONALITY AND RESPONSIBILITY. By Hugh Miller Thompson, Bishop of Mississippi (Protestant Episcopal); being the Bohlen Lectures for 1895. New York: Thomas Whittaker.

Mr. Bohlen's purpose in founding the lectureship that bears his name is expressed in the deed of trust setting apart $10,000, the income from which is to be used in securing annually a lecture course after the plan of, and upon the same subjects as, the Bampton foundation, has hardly been realized in these lectures, or even in those of the distinguished clergyman who opened the course in 1875—Rev. Phillips Brooks. The lectures have always been popular in character, and as far as we are acquainted with them do not attempt any serious contribution to theological scholarship or biblical learning. The subject chosen by Bishop Thompson is similar to that of Mr. Illingworth, the Bampton lecturer for 1894. The difference we have noticed is apparent by a comparison of the two volumes.

Turning to Bishop Thompson's book, we find it a very poetically-written discourse upon Genesis xxxii, 24-30. The author is full of rich practical remark that shows no little insight into affairs and the human heart. He discusses his theme in four lectures, i. e.: I. Personality of Man; II. Personality of God; III. Responsibility of God; IV. Responsibility of Man. God is an "I" and man is an "I". The fact involves responsibility. Because of personality there must be responsibility. The fact of personality involves relationship. "The secret of the burden and sorrow of our years is that we must say 'I.'" "This terrible religion of the Old. Testament and the New keeps on, as it has kept on for all these awful centuries of human story, insisting on the 'I.' What is thy name? What is thy meaning? What is thy character?" "Man must have his Peniels where he meets God face to face and lives. He must have his nights of wrestling, and bear the brand of the awful touch burned into him body and soul, or he has not reached man's station in the world." Man's responsibility is to wrestle and to suffer, and thus to work out his destiny. God has not evaded the same lot, but has lived it upon our earth. The Bishop is not at all afraid of either anthropomorphism or the Nicene Creed, and traces with skill the development of the idea of God in the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Saul's question, "Who art thou, Lord?" and Jacob's, "Tell me, I pray thee, thy name?" are the same. If God wounds, it is to save; so that Jacob halting, and Paul shading his sore eyes, alike bear in the body the marks of the Lord.

The book is fresh and suggestive, if not profound, and not its least merit is the sturdy blows the author plants upon modern doubt, higher criticism, the Parliament of Religions, and various fads and shams. Some of the Bishop's confreres will hardly read with complacency sentences such as these from Lecture III: "It is only, I take it, the same desire to shield the Almighty from responsibility—a very amiable, if a very weak and superfluous desire—which prompts some good people to hold such notions as restorationism—that is, that evil men and devils will find another chance somewhere, in some other world of trial, and be all 'saved,' as they call it, some time; and still other good people to hold that all the unconverted will just pass into an eternal sleep, and only the righteous be immortal. I have no quarrel with the temper of these dreams, but they make no appeal to my intelligence, and rather seem impertinent."

F. S. P.

The W. C. T. U. Convention.

The Louisiana State Convention of the W. C. T. U., held last week at Monroe, was a decided success. The convention held its sessions in the immense Tabernacle which the enterprising people of Monroe built a year ago, no church edifice in the city being of sufficient dimensions to accommodate the crowds in attendance. Among the visiting celebrities were Miss Willard, Mrs. M. M. Snell and Miss Belle Kearney, all of whom were, of course, heard from on the platform. It is said that five hundred persons signed the pledge at the close of one of the services on Sunday. God bless the women in this noble work! Such work is needed everywhere, and nowhere more than in Louisiana.

Good for Congress.

The Romish Church, not content with the large appropriations, which it manages by one means or another to secure from certain State Legislatures, is exceedingly anxious to get its hands into the United States Treasury. During the present session of Congress it has made a persistent effort to secure appropriations to the amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to Catholic schools among the Indians. To the credit of Congress be it said that it refused these appropriations by a large majority.

NOTES.

We invite special attention to the notice of Dr. La Prade on our fifth page.

A correspondent of the Northwestern Christian Advocate gravely proposes that the Bishops of the M. E. Church shall be required to wear robes when officiating in public. If a Bishop, why not an elder? Why not all ministers? If robes, why not a prayer book? Why not candles? Why not out-Herod Herod himself in the way of mummery?

Fearn Mission.

Since Dec. 28, 1895, the following sums have been received for the support of Rev. Jno. Burruss, M. D., as a medical missionary in China, viz.: Rev. R. S. Woodward, $4; Rev. B. F. Jones, $5; Rev. I. L. Peebles, $10; Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., $5; Rev. V. V. Boone, $5. Reported previously, $976 85. Total amount received to date and forwarded to the Missionary Treasurer, $1,005 85.

It affords me very great pleasure to publish the following extracts from letters to me in regard to my nephew, Dr. Fearn, viz: From Mrs. W. R. Lambuth, Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 22, 1896: "Having received by this mail two very interesting letters from Dr. Fearn, we send them to you to read. Of course, you hear regularly from him, but we feel sure you would also enjoy these extra letters. Dr. Fearn's going to China is a source of great joy to us all. I am sure that he will do a great work there, as he seems so well fitted, spiritually and mentally, for such work. . . . You certainly should be gratified at having been instrumental in sending your nephew to China."

Again, this extract from a letter from Mrs. Nora Lambuth Park, dated Soochow, China, Jan. 20, 1896: "For the sake of my dear father now in heaven, I have for weeks felt impelled to write to you and thank you for having been the means in God's hands in sending Dr. Fearn to China, to our loved medical work and to us. We indeed feel that we have been greatly blessed in having him in our home, and he shows in his daily life and action that he lives very near the cross. His one burden seems to be that he can not lead souls to Christ; but I tell him one is not obliged to be able to talk in order to do that, but just living is as a sermon. He has so many duties that bring him into close contact with our native medical students, and they are much impressed with his earnest manner and great desire to help them. We are trying to take the best care possible of him, and so far he has kept comparatively well. His entire morning is given up to Chinese study, and to-day at noon he told us that his teacher had told him that he was making good progress, and then on his way home from the dispensary he overtook a man who seemed well disposed, and so he entered into conversation with him for about five minutes. One of the requirements at his next Conference examination will be a fifteen minutes' talk with some Chinaman; so you see that he is getting ready. Dr. Park and myself have both become very much attached to Dr. Fearn, and feel an interest in all he does and becomes. The one regret of my dear father's life was that no one ever came out from his own loved State to prepare to take his work. Now, I can not help but feel that in heaven he rejoices that one so well fitted for the work has at last come. May he be spared many, many years to do good work for the Savior!" C. G. ANDREWS.

Explanatory.

I desire to disclaim any intention, in my late statement about the management of the college, of placing Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard in a false position, either in denying his statement or in questioning his veracity. I am well satisfied that Bro. Sheppard had no purpose in the article to reflect upon me. My only purpose was to vindicate my management of the college, as the expression referred to was construed to my discredit by those not acquainted with the situation. Then the statement about the rent was substantially correct as Bro. Sheppard viewed it, but carried the impression that at no time had I paid the rent in full. I, however, placed the deficit too low, as I have learned since that $488 15 were allowed on rent instead of $300, so that altogether I paid in rent $1,911 85. I have too great appreciation of Bro. Sheppard to intentionally place him in a false attitude or to infer that he purposely made a wrong statement.

Do You Hear It?

Heed the warning: Quickly take
For weak nerves PRESTON'S HED-ACHE;
It soothes and tranquillizes pain,
And for your system is great gain.

A Word of Gratitude.

MR. EDITOR: Please let me say a word of gratitude to all who contributed, by word or deed, to our comfort and relief on account of our loss by fire. And, first of all, Mr. Editor, allow me to thank you for your words of kindness and generous donation of books, and especially the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible, and—ssh. This Bible more than fills the place of the nice one I lost. The following are the amounts received outside of my circuit: Mrs. Ida Miner and husband, $5; W. S. Crook, Sr., $10; Friends at Columbia, per C. F. Enery, $12.50; Dr. W. C. Black, $2.50; Rev. P. Howard, $2; Rev. G. W. Huff, $3; Rev. Jno. H. Foreman, $1; Rev. G. A. Kein, $1.

If anyone has sent money whose name does not appear in this list, they will greatly oblige us by notifying me at the postoffice given below.

This has been the severest trial of our life, take it all in all; and we say to all who have sympathized with us: Please be assured that you have the tenderest and warmest gratitude of our smitten hearts. Thanks, many thanks and blessings upon your hearts and homes. Your words of personal esteem and affection are as helpful to us as your deeds of kindness.

Some of our people here, though we are strangers among them, have shown their sympathy in a noble and generous manner. The most notable among them are those princely laymen: William Martin, H. C. Havens, T. C. Ruble, John B. Ramsey, and Uncle George Byrd. These brethren would be an honor to any pastoral charge or community.

We like our work, and love our people, and trust, by the grace of God, to serve them well. We beg all who pray to remember us at the throne of grace.

Yours, JAMES G. SIBLEY.

Some Corrections.

In the Minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Conference there are some inaccuracies too great to be passed over without correction.

In the column, "Value of parsonages," the parsonage at Boyce is valued at $1,000. This is at least $1,200 more than it is worth. My stub shows that I reported value, $800. In the column, "Value of other church property," I am set down as reporting nothing. My stub shows $2,000 as the value of other church property (the true figure). In the column "Number of Sunday-schools," Boyce and Colfax is credited with 15. My stub shows 3 (the real number).

Could I have made such a difference in the report I handed in and the stub? If I did, I want to know it, and I hereby promise the Conference and the whole church that I will be more careful in the future. If our worthy statistical secretary is to blame, I think he ought to make the same promise.

Accuracy ought to be worth something in our published Minutes.

I do not say I did not make the mistakes referred to above, but I do say, if I did, I want to know it, so that I can repent and be forgiven.

J. I. HOFFPAUIR.

Boyce, La., March 5, 1896.

That Correction.

MR. EDITOR: Please let me apologize to Bro. Galloway, who seems hurt over my correction in a recent ADVOCATE. I never thought of him in connection with the mistake; but all the copies—four—of my report at hand agreeing, I naturally excused myself. Had I known that it was my mistake, my correction would have differed only in that it would have named the blamable party. Such an appreciation of accuracy seems never to have occurred to Bro. Galloway. I want my people duly accredited, even at the risk of demonstrating that I am not infallible. H. M. ELLIS.

Education Day.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

By unanimous action of our last Conference, the second Sunday in April was "set apart as Education Day, at which time a sermon shall be preached in each charge on Christian education, with special reference to our Conference colleges."

Dr. Carter can not visit all the charges in our Conference. He will reach, during the year, as many as practicable. Let us aid him, but not depend upon him to do our work. By all means, let Education Day be observed; and should it prove to be an inclement day, let the next fine Sunday be given to this most important work.

Brethren, I am sure our hearts are in this matter, and a more opportune time than this has never come to us for improvement.

WM. H. LA PRADE,

"Reminiscences."

MR. EDITOR: I see from your paper, of the twenty-seventh ultimo, that you were kind enough to give place for a notice of the publication, in pamphlet form, of my "Reminiscences." I should have said that remittances, or letter of inquiry, may be made to Rev. R. W. Bailey, Conference colporter, at Jackson, Miss. Please continue the notice for two or three weeks; at the bottom of the note this: "Remittances can be made to Rev. R. W. Bailey, Conference colporter."

Let all who want this little book just enclose your postoffice address to Bro. Bailey, with the number of copies you desire, and soon as possible I will announce the publication, not to exceed twenty-five cents a copy.

Stuttering Cured.

I write in the interest of a friend and afflicted humanity. I witnessed the other day the cure of two young men who could not speak without stammering and stuttering, in an hour of this awful habit by Prof. G. W. Rudolph, Memphis, Tenn. It was wonderful to see those who all their lives stuttered speak with it. If you and others interested in afflicted humanity would call attention of the poor stutterers to Prof. Rudolph, 468 Poplar street, Memphis, Tenn., you would be the means of great blessing to them. Bro. R. is a Methodist preacher, worthy and reliable.

Will give full report later.

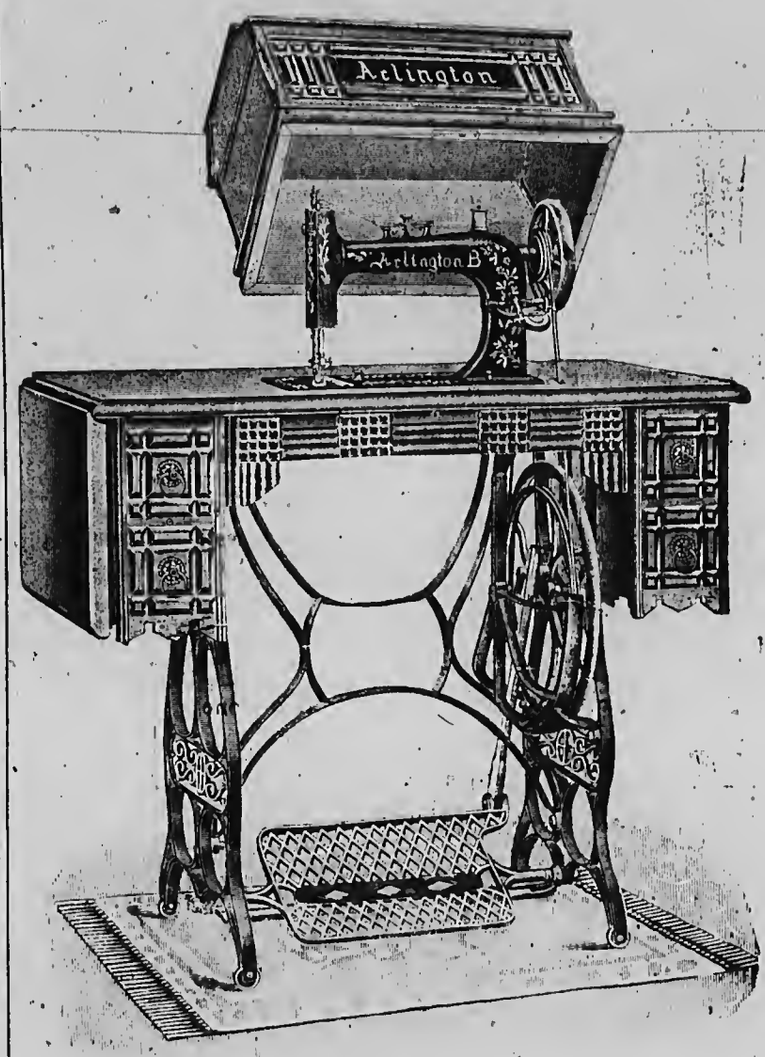
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20 50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to July, '97, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

HOME CIRCLE.

SOMEBODY'S MOTHER.

The woman was old and ragged and gray,
And bent with the chill of a Winter's day;
The streets were wet with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing and waited long—
Alone, uncared for, amid the throng
Of human beings who passed her by
Nor heeded the glance of her aged eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school let out,"
Came the boys, like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep.

Past the woman so aged and gray,
Hastened the children on their way;
Nor offered a helping hand to her,
So meek, so timid, afraid to stir,

Lest the carriage wheels or the horse's feet
Should crowd her down in the slippery street.
At last came one of the merry troop—
The gayest laddie of all the group:

He paused beside her and whispered low,
"I'll help you across if you wish to go."
Her aged hand on his strong young arm
She placed; and so, without hurt or harm,

He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong;
Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.

"She's somebody's mother, boys, you know,
For all she's aged and poor and slow:
And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother, you understand,
If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away."

And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said
Was, "God, be kind to the noble boy,
Who is somebody's son and pride and joy."

Help Your Wife.

A MAN'S PART IN GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

A man should first of all help his wife in planning her work. Let every husband give his wife the benefit of his practical business experience, and advise with her how she may best arrange and time her several duties that they may least conflict.

In the second place the husband should give the wife the full amount of money necessary properly to care for the home.

Third, he should see that she has the best tools that can be had to lighten her labor.

Fourth, he should by every possible means shorten her hours of labor. If he finds that she is obliged to work earlier and later than he, then he should at once give, or procure for her, such assistance as will make their working hours equal.

Fifth, realizing that for her labor she receives no direct compensation, he should, at the least, be careful to give continually that reward of cordial praise which costs him nothing and so much pleases her.

Finally, the man must recognize that many of the domestic duties are essentially proper to him, and not to the woman; such are all that requires great physical exertion. Therefore not only should proper implements be generously furnished for the woman's use, but all the materials she must use should be provided and made easily accessible. Plenty of coal, wood and kindlings should be kept near the place where they are to be burned, water should be supplied so as to be handy and abundant, plenty of hooks, shelves, closets, etc., should be arranged to the best advantage.

At house-cleaning time the man should either move, or get moved, the heavier articles of furniture; he should attend to the cleaning and putting down of carpets, the setting up of stoves and the like; in other words, he should assume the responsibility for all the heavier and more disagreeable duties connected with good housekeeping, and be willing on occasion to take a hand in those which are lighter.

But if he won't do these things that he ought to do, let him at least have grace enough to keep out of the woman's way while she is doing them for him, and refrain when they are done from rewarding his overworked helpmate with cross and complaining speech.—Good Housekeeping.

The Trying Times. For Mothers.

BY SUSAN TEALL PERRY.

These are the times that try men's souls, and they need all the cheer ~~and help~~ they can get from the dear ones in their homes. Father has worked hard and faithfully, oftentimes sacrificing his own pleasure to make his family comfortable and happy. He has provided not only the necessities for his loved ones, but many of the luxuries. Now comes the time when he is hard pressed; he wishes to keep up the generous spirit he has shown toward them always, but he finds that he must be just before he is generous. He is an honorable man, and he does not wish to embarrass himself with debts unnecessarily. Consequently he asks his family to retrench wherever they can, for it is hard to get even necessities now. Everything that is not really essential, he says, they must get along without.

The true wife and mother will put her shoulder to the wheel and help the head of the family bear his burden, and will curtail in household expenses whenever and wherever she can. Father has so much on his mind to annoy him these days, that if he shows irritability at the children's noise, or speaks in sharp tones, mother must not marvel at it. Rather try to keep the little ones mindful of father's added vexatious cares, and make them careful to be thoughtful of him rather than to call notice to the fact that father is so cross, and express surprise that he should be so. Home is, or should be, father's haven of rest; everything should be done, even by the youngest member of his family, to make his stay there as cheery and free from discordant sounds as possible. Show the elder children how they can aid in helping father, in different ways, out of the bad financial situation, by giving up cheerfully certain things they have been accustomed to have or to do, because it is hard now for father to get the money to pay for them any longer.

Keeping up a style of living for the sake of appearances, when it is on a false basis, will not ensure happiness and satisfaction for long. When we consider it, how many things we thought essentials that, after all, are non-essentials; when we can not have them, we find that we still live and can be happy without them.

As wives and mothers we will all do our part to help carry this burden of financial trouble by saving all we can, being cheerful in our homes, encouraging the husband and father with our kind words and helpful acts. Trusting in God from whom all our help comes, we will keep up good hearts and do the best we can.

What She Did.

Christiana Dickson, the wife of one of the first settlers of Erie county, Pennsylvania, was a small, blue-eyed, low-voiced, extremely timid woman, who had a horror of drunkenness.

She lived in days when the use of liquor was universal. But when her sons were born, she resolved to put a stop to drinking in her home.

Her husband being absent, her brothers called for the help of the neighbors, according to custom, to put up a barn needed on her farm. They all assembled and went to work, while she prepared a great dinner. After an hour or two, some drink was asked for. She refused to provide it.

Her brothers, and at last an elder in the church, came to reason with her, to tell her that she would be accused of meanness.

Without a word the little woman went to the barn, and, baring her head, stepped upon a log, and spoke to them:

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Does this mean you?

How many people there are who seem to lack ambition, life and healthful vigor. You can tell it by their looks. They shiver with the cold when the weather is bleak. They have a pinched, sallow appearance. They complain of feeling run down. Their symptoms plainly show that their blood is thin and poor, that it does not circulate properly, and that their liver and kidneys are in a very bad state. That is why they have these miserable symptoms and complain of Stomach troubles,

Constipation,
Nervousness,
General weakness,
Headaches and backaches,
Chilly sensations,
Dizziness,
Despondency.

Are you one of this vast number who suffer from the miserable, wearing feelings above described? If so, why not try to overcome them and get into a good state of health? You can easily do so. All you need to do is to take Warner's Safe Cure regularly, and it will make you strong and well. Take it just for a short time and you will soon notice a change for the better. Every bad symptom will disappear. Your blood will become rich and pure, your circulation improve, and your liver and kidneys will do their work. This great remedy, in short, will put new life and vigor into you. It will make you feel better than you have felt for many a day. Will you not try it?

"My neighbors," said she, "this is a strange thing. Three of you are my neighbors, three of you are elders in the church—all of you are my friends. I have prepared for you the best dinner in my power. If you refuse to raise the barn without liquor, so be it. But I would rather these timbers should rot where they lie than to give you any."

The men angrily went home; the little woman returned to the house, and for hours cried as though her heart would break. But the next day every man came back, went heartily to work, enjoyed her good dinner, and said not a word about the drink.

This led to a discontinuance of the use of drink at barn-raisings in the county. Her sons grew up strong, vigorous men, and did good work in helping to civilize or Christianize the world; their descendants are all of a high type of intellectual and moral men and women. If she had yielded this little point, they might have become, like many of their neighbors, drunkards.—Our Dumb Animals.

BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT—AN AID TO MEMORY.

BY N. D. LIPSCOMB.

Matthew, Mark, Luke and John,
And then the Apostles' Acts come on;
Paul's Epistle to the Romans next,
In which there's many a grand old text.
Corinthians I. and II. you must heed;
Galatians also is fine to read.
Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, all,
Were written by the inspired pen of Paul.
First and Second Thessalonians, too,
Are full of things both good and true.
Also to Timothy, Paul writes twice,
And fills his epistles with good advice.
Titus and Philemon are very short,
But in these many good things are taught.
Hebrews, James, Peter, John and Jude
Furnish us much of spiritual food.
Then, last of all, Revelation is given,
Which tells us much of the beauty of heaven.

Carrollton, Miss., Feb. 9, 1896.

Only One Caterpillar.

While I was walking in the garden one bright morning, a breeze came through and set all the flowers and leaves fluttering. Now that is the way flowers talk; so I pricked up my ears and listened.

Presently an old elder-tree said, "Flowers, shake off your caterpillars."

"Why?" said a dozen altogether—for they were like some children who always say "Why" when they are told to do anything. The elder-tree said, "If you don't, they'll eat you up."

So the flowers set themselves shaking till the caterpillars were shaken off.

In one of the middle beds there was a beautiful rose which shook off all but one; and she said to herself, "Oh! that's a beauty! I'll keep that one."

The elder-tree overheard her, and called out, "One caterpillar is enough to spoil you."

"But," said the rose, "look at his brown and crimson fur, and his beautiful black eyes, and scores of little feet, I want to keep him; surely one won't hurt me."

A few mornings afterwards, I passed the rose again. There was not a leaf on her, her beauty was gone; she was all but killed, and had only life enough to weep over her folly, while the tears stood like dew drops on her tattered leaves.

"Alas! I didn't think one caterpillar would ruin me."

So it often happens that one very little bad habit will, in time, grow so much as to spoil the good characters of boys and girls.

HYGIENE.

Health Habits of Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

If from no higher motive than vanity, I say to all girls in society, sleep. Cosmetics, laces and flowers can not conceal a weary, jaded look, nor a chronic condition of dissatisfaction. I have emphasized this point because most people seem to think that sleep is disreputable, that there is a great virtue in being forever on the watch-tower. This is one doctrine in the gospel of health that I have preached to nervous men and women in all my travels from Maine to Texas.

Occasionally you will meet a crotchety man or woman who has some theory about early rising, and not satisfied to get up themselves to see the sun rise, they will waken a whole household, pulling young children out of their nests, making them cross all day. The insane asylums are full of people whose sweet morning slumbers have been rudely broken by some ignorant theorist. One of the most pitiful sights I recall in my Western travels was a breakfast table surrounded by children under ten years of age, eating bacon and buckwheat cakes by candlelight, the thin, nervous, tired mother during the day utilizing the time she had stolen from sleep in hemming half a dozen yards of ruffling for a pillow-sham. Seeing her continually yawning and stretching, I said, "Why do you not lie down and take a nap?" "Ah," she replied, "I have too much to do to waste an hour in sleeping." Why not dispense with the pillow-shams and refresh the woman in view of her comparative importance in domestic life? is a question anyone of common sense would put to a mother under such circumstances.—Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

Alcohol in Medical Practice.

From the London Lancet is derived a statement of comparative mortality in the London hospitals for 1894. The Temperance Hospital had the smallest death rate of all: 5 6 per cent., against more than double that rate (11 6) in others. Taking the average of all the general hospitals, and excluding the cases where mere temporary relief was afforded, the Temperance Hospital exceeded all in the percentage of cures, as 67 1 to 54 4. Sir B. W. Richardson said that during his connection with the London Temperance Hospital he had treated upwards of 1,000 cases of acute disease, without having recourse to alcohol.

Care of the Human Scalp.

Salt and water is a very good application to the scalp. Its effect is to stimulate the circulation of the part. The reason why the scalp becomes unhealthy is that it is not groomed enough. We know how it is with a horse that is not properly cared for and rubbed often; he becomes unhealthy, and as we say hidebound. This is precisely the condition of the human scalp when it does not have proper care. If it is not curried and groomed it becomes hidebound.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

A choice dessert is made from large well-flavored and rather tart apples. Pare the apples, take out the cores, and put them in a baking pan. Sift over them after they begin to bake enough granulated sugar to coat the outsides. Bake until tender and somewhat brown, but take them from the oven while they are still whole. Put them in a flat and rather deep dish. Chop two dozen blanched almonds fine, and mix with them four ounces of seeded and chopped raisins, and two tablespoonfuls of dried currants. Add to these a half cupful of water, the same quantity of sugar, the grated yellow rind of a lemon, and a dessert-spoon of lemon juice. Simmer half an hour, then boil hard for ten minutes. Fill in the center of the apples with this mixture and pour that which is left over the outside. Serve cold with whipped cream. A mixture of chopped candied fruits may be added to a syrup and used in the same way.—Exchange.

No one can ask honestly or hopefully to be delivered from temptation unless he has himself honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.—Ruskin.

32 DAYS TOUR OF

Mexico

In connection, from St. Louis, with the "Tour of All Mexico" of the American Tourist Association, and including, on the return, the far-famed

MARDI GRAS AT NEW ORLEANS.

The entire tour made in Pullman Private Cars. A journey in which the tourist will be in Mexico and the South twenty-five days, spending but a few hours over six of these days in travel, and those at broken intervals. Hence glorious hours of sight-seeing in "the most unvexed land on our continent, and one of the most attractive on any continent." The excursion leaves Chicago Jan. 20 and St. Louis Jan. 21. Arrangements will be made to transfer tourists from points south of Cairo or Memphis to a connection with this excursion at San Antonio, thus obviating the necessity of their going to Chicago or St. Louis. Rate $276 for all expenses of the round trip. Send for illustrated pamphlet giving all particulars.

Tickets and full information can be had of agents of the Central Route and connecting lines, or by addressing

THOMPSON—On the evening of Dec. 4, Bro. C. T. Thompson, of Bayou Chicot, La., together with his two sons, Leslie Lyles and Percy, were engaged in ginning cotton upon a horse power gin. The father was feeding the gin, Percy was at work in the front room, and Leslie was in the press. Suddenly and without warning flames shot up by the gin stand, and in a flash spread over the entire room. Leslie's only avenue of escape was through that room, and through it, ardly pursued by the unmerciful flames, he rushed. He was gently carried home, and medical aid was summoned. Everything was done for the relief of the sufferer that parental love and medical skill prompted, but their loving and skillful efforts availed not. The cruel flames had done their work, and on the evening of Dec 6, 1895, God did what human skill could not do—relieved him of his suffering. A princely youth who e spotless character defied the closest scrutiny, whose honest face and manly bearing won the admiration of all, and who won his way to all hearts by his gentle and loving disposition, is not, for God saith called him. Fifty hours did he suffer intense pain, and fifty hours did he bear it heroically as mortal ever did. He seemed to know from the first what the result would be; remarked to his father that all was well with him, and then cheerfully bore all for the love he had for One who had suffered for the love He had for him. Brave, manly, heroic youth, had he remained here he would have deserved a crown of gold. As it is, he wears one brighter than the stars.

He was fifteen years one month and twenty-six days old, and on Oct 20, '95, it was this writer's great privilege to receive him into the church of God. Let the memory of him linger sweetly about me till I clasp his hand on the other shore, for I loved him so dearly!

MOSHER—Mrs. Margaret Villa P. Mosher (nee Simmons) was born in West Feliciana parish, La., Oct. 13, 1864. She remained in this State with her parents. On Dec. 14, 1882, she was married to Mr. Luther Palmer, with whom she lived only a short time. On the first day of May, 1883, she was happily married to Mr. B. E. Mosher in Greenville, Miss. She moved with her husband to Texas, and while there she united with the M. E. Church, South, in 1891, and remained a consistent member of the same to the day of her death. She was a devoted wife, a loving, gentle mother, who looked after the spiritual as well as the physical well-being of her loved ones. She felt a concern for them to the end of her stay with them. On one occasion, after service in her sick-room, she was heard to ask several times if Mr. Mosher was in the room, feeling more concern for him than for herself. She had been an invalid for about twelve months before her death. During her illness she was never heard to complain or murmur in the least, but bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. She leaves behind a husband and four children, and many warm friends, to mourn her loss. She fell on sleep Feb. 21, 1896.

Weep not, loved ones, as those who have no hope. Your loss is her eternal gain, and you may meet her where parting is no more.

D. F. GUICK.

RUSS. Mrs. Mary Locke Russ was born near Wilmington, N. C., July 26, 1811, and died in New Orleans, Dec. 11, 1895. She removed with her husband to Louisiana in 1810, residing near Shreveport afterwards at Covington, Port Hudson, then New Orleans, where she became a widow in 1877, and where she spent the remainder of her years, except a few years at Osyka, Miss., with her son, Joseph.

Many years of her life were spent in commendable influence, during which time she dispensed hospitality with charming grace, and made it exceedingly pleasant for all who came within the influence of the home circle, many preachers, some of whom preceded her to the better land, found warm welcome and comfortable resting-places with her family. The valued characters and mental excellence of others as superior to the mere attraction of wealth. She was a life-long Methodist, and when in the enjoyment of health was regular in her attendance at church.

She was ready for the divine summons at any time, her only anxiety being for the little grandson who lived with her, that he might have a few more years at school, and be better prepared to take care of himself; but it pleased the good Lord to take her to Himself, where she is enjoying the happiness of the future life, and a blessed reunion with the loved ones gone before.

E.

RAINS—Mrs. Annie B. Rains (nee Bledsoe) was born in Bossier parish, La., Dec. 25, 1873; joined the M. E. Church, South, in August, 1890; was married to Bro Henry Rains, Jan. 6, 1895, and died Jan. 20, 1896. And thus ended a life full of deeds of kindness and love. I was her pastor for three years, and never knew a more faithful, trusting and loving Christian in all my life. In her home she was a gentle and kind, and filled her home with lightness, peace, and love. Living the life she did, we could but expect her to depart in peace, and so she did. She told those that stood about her weeping not to weep, but to rejoice with her, and spoke of how soon she would be with her little babe that had died only a few days before. The physician that attended her in sickness was struck with the sweet peace that she had in her dying hour, and invited others to come and behold this lovely Christian die.

She leaves a husband and father and mother and one sister and seven brothers, together with a host of relatives and friends, to grieve her departure from this life. We lose her presence, but she gains an eternal home.

J. B. WILLIAMS.

REDDING—Mrs. Amanda Redding (nee Jarrell) was born in Yazoo county, Miss., May 15, 1817, and died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. J. F. Powell, in Yazoo City, Miss., Feb. 21, 1896. She was married to Alexander F. Redding, May 25, 1837, who died in 1847, leaving her with two sons and two daughters, only one of whom, Mrs. J. F. Powell, survives her. She joined the Methodist Church about forty years ago, spending almost the entire period in connection with our church in Yazoo City.

She had wrapped the warm love of many a heart about herself, and left the beautiful touch of her influence on many a life made better by it. I think that when the gates of paradise opened to let her in, many a saint, whose life she had helped and brightened, was there to greet her.

Although so well cared for in her daughter's home and so happy in the love of all in that home, and of many fond neighbors, yet she had for years been home-sick for heaven. I never saw one readier and gladder to go.

She was mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother. To the very last maternal solicitude was manifest in her life. The last sentence she uttered was to her only grandson, a man of influence, clasped in her dying arms, "He a good boy!" While lingering on the verge of heaven she imagined that her two little deceased great-grandchildren were with her. One whole night, in her thought, those angel babies lay on her arm, and as she fondled them, her face wore a look of heavenly happiness.

She lingered long on the border-line of the other land for more than a week. The memory of her is blessed and bountiful.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

KYLE—Vernon Johnson Kyle, youngest son of J. G. and Martha Kyle, departed this life, Feb. 12, 1896. Vernon was born in Lawrence county, Miss., July 28, 1872, and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. C. H. Owen in July, 1889. His last illness was protracted and painful, but he bore it with remarkable fortitude and cheerfulness. During his last hours he gave assurance of a bright prospect for immortal life. An aged mother, a brother, a sister and a large circle of relatives and friends are grieved over his departure. His death was a severe shock to his mother, who is now left alone in her home; and just before his demise he said to her: "Mama, Mama, don't cry; I'm all right."

May God comfort all the sorrowing ones, and help them to be "all right" when they come to die!

JNO. R. COUNTISS.

GRAY—Thomas Bradford Gray, son of R. E. and Mrs. M. R. Gray, was born in Lawrence county, Miss., April 8, 1879; joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. O. L. Savage, July, 1889, and died of hæmaturia, Nov. 2, 1895.

Bradford was a good, consecrated Christian; always a regular attendant at preaching and Sunday school. His custom was to kneel by the bedside at night and pray to the God in whose faithfulness he had learned to trust. Being reared by Christian parents, he never wandered into sin and "sowed wild oats." He was delirious in his last hours, and gave no dying testimony. It was not necessary. His living testimony was sufficient. May God bless the bereaved family, and prepare each of them for an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God!

comes to stay

There is more than one food which will cause the body to increase in weight. A free supply of sugar will do this; so will the starchy foods; cream, and some other fats. But to become fleshy, and yet remain in poor health, is not what you want. Cod-liver oil increases the weight because it is a fat-producing food. But it does far more than this. It alters, or changes, the processes of nutrition, restoring the normal functions of the various organs and tissues.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites, is pure cod liver in a digested condition. So that when a person gains in weight from taking Scott's Emulsion, it is because of two things: First, the oil has acted as a fat-producing food; and, second, it has restored to the body a healthy condition. Such an improvement is permanent; it comes to stay.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We handle this Bible in three styles, as follows: Minion Type, $1.75; Bourgeois Type, $2.45; Emerald Type, $1.25 (The Minion Type is the one we have been offering at $1.65). In order to get any one of these at these rates, it is necessary to pay your subscription a full year in advance, viz., to March, 97. (A little later it will be April, '97.) This offer applies only to those who have not had the benefit of any other premium offer. In such cases write us for special terms.

Notice that there are three sizes—$1.25, $1.75 and $2.45.

THE DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages printed on excellent paper, is finely illustrated, and handsomely and strongly bound in cloth, measuring 9¼x6¼x2 inches.

It contains every name in the Bible and Apochrypa, of which anything can be said. It gives an account of each of the Books of the Bible; it explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs of the Jews, as well as of the various nations mentioned or alluded to in the Scriptures, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves, and worthy of separate publication.

It embraces the results of the most successful and approved Biblical labors and researches, including those of Layard, Rawlinson and others condensed for wide and common use, and constituting an indispensable aid to Ministers, Teachers, Families, Sunday-School Superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

This is undoubtedly the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The publisher's price of the above work is $4.50. We will send it to any address on receipt of price, or we will send it free to any person who will send us two new cash subscribers at the regular rate.

We will also send it free of charge to any subscriber who will pay his own subscription at the regular rate—$2—to January, '98, and also send us one new cash subscriber.

REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF SAINT PAUL.

By the Rev. W. J. CONYBEARE, M. A., Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and the Rev. J. S. Howson, D. D., Principal of the Collegiate Institution, Liverpool.

Contains 1014 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality of paper and is the same in size as Smith's Dictionary of the Bible and bound in uniform style.

It eloquently portrays the early Life, education, conversion, teachings, labors, travels, sufferings, perils, persecutions, and missionary career of St. Paul, thus constituting a Living Picture of the great Apostle himself and of the circumstances by which he was surrounded.

The work also embodies the results of a profound and appreciative study of the true inner life of St. Paul exhibited in his letters which delineate the motives which impelled, and the faith which sustained him in all the troubles and sorrows of his twenty year's conflict, and from which we learn what is told of Paul by Paul himself, and which will continue to live upon the lips and in the hearts of all the faithful until the final consummation of all things.

It is NOT an ABRIDGEMENT but an EXACT RE-PRINT of the greatly improved "People's Edition," prepared with much care and labor, in pursuance of an original plan of both writers, "for a wider circle of readers," and differs from all other editions by the SUBSTITUTION OF ENGLISH for the Greek, Latin and German quotations.

Dr. Howson in his preface to this edition says,—"Those readers have, throughout, been kept in view who, though well educated, would not find it easy to refer to Greek or German books." "The text (he also says) is unaltered, with the exception of a slight verbal change suggested in the course of a thorough re-perusal."

The publisher's price of the above book is $4.50. We will send it free of charge to any person who will send us two new subscribers with the cash—$4.00. We will also send it to any address at the publisher's price.

We will also send it free of charge to any subscriber who will pay his own subscription at the regular rate—$2—to January, '98, and also send us one new cash subscriber.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Gov. Greenhalge, of Massachusetts, died last week.

Another public school has been finished in this city with the city's money, and it is called the Judah P. Benjamin School.

Archbishop Kendrick, one of the oldest prelates of the country—a superannuate of the Catholic Church—died a few days ago, aged ninety years.

The Pere Marquette statue in the Capitol at Washington will have no formal unveiling on account of threats of trouble made by the A. P. A. The statue has to be specially guarded.

It is stated that the South Carolina cotton mills already absorb four-fifths of the State's cotton crop, and that at the present rate of increase, cotton will have to be imported in a few years.

There is now money enough in the treasury of the Grant Monument Association to complete the monument, and it is planned to dedicate the structure on the anniversary of General Grant's birth, April 27, 1897.

Belva A. Lockwood, it appears, had the law on her side in her little controversy with the pension bureau about a certain $25, for taking which, it was said, she could be debarred. She made an appeal and won the case.

The relations of the President with Congress are becoming more and more strained. The fact that he takes a different view of the Cuban question from the majority of the legislative body, and is not likely to be guided in his action by the opinions set forth in the resolutions, has intensified this feeling.

The rumor to the effect that President Cleveland proposes to ignore the resolutions of Congress recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans and threatening intervention in the event that the war is not speedily ended, although apparently based upon nothing more tangible than idle gossip, has put the nitro jingoes in Congress in a fever of excitement.

Sunday's programme of the W. C. T. U. Convention, at Monroe, La., was a decided success. The annual sermon was delivered by Mrs. Mary McGee Snell. At the evening exercises Miss Frances E. Willard delivered an address on social purity to an audience of 1,500 people. At night Miss Willard, Mesdames Pharr, Snell, and Goodale delivered addresses to the colored people.

The inaugural step made by Ballington Booth, the deposed commander of the Salvation Army in America, in a rival organization on lines similar to the one from whose command he has been relieved, met with success in New York City on March 8. Among other things Ballington Booth said: "Whatever be the mission we undertake, it will bear the right stamp and will be directed in the right direction."

The House Committee on Elections, on March 7, decided to report that the last congressional election in the Fifth Louisiana district was null and void on account of fraud and intimidation. The member for that district is Charles Boatner, a Democrat. The decision of the committee, if sustained by the House, will have the effect of unseating Boatner without seating the contestant, Alex Benoit, a populist, and will create a vacancy from that district. The vote in committee was strictly on party lines.

FOREIGN.

About one thousand people were arrested in Constantinople the other day on suspicion of having designs against the Sultan, while he was going to kiss the prophet's mantle.

The British Blue Book on the Venezuelan boundary dispute was laid on the table of the House of Commons on March 6. Thirteen reasons sustaining England's position are given.

It is said that the rebels in Nicaragua have given up their cause. President Zelaya is determined that the only terms of peace he will give are that the revolutionists shall pay all the expenses of the war preparations, shall give up their arms, and that their leaders shall be tried by court martial.

The disorders which were prevalent in Spain when the news was first received of the action of the United States Senate on the Cuban question broke out afresh on March 5, and there were renewed demonstrations of hostility to the United States. A mob attacked the United States consulate at Valencia. The windows of the building were smashed by the infuriated populace.

In consequence of the distribution in Cuba of a circular containing General Weyler's proclamation requiring the concentration of all country people within the limits of the towns for protection, there have been many delegations of farmers coming to Santiago de Cuba to inquire of the military authorities how far the requirements applies to them and for an interpretation of its provisions.

The excitement throughout Italy caused by the defeat of General Baratieri at Adowa, on Sunday last by the Abyssinians, with the loss of from 5,000 to 10,000 men, killed and wounded, according to generally credited reports, shows little sign of abatement. The first result of the disaster will be a change of ministry. The Crispi Cabinet has already resigned, and their resignations have been accepted by King Humbert. It is understood that Marquis Di Rudini, the leader of the Italian conservative groups, will be asked to form a coalition ministry.

In answering advertisements please mention the ADVOCATE

Holman Bible at $1.25.

By buying in wholesale quantities we are able to make the following reduction in our Emerald-type Holman Bible. This Bible we have sold heretofore at $1 50. We now offer it at $1.25 to those who pay their subscription a full year in advance—that is, to March, '97. We do not advise any person who has passed the meridian of life to get this Bible, on account of the smallness of the print. For young persons, however, it will answer as well as the more expensive styles. It has all the helps of the larger sizes. Address

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHRIST IN TEMPTATION. THE FIRST TEMPTATION.

(Matt. iv, 2-4; Gal. v, 19-21.)

Christ was in all points tempted like as we are. For our edification only this and two others are prominently mentioned.

1. Christ was a hungered.

(1) Why he fasted forty days will always remain a mystery. He thus initiated his priesthood.

(2) His hunger was real. Though very God, his body was truly physical.

(3) Be grateful to God for your daily bread. Have enough and to spare.

(4) When the hungry beg for alms at your door do not fail to supply their want.

2. Christ being hungry, Satan tempted him to miraculously convert stones into bread.

(1) Compliance would have been sinful presumption. Having voluntarily abstained from food, he must seek at no other than the ordinary channel for a supply.

(2) To have wrought miracles for selfish ends would have been sinful. He employed them solely for initiation and confirmation of faith in his divinity. Here his only witness would have been Satan.

3. Christ resists Satan's tempting suggestion, assuring that spiritual food is chiefly important. That with an abundance of physical food, men may be spiritually starving.

(1) The Word of God, divine revelation, is a necessary faith-food. It must be intelligently heard and considered.

(2) Christ is centre and circumference of divine revelation. "The word was with God." As all roads led to Rome, so all the contents of the Bible lead to Christ.

(3) He says of himself, that his flesh is meat indeed, and his blood is drink indeed. Partaking thereof by faith secures eternal life.

(4) Feed upon Christ day by day. Not only in conversion. Also subsequently every day. As our Sunday meal will not nourish the body during the week, nourishment being required daily, so will the partaking of Christ one day not sustain spiritual life. Christ must be partaken of regularly every day.

A number one cough cure. Mr. Jas. H. Bernet, 213 Cedar St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes June: "I am using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family and deem it a number one medicine for coughs and colds, and my house shall never be without it."

The most frequent impediment to men's turning their minds inward upon themselves is that they are afraid of what they shall find there.—J. T. Coleridge.

Taken in Time

Hood's Sarsaparilla has achieved great success in warding off sickness which, if allowed to progress, would have undermined the whole system and given disease a strong foothold to cause much suffering and even threaten death. Hood's Sarsaparilla has done all this and even more. It has been taken in thousands of cases which were thought to be incurable, and after a fair trial has effected wonderful cures, bringing health, strength and joy to the afflicted. Another important point about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that its cures are permanent, because they start from the solid foundation of purified, vitalized and enriched blood. But it is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

VOL. 43.—NO. 12. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1896. WHOLE NO. 2065

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

A TRUE FRIEND.

The friend who holds a mirror to my face,
And hiding none, is not afraid to trace
My faults, my smallest blemishes, within;
Who friendly warns, reproves me if I sin—
Although it seems not so—he is my friend.

But he who, ever flattering, gives me praise,
Who ne'er rebukes, nor censures, nor delays
To come with eagerness and grasp my hand,
And pardon me, ere pardon I demand,
He is my enemy, although he seem my friend.

The Aim and Policy of the Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South.

Being by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, constituted a Board of Education to further the great cause of Christian education among our people, to which from our beginning, as a church, we have been committed, we make the following declaration of aim and policy:

In discharging the duty of supervising and giving direction, so far as its power extends, to the great work of education by our church, it will be the aim of this Board, (1) to promote the endowment of existing colleges which have the elements of success and the necessary conditions of usefulness; (2) to repress the tendency to multiply institutions with inadequate prospects of support which has strewed our territory with more dead colleges than we have now in operation, and dragged to the dust with them the credit of indorsing Conferences; (3) to encourage the establishment of academies, which are especially demanded by present educational conditions, and are easily within the reach of our means: these should be placed in close correlation with such institutions of our church as the Annual Conferences may direct; (4) to complete our system by correlating as rapidly as possible our Conference colleges with the graduate and professional departments of Vanderbilt University.

To carry out these purposes, we propose (1) to bring into co-operation with the General Board, the Conference Boards of Education as already provided by law, and for the more perfect organization of the educational work in the several Conferences, we ask that each Conference appoint a secretary of education, and we commend to the careful consideration of the several Conferences the plan which has been put into operation in the Virginia, Baltimore, North Carolina, Western North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, and perhaps other Conferences; (2) to secure full and accurate statistics of our educational work so far as possible, and to deliver addresses, prepare and print pamphlets, tracts, and articles on the subject of Christian education and the condition and needs of our work; (3) to urge upon our Annual Conferences to make such assessments for the educational work in their respective bounds under the law of the church as indicated in the Discipline, paragraph 410, as shall be adequate to maintain them upon a plan worthy of the confidence of the public and patronage of our church; (4) to invite and seek contributions of money for the following purposes: (a) To aid, to such extent as may be necessary, young men properly certified, to secure a sufficient training for the work of the ministry of our church—this chiefly in our weaker Conferences. (b) To assist colleges already founded to a solid position and adequate facilities, by offering contributions from the Board, on condition that their immediate friends and supporters shall do what is necessary to assure the proposed result. No money will be appropriated merely to maintain institutions as they are. (c) To place the two institutions for colored people, which are under our care, upon a firm and satisfactory footing. For this purpose we now ask specifically for $50,000 as a special gift from those who realize our duty to this people and this opportunity to do something to discharge it.

While asking for these special contributions, we earnestly appeal to the church to pay the full assessment for the maintenance of Paine and Lane Institute, and also for the payment of the assessment of $10,000, as provided in the Discipline, for the work of the Board.

To the patrons of learning, and especially to those who believe that the principles of Christ underlie all true, and [illegible] and solvio progress, we appeal.

We were called into being by the act of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and are incorporated under the laws of the State of Tennessee. We represent a large and progressive church—of liberal views and wide sympathies, having the confidence of the people of the South, and the ability to direct a great stream of patronage to institutions worthy of it. We can apply to advantage the large contributions of the wealthy and the smaller gifts of the poor. The latter will ultimately suffice, we believe, to secure an educated man in every pulpit in Southern Methodism. The great gifts of those to whom God has entrusted his gold and silver can be made to arouse dormant energies which will raise to positions of commanding power and influence institutions whose histories have endeared them to the people. We offer ourselves as the dispensers of educational benefactions. We can add: (1) the confidence of the people; (2) the patronage and support of a growing church, now numbering one million four hundred thousand members; (3) the power of organized effort; (4) the permanence of a corporation that can not die; (5) the assurance of honest and faithful administration.

So long as the church lives to carry on the work committed to it by the Master, so long will gifts to Christian institutions of learning continue to do their ennobling work for mankind.

Rev. T. B Hargrove.

Rev. T. B. Hargrove, of the North Mississippi Conference, and pastor of the church at Hernando and Coldwater, died suddenly in his pulpit at Coldwater on the morning of Sunday, Jan. 26, 1896. He was born in Lowndes county, Miss., Feb. 4, 1849. His childhood and youth were favored with superior advantages, tending to social and mental culture of a high order. He was a graduate of the State University at Oxford. In hopeful young manhood he was happily married to Miss Mary Lipscomb, daughter of Dr. W. L Lipscomb, of Columbus, Miss. He was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference, in session at Starkville, in the year 1888; ordained deacon by Bishop Galloway, at Grenada, in 1890; and elder by Bishop Granbery, at Corinth, in 1892. His first appointment was Pleasant Grove circuit, which he served with great acceptability for one year, after which he was appointed to Greenwood station, which he served faithfully for three years, and was thence removed to Sardis and Davis Chapel, where also he remained three years. At the late session of his Conference he was appointed to the pastoral charge of Hernando and Coldwater. In all these charges he made proof of his high calling, and left upon them the impress of a faithful minister of the Lord Jesus, and of a devoted pastor. He loved his people, and his people loved him.

Bro. Hargrove brought with him into the work of the ministry a consecrated life, a cultivated mind, an unflagging energy, a steady, burning zeal, and a loving spirit. All these he placed as a living sacrifice upon the altar of God's service. He was a high-toned Christian gentleman, an earnest servant of Christ and of the church, a sympathizing friend, a tender shepherd of the flock, and a good preacher. With a kind word for everyone, of affable manners and pleasant address, he made many friends wherever he labored. He was, however, a man of decided opinions and strong convictions, and was ever ready, when occasion required, to give expression to the same. With such endowments of mind and heart and character, it is not wonderful that his ministry was successful, and his labors crowned with abundant fruit. Although he had been in the itinerant ranks but little over eight years, yet he had taken position as one of the influential members of the Conference.

His wife was a helpmeet worthy of her husband's high vocation. Possessed of rare gifts and graces, she entered heartily with him into the work of the Lord's vineyard, and was eminently successful in the Sunday-school, the Epworth League, juvenile, and woman's work. Bro. Hargrove and his faithful companion and co-worker went to his last field of labor with high purpose, and their best energies consecrated to the service of God and the church. Already had they won their way to the affections of the people of Hernando and Coldwater, and the future before them was full of hope and promise, when he was called so suddenly from the scene of his loved employment to his reward above.

On the morning of his death he went into the church at Coldwater, and addressed himself to the work of the sanctuary, to his congregation, apparently in his usual health. His text was taken from the triumphant words of St. Paul in II. Tim. iv, 7, "I have kept the faith." He read, however, in connection, the entire verse or passage. He spoke, first, of different kinds of faith, and then of the faith of the apostle in the text. He had been preaching about twenty minutes when he seemed to have difficulty in giving utterance to some thought or expression. Making a second effort, he said, "Have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ." Having spoken these, his last words, there was a movement or so, and an exclamation, indicative of bodily distress. He then turned as if to reach his chair, and sank beside it in the pulpit. In a moment friends were at his side. But the spirit had fled; the faithful, loving pastor was dead!

The distress occasioned by his death was intensified by the absence of his devoted wife, who was at Oxford ministering by the side of a sick sister-in-law, since deceased. His only son was pursuing his studies at Millsaps College. None of his family, save an only daughter, the gentle Talinlah, were present to shed upon his manly brow the tears of an inexpressible sorrow.

Visiting his people the next day, I found them as an household orphaned and chastened, as a flock bewildered and without a shepherd. "I am glad you have come; we need comfort," was the sad greeting of a devout sister.

In the midst of his days, at life's high noon, a brother beloved has been called away from us; called from abundant labors on earth to his heavenly reward. He left no token for his brethren; spoke no last words of testimony; but his record is on high. A good soldier of Christ, he died with his armor on in the forefront of the battle.

"His body, together with his charge, laid down
And ceased at once to work and live."

Some other pen will, doubtless, write of his funeral services at Columbus, whither his body was conveyed for burial. As a simple flower upon his grave, this humble tribute by his presiding elder is offered to the memory and worth of our ascended brother.

In the Living Present.

Russia recommends that Turkey expel from Armenia all Protestant missionaries. That they are the chief political agitators. Only English influence can prevent said expulsion. Protestant Churches should pray for England's dominancy.

The Jesuitic editors and reporters of many of our papers made it appear that the recent Italian defeat in Abyssinia would almost destroy that government. The wish was father of the thought, for nothing of the kind is true. The Dreibund is not impaired. The war against Menelik of Abyssinia will be continued. France and Russia may oppose, but England supports Italy.

Not only Roman Catholicism, but also alcoholism, is rampant in Belgium. Monasteries, nunneries and groggeries abound. In Brussels, Antwerp, etc., there is one bar-room to every thirty inhabitants. The consumption of alcohol is fabulous. The average for each person, children and women included, is three-fourths of a gallon per week.

Dr. A. T. Pierson, the noted evangelist, has been submersed, and joined the Baptist Church. He was originally a Presbyterian, then a Congregationalist, and now—the papers intimate that joining the Baptist Church was necessary, permanently, to secure C. H. Spurgeon's pulpit. The Christian Pictorial, a London Baptist periodical, ridicules the transfer. Intimates that Dr. Pierson is in the wake of Dr. Brownson, who was Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Unitarian, and now a priest in the Roman Catholic Church.

Henry C. Bowen, proprietor and chief editor of the New York Independent, who recently died at the ripe age of eighty-two years, was a man of indomitable energy, industry, enterprise. He had the good sense, like Emperor William I., where his own ability failed, to supply that necessary talent. The Independent is a power in the land. Its information on ecclesiasticism is usually vast and no less accurate. His death, we presume, will not interfere with the continued publication of the Independent.

Everywhere the offspring of the farmers abandon rural avocations and crowd our cities. Here they frequently fall a prey to want and crime. Specially in France the decrease of the farming population has been marked. The decrease amounted to ten per cent. during the last decade. Make farm life more attractive.

It is humiliating that in matters of illiteracy Louisiana stands lowest among the forty two States of our Union. The census indicates that forty five per cent. of our population are analphabetes. South Carolina is our next neighbor; then follow Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia. Texas ranks well with Eastern States. No, not all the illiterates are negroes. It is high time that something energetical be done in this matter.

Texas Notes.

The ADVOCATE, for some time, has been the scene of much controversy. The brethren in the patronizing Conferences have been handling the sword—not always of the Spirit—with much vigor, and the end is not yet. That woman question seems to be hard to settle with the pen; yet the woman, according to her announcements in your columns, is forging right ahead with her work. Well, out here in Texas we just let the good women alone. If God can use them in a womanly way to forward the cause of the Master, we bid them a God-speed. I have never known a really godly woman to do any harm, but I have known them to do a great deal of good. Bad women, like bad men, are doing the mischief in these parts. But where the good souls sing and talk and pray and lead the unsaved to Christ, we do not bother them. Then, too, the second blessing and the evangelist question has been prominent in your columns. It seems to be a real live issue in your section. The brethren have been handling it also with a right smart of the sword. Well, we, too, have a little of that vexatious business out here, but not enough to make serious trouble. There are not many of the second-blessing people in the Texas Conferences, and the most of them are really religious, and are in earnest about their work. Some of them, like a great many who do not profess the doctrine, have much zeal with but little knowledge, and they are indiscreet. So far as that question does any hurt among us, it comes from this source. But even under such circumstances a good deal of the harm comes from our method of dealing with them. Harshness and severity will rarely ever check the mistakes of those with whom we deal. I am not a second-blessingist, but I am trying to be a Christian man to the fullest extent possible, and in all things I am trying to do unto others as I would have them do unto me. If some of these brethren are a little fanatical, the best way to cure them is to let them alone, and by and by they will swing back into about their proper adjustment. Oppression never cures a fault. The most of our trouble out here is from men who are away from God, and who hate law and order. I am not much afraid of people who love God and are trying to do right, even if they are a little extreme; but I do dread those who are the avowed enemies of the Master, and whose lives are given over to debauchery and death. Our effort is to bring them over to righteousness and faith in Christ. When we finish up this job we will not have much time to fight one another; hence I believe in a gospel of peace in the ranks of the Lord, and a gospel of relentless war against sin in all of its forms.

Our work in Texas is progressive and promising. In round numbers we have about two hundred thousand members, and they constitute an organized force of wonderful influence upon the moral sentiment of the State at large. Our church had much to do in molding the public opinion which has made legal prize fighting a thing of the past in this commonwealth. We are in the forefront of every good word and work. Our Christian Advocate, under the management of Rev. Thos. R. Pierce, is potent for good. It handles all questions affecting the public weal, and it does so with strength and wisdom. Our Epworth League work is booming from one end of the State to the other. The State Conference of the League will meet the fifteenth of next month in San Antonio, and it will be tremendous. You ought to just run over and look in on us if you want an adequate idea of what one of these gatherings is. Last year we had three thousand, and the one approaching they say will be even larger. This department of work is having a fine influence upon our young people. All of the pastors throughout all of our Conferences take a great deal of interest in the League.

My work in Houston is in good shape. We have some seven hundred members, an elegant edifice, and a fine field. We pay $1,400 a year to the cause of missions, and meet all of the other claims apportioned to us by the Conference. This is my fourth and last year, and my successor will find an inviting place for service next Fall. I am devoted to the work in this State, and, so far as I have a voice, I shall spend the rest of my days within its borders.

In the city of Galveston, near by, our work is not so prosperous as in former years. Somehow or other the odds have been against us down there. In the days gone by we had one of the strongest congregations in the connection, but we are rather weak now. In all of the other cities in the State we are among the most active, except in Galveston. But we have some faithful men there, and this year they are more encouraged. In this city we have some fifteen hundred members and five churches, and steadily growing. But I have already taxed your columns sufficiently.

G. O. RANKIN.

Houston, Texas.

The W. P. and H. M Society.

The fiscal year of the W. P. and H. M. Society is just about to close, and a brief resume of its condition and needs should, as usual, be made to its members and the church at large. Although the General Conference enlarged the society's commission so as to include home missions, the donations and loans to parsonage building have increased both in amount and promptness of payment.

The society has five distinct and important school enterprises, which have been carried forward as rapidly as funds would permit. The Holston Industrial School at Greenville, Tenn., occupying a large and fine property, is rapidly being put in readiness to open its doors to the orphan and the ignorant classes in the mountains of Eastern Tennessee and Virginia. The buildings of the Sue Bennett Industrial School at London, Ky., are being erected, and when completed many district school teachers will receive instruction within their sacred walls. The Brevard School is unostentatiously performing its mission of love for the mountain children of Western North Carolina. The new school-building at Tampa, though not fully completed, is being occupied for school purposes. Two schools, with six teachers, are successfully laboring for the Cuban children at Ybor and Cuba City, east and west suburbs of Tampa.

City mission work is maintained in St. Louis, Dallas, Houston, Nashville, Atlanta, Chattanooga, New Orleans and other places through our local societies. In some they supply city missionaries; in others the maintenance of industrial and day-schools, or rescue work for fallen women.

Our Supply Department is becoming a well systematized and efficient power for good in destitute appointments of the church. But each department of our work calls for more funds. We need about $5,000 before the annual meeting. Applications for aid in parsonage building await decision at the meeting next month. Shall our brethren live in sheds, dugouts, tents, exposed to the elements, without suitable apparel and in pinching poverty? Shall the 2,600,000 ignorant, immoral mountain people within the territory of Southern Methodism fail to receive our help because we can not establish and equip our mountain schools? Shall the 20,000 Cubans of Florida be denied the Bread of Life? Does not the heart of the church beat in responsive sympathy, and will not our entire membership aid us in meeting our obligations? So pressing are our needs that, as a Central Committee, we are constrained to publish this statement.

Selections.

It is a curious commentary upon modern diplomacy that while the great powers of Christendom are lying still, each glowering at all the rest, and each doing nothing to restrain the bloodthirsty Turk from exterminating the inhabitants of Turkish Armenia, two American women should be carrying on in that desolated district a campaign of peace, of love and for Christianity. Dr. Grace Kimball, an American medical missionary, and one of the chief agents of the Armenian Relief Association, in the interior of that ancient kingdom, and Miss Clara Barton, the President of the Red Cross Society of the United States, at Stamboul, are managing an army of, which bankers, consuls, consular agents, missionaries, merchants and colporters are the rank and file; an army whose mission is to undo what the Turk has done, to save from privation and death the population of an entire nation. These two noble women have lieutenants and subordinates of their own sex. Like soldiers they go with their lives in their hands, and are ready and prepared to give up even these for the cause which they represent and embody. It is a heroism of which the Christian world may well be proud, a self-sacrifice which every American should look upon with reverence.—New York Sun.

One effect of the inadequate support of the ministry is the discouragement of young men brought up in comfortable homes, when they think of the ministry as their life-work. It would be easy to establish and illustrate this statement, if necessary. It would be easy also to furnish statistics contrasting the salaries of men with little education, ordinary character, and liberty to "live as they list," with the fluctuating incomes of thousands of educated, high-toned, hard-working occupants of pulpits over our land. Christian readers! if you care for the credit of our national Constitution, for the strength of the Church of Christ, the greatest elevating and purifying power in our land, and for the glory of the Master, consider and demonstrate what is due to his servants cut off from other modes of raising means, and pledged to lay out all their strength for the abiding good of their fellow men.—Dr. John Hall, in Presbyterian Banner.

Mr. Gladstone says that "for the last hundred years the Scriptures resemble a beleaguered town with the shouts of foemen and the war of artillery around its walls; but notwithstanding this, wherever religion has life, the Bible has lost none of its power." It is easy to overthrow the faith of those who prefer darkness to light, those who desire and intend to live an immoral life, whose moral career the Bible condemns. But you can not overthrow a belief that the Bible is a revelation from God in the soul of one whose morality has been vitalized and made alive; one who hungers and thirsts of righteousness. To him it brings a heavenly light. There is no mistaking it. To him the voice of God is in these revelations. He knows whom he has believed. Wherever religion is alive in the soul, then faith is indestructible. All the critics and agnostics and skeptics in the world will fail to destroy the faith of one who has tasted and seen that the religion of the Bible is good. A light above the brightness of the sunshines into his eyes, and it is useless to argue against it. A critic, or agnostic, or skeptic, or altogether, would have undertaken a large contract to have made an unbeliever of Abraham or Moses, or David or Paul, or Peter or John.—Mid-Continent.

What constitutes success in the ministry? The number added to the church within a given time? Not necessarily. It is not the amount of material that is taken up to the scaffolding, but what is built into the wall and proves it quality by its durability.—United Presbyterian.

DO SOMETHING.

Honest work brings health and joy,
But idleness is sin;
For every hour find some employ,
From time some blessing win.

The thorns from some one's path remove;
Make some one's sky more clear;
Let some one feel the joy of love,
The blessing of good cheer.

The time of labor soon is o'er,
The sun sinks in the west;
The cotter seeks his open door;
His toil has earned him rest.

So at the close of every day
May you look back and find
The duties in your path that lay
Performed with willing mind.
